The New Hardman Five-Foot Grand will be Presented and Demonstrated
In a Series of Introductory Days beginning Monday, Nov. 2nd.

THE perfection of this exquisite instrument is the culmination of a public desire that has existed for many years.
The true musician is satisfied with nothing less than the Grand Piano, and the modern city home finds the usual Grand Piano practically impossible of accommodation; hence the almost universal vogue of the Upright.

New York, April 13th, 1914.
Messrs. Hardman, Peck & Company,
#433 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.
Dear Mr. Peck:-
The five foot Hardman Grand which you have sent for my use to my apartment is certainly a beautiful piano. I was surprised how your factory was able to produce such a wonderful tone in such a small Grand.
Accept my congratulations for your success
Sincerely
Enrico Caruso

Many years of the greatest success in manufacturing the regular patterns of Hardman Grand Pianos have spurred our experts in the experiment to produce a piano that would deserve the name—Hardman Small Grand.

To be merely small in size was to destroy the musical value of the instrument, and we have never been tempted to produce such an instrument.

But during the past year the efforts of our experts have been rewarded by an achievement of which we are justly proud, and an instrument which, while being only 5 feet 2 inches in length, has secured the enthusiastic approval and admiration of some of the world's greatest musicians, including Enrico Caruso, the world renowned tenor, whose letter is reproduced on this page.

This New Hardman Five-Foot Grand will superbly respond to the most critical musical tests.

It has power and fulness of tone never heretofore equalled in a piano of such small size. It has a sweetness and responsiveness, a liquid purity and resonance, that seem to belong to an instrument of much greater dimensions.

The Five-Foot Grand is exquisite in its lines, superbly finished, and requires no more space in a room than an upright.

Price $650

During these introductory days we invite you to visit our Warerooms on Fifth Avenue, or in Brooklyn, at your convenience and hear the instrument demonstrated. Of course your visit will place you under no obligation to buy.

Convenient Terms of Payment.
You may pay us a deposit on the purchase price of any of our instruments and we will deliver it to you immediately—then you may complete your payments in small weekly or monthly instalments, just as you wish. Liberal allowance for old pianos taken in exchange. Write for handsomely illustrated catalogue.

Second Thoughts on First Nights

On Some Acting Editions of That Favorite Author, Mr. Charles Dickens.

So attractively does "The Highway of Life" reproduce on the stage of Wallack's Theatre the atmosphere of "David Copperfield," that one may be sorry Mr. Parker did not confine his "dramatick version" to that alone, instead of burdening himself further with the dismaying task of fitting into the theatre some of the first and entirely separate threads of that narrative which satisfied Dickens's earlier notions of plot.

Though all of the Dickens novels have been dramatized—some of them time and time again—only two really lend themselves to the theatre, "A Tale of Two Cities" and his most perfect story, "Great Expectations." It is recorded that he sent the proofs of the former to Regnier at the Théâtre Français in the hope and belief that it might appeal as the basis of a French play. He confesses to having written the latter not only with a view to its "possible usefulness" in the theatre, but with certain players actually in mind for the convict and the blacksmith. It is known that the late Robertson Taylor had among his favorite ideas a stage version of "Great Expectations," and that the late W. S. Gilbert went so far as to attempt a dramatization.

Both, to note the obvious dramatic appeal of these two novels, and the fact that the novelist himself liked to think of them in terms of the theatre, is not to say that even they are all in readiness for the dramatist, although they present nothing like the difficulties which beset the playwright who tries to divert to the stage some portion of that tremendous stream of Dickens's earlier genius.

Indeed, your Dickens adapter who turns to "David Copperfield" or "Pickwick Papers" is not unlike one who dredges up a panful of water and comes triumphantly from the shore, saying: "Behold my version of the Atlantic." It is salty, of course, and cleansing. But where is the glint of the sunlight? And where is the boom of the surf?

To state the obvious truth, the romantic and melodramatic elements in Dickens are the least of him, the parts in which he was far surpassed by some of his contemporaries, the common matter of his alley, which we who read today pass over indifferently in our search for the abundant gold, but which the ruthless dramatist, who will insist on preserving the plots, must not only recall, but emphasize.

The futility of laboring to preserve even the outlines of these ungainly, rambling structures in the transfer to the stage is best pointed by the realization that those in the audience at Wallack's, who carry the book in their hearts do not need the reproduction of the narrative, while to those poor, sundered souls who know not David, "The Highway of Life" must seem a hopelessly confused jumble of but half-related incidents.

The Liebler production will reward a visit from every Dickens lover from these boroughs and points beyond, but one is still permitted to suggest that he who made a fascinating entertainment out of an extremely atmosphere which he called "Pomander Walk," and which would have won him a license to dramatize Jane Austen, did not give Charles Dickens that perfection of discreet service which he, of all contemporary dramatists, seemed peculiarly fitted to render.

Why would it not be better to write four one-act plays out of "David Copperfield" and let it go at that? One might be a scene in the Yarmouth boathouse, culminating, perhaps, in the flight of Little Em'ly. One might be just a sketch of the Micawbers dining with Trotwood in Adelphi. There could be a one-act play on the thumb of Uriah Heep. Each of these should be a study in itself, each introducing the dear Dickens folk and crammed with the Dickens atmosphere, each entirely unconcerned with and untroubled by the loose threads of all the others. And this would make it simple to introduce a playlet on the adoption of David by his formidable aunt, showing his arrival, tear-stained and bedraggled, the consultations with Mr. Dick, the period of uncertainty as to Miss Betsey's programme, and finally the glorious confounding of the Murdstones. This would not only make use of one of the most appropriate scenes in the whole book, but would serve to introduce the frightened little chap who was far more real to Dickens and is far more real to all of us than that colorless fellow who wooed and won Agnes Wickfield.

Of course Mr. Parker's is by no means the first dramatization of "David Copperfield." It was on the stage the same year the novel was completed. Their appetites whetted by the success of "Oliver Twist" and "Martin Chuzzlewit" in play form, the managers of those days were waiting hungrily for David. January of 1851 saw three distinct versions on the boards in this city at one time.

Lennox Pawle's Micawber has had some great forerunners. Scores of Little Em'lys have deserted as many Hams. It is so with most of the novels. Indeed, the name of Charles Dickens is part of the history of nearly every playhouse that was open for business in England and America in his own day. The characters of his imagination were embodied by nearly all the actors and actresses of our tongue who were favorites during and long after the years when, installment by installment, his novels were being given to the world.

Irving alone played Bill Sykes, Nicholas Nickleby, Mantalini, David Copperfield, Mr. Dombey, and Tackleton. He was also successful—very—as Alfred Jingle, Esq. Those theatregoers whose memories stretch well back into the nineteenth century cherish portraits possibly of Charlotte Cushman as Nancy Sykes and as Fanny Squeers, and certainly of W. J. Florence as Capt. Cuttle, Mme. Janauschek as Lady Dedlock, (and Hortense,) Wallack as Fagin, Lotta as Little Nell and the Marchioness, and Jefferson as Caleb Plummer.

No really complete history of Dickens and the stage has ever been written. However concise and compressed, such an account would fill a huge volume. And, like "The Highway of Life," that volume would testify at every point to two things, the immense temptation and the immense difficulty Dickens presents to the dramatist. Altered titles bear repeated witness to the fact that none felt equal to putting all of any book on the stage. It is easy to recognize "The Golden Dustman" as a stage version (probably a bad one) of "Our Mutual Friend." But who could have caught "A Tale of Two Cities" under the title "The Only Way," and who would have guessed at sight that "Heart's Delight" was a dramatization of "Dombey and Son"? "The Highway of Life" is not the only title that bows to the immensity of "David Copperfield." There have been "Ham," "Little Em'ly," "Em'ly," and "Micawber"—all candid names for portions of the story. But only a few would catch the reference in "Born With a Caul," there is the mystifying record of a Copperfield play called "The Deal Boatman," and "The Highway of Life" is no more vague a title than "What Women Will Do," which, so says the record, was actually given somewhere in this country without implicating Dickens in the announcement. This version, by the way, must mark the high tide of freedom in adaptation, for the adapter presented it as "a hailstone of sensation," and one of the scenes was carelessly mislaid in Em'ly's apartment in Paris.

But like the record of Nelly Farren appearing as Sam Weller, and that of a Copperfield cast in which one actor doubled up as Uriah Heep and Miss Mowcher, (an incredible contortion), this last is just one of the freak footnotes in that voluminous and interesting history of which the latest chapter has just been written behind the footlights at Wallack's Theatre.

FRENCH DRAMA OPENING.

Season to Commence at Century Lyceum Nov. 16.

Nov. 16 has been fixed for the opening of the French Drama Society at the Century Lyceum. The object of the French Drama Society, now fairly well known, is not merely to produce the most interesting of the modern French dramas in New York for the benefit of the theatregoing public, but also includes an educational purpose which has been recognized by many of the schools, which have arranged to send their pupils to the Friday matinées which the society will give. At these matinées the plays will be of a more literary character and each play will be preceded by a lecture, which will not interpret the play but will deal intelligently with its literary and historical characteristics.

The organization of this year's programme has exacted a tremendous amount of work on the part of Lucien L. Bonheur, who was able to spend several weeks in Paris engaging artists of well-established position. The existence of the French Theatre will, in fact, very materially help out those Parisian artists who have suffered because of the war.

Mrs. Campbell to Move.

Next week, beginning Nov. 9, Mrs. Patrick Campbell and her English company will be transferred to the Liberty Theatre. This change has been made necessary owing to the fact that the Liebler Company had already planned last Summer to make their production of The Garden of Paradise about Nov. 15, and the stage of the Park Theatre has been arranged for the mechanical advantages of this play.

German Irving Place Theatre.

"Lieb Vaterland" commences its second week at the Irving Place Theatre. The play was written by Max Simon and depicts Germany's present struggle in arms.

Jardin de Danse.

Monday evening will mark the reappearance of Rosika Dolly at the Jardin de Danse. Miss Dolly, who has recently scored successfully in vaudeville, will present with her partner, Martin Brown, a series of original dances.

THE FIRST NIGHT CALENDAR.

"MARY GOES FIRST," a comedy in three acts by Henry Arthur Jones. With Marie Tempest. At the Comedy Theatre Monday night.

"OUTCAST," a play in three acts by Hubert Henry Davies. With Elsie Ferguson. At the Lyceum Theatre Monday night.

"PAPA'S DARLING," a musical comedy by Ivan Caryll and Harry B. Smith, from the French. At the New Amsterdam Theatre Monday night.

"THE ONLY GIRL," a musical comedy by Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert. At the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre Monday night.

"SUZI," a musical comedy adapted from the Hungarian by Otto Hauerbach, with music by Aladar Renyi. At the Casino Theatre Tuesday night.

"THAT SORT," a drama in three acts by Basil Hastings. With Mme. Nazimova. At the Harris Theatre Friday night.

THE theatrical producers plan to be anything but kind to the first nighters during the coming week, for of six new plays which will come into the local theatres, four will be presented tomorrow night. Of these four two will be dramas, while the other two will be of the musical variety.

Marie Tempest, who is said to be making her farewell appearance in America, a statement which must be taken with a grain of salt, as in the case of most farewell announcements, comes into the Comedy Theatre tomorrow night in "Mary Goes First," a comedy by Henry Arthur Jones. Later Miss Tempest is to present several other plays never seen in America, and possibly some of her older ones.

The story of "Mary Goes First" concerns the struggle for social precedence of two Englishwomen living in the provincial city of Warkinstall. Much hangs upon the settlement of the two burning questions, "Who goes in first to dinner?" and "What is an impropriety?" One of the women has a husband recently knighted for some political service to the party in power. An impossible woman from the social viewpoint, of vulgar breeding, and utterly impervious to anything resembling a joke, the new Lady Bodsworth fancies she is now on a plane of equality with the Peeresses of the Realm, and she proceeds to "put it over" those women in Warkinstall's best society who had previously snubbed her. One of these is Mrs. Richard Whichello, (Mary,) a woman of charm, good birth and breeding, and a tongue which runs the gamut from the satirically witty to the maliciously wicked. Mis Tempest plays this rôle and, of course, routs Lady Bodsworth. The company supporting Miss Tempest in "Mary Goes First" is the same which appeared with her in her London production of the piece.

If a great aggregation of managerial talent can have anything to do with the success of a star and her play, then Elsie Ferguson's future is secure, for when she opens at the Lyceum Theatre tomorrow night in "Outcast" she will be under the direction of Charles Frohman and Klaw & Erlanger. "Outcast" is by Hubert Henry Davies and, like Miss Tempest's offering, has been played in England with great success. It is a serious drama, which takes but eight characters to tell. In the story Geoffrey Sherwood is a middle-aged Englishman, who has been jilted by a woman in his own set, who, breaking the engagement, elects to marry a prosaic but wealthy Baronet. Sherwood becomes disconsolate, moody, and addicted to stimulants. At this period he meets, quite unexpectedly, Miriam, a woman of unusual type, who has known life's vicissitudes. Between these two characters, in social station so far apart, there is much in common. The play deals with their redemption. The scenes of the four acts of "Outcast" are laid in London. The company includes Charles Cherry, Marguerite Leslie, Warburton Gamble, J. Woodall Birde, Anne Meredith, Leslie Palmer, and Nell Compton.

Of the two musical comedies which come tomorrow night one is "Papa's Darling," which will be seen at the New Amsterdam Theatre. This is by Ivan Caryll, with the book and lyrics by Harry B. Smith. Mr. Smith has taken his story from the French of "Le Fils Surnaturel," by Grenet d'Ancourt and Maurice Vaucaire, a farce which had a long run in Paris. The story is not entirely dissimilar to other French farces which have made their way into American musical comedies before, for in "Papa's Darling" Achilles Petipas, Professor of Moral Psychology in Mme. Petipas's Advanced Feminist Academy, is a very sedate citizen at home, as is his friend Le Blanc, the Mayor of Epinal, where the academy is located, but it is quite a different matter when they get away from home. There is a certain Zozo, an attractive Parisienne, who arrives in Epinal most unexpectedly, and from this time on trouble comes thick and fast. The first act shows the grounds of the academy; the second a reception room in the academy, and the third the Bal Piane at the Café Bohème in Paris. Several of the favorites of the earlier Klaw and Erlanger musical plays appear in "Papa's Darling." The more important of the speaking parts are intrusted to Frank Lalor, as Achilles Petipas; Dorothy Jardun, as Zozo; Alice Dovey, as Germaine; Fred Walton, as Le Blanc; Octavia Broske, as Sophie; Jack Henderson, as Marcel; Frank Doane, as Colonel du Parvis; Edna Hunter, as Dorine, and Lucille Saunders, as Mme. du Parvis.

The other musical comedy tomorrow night, "The Only Girl," at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre, will serve to bring Joe Weber back into the fold as a producing manager and also to bring together again Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert as author and composer. The cast of "The Only Girl" includes Wilda Bennett, Adele Rowland, Louise Kelley, Vivian Wessell, Josephine Whittell, Estelle Richmond, Marjorie Oviatt, Jane Hilbert, Claire Standish, Gladys Schultz, Jeanne Darys, Thurston Hall, Ernest Torrence, John Findlay, Jed Prouty, Richmond Bartlett and others.

Tuesday night will find another musical comedy as the offering, for on that evening Mr. Weber's old partner, Lew Fields, will bring "Suzi" into the Casino. "Suzi" is an adaptation from the Hungarian book of Franz Martos, the American version having been made by Otto Hauerbach. The music is by Aladar Renyi and the piece has been running for three years in Budapest. It is in three acts.

Jose Collins will sing the title rôle of Suzi, a young comic opera star, whose romance with the young son of a Colonel of Hungarian Hussars forms the basis of the story. Tom McNaughton plays the rôle of the tutor of Stephan, in love with Suzi. Connie Ediss is a stage mother to Suzi, while other rôles are played by Lew Hearn, Robert Evett of the London Gaiety Theatre company, as Stephan; Fritzi von Busing, remembered in "The Chocolate Soldier" as the Countess Rosetti; Melville Stewart as the Colonel, and Artur Lipson as an Italian composer.

There will be a lull after Tuesday night until Friday, when Mme. Nazimova comes into the Harris Theatre in a new play, "That Sort," by Basil Macdonald Hastings, an English author who is known here only by his play, "The New Sin," which was produced at Wallack's Theatre two seasons ago. The play is said to be different from anything Nazimova has ever done. Further than that the producers have little to say about the drama.

MONTGOMERY AND STONE

THERE'S a man outside with a tintype of you taken sixteen years ago," said the valet of Fred Stone and Dave Montgomery to those artists in their dressing room at the Globe Theatre the other afternoon just before the matinée hour.

"Let him stay out there with it," said Stone.

"Tell him to bring it in," said Montgomery.

"Oh, that's all right," said Stone. "If Mr. Montgomery wants him to come in bring him along."

"Not at all," said Montgomery. "If Mr. Stone doesn't want him in here never mind."

And that was the most serious quarrel Montgomery and Stone have had since way back in 1896 when they joined Haverly's Minstrels and formed the team which has stuck together year in and year out.

The matter was settled to the satisfaction of all by a compromise. The valet went out and got the tintype and brought it in leaving the owner at the stage door. The picture turned out to be an ancient one of a couple of long since forgotten variety performers and so the owner got his property back instead of making the sale which he hoped for.

"I'll leave it to you," said Stone, addressing no one in particular but looking in the general direction of the two newspaper men who had dropped in to get a dressing room interview, "I leave it to you if that tintype wasn't taken forty years ago. How old does that guy think we are anyway?"

Which brought the interviewers easily and naturally around to ask just how old the actors were.

"I was born in Valmonte, Col., in 1873," said Stone.

"And when I was a little boy," said Montgomery, "I remember my father promising to take me to a show to see Fred Stone act; said he had admired him for years."

"Before I was interrupted," went on Stone, "I was telling when and where I was born. In 1895 I met Montgomery in Galveston, Texas. He was with a circus and attracting much attention as the first white person born in St. Joe, Missouri. Although much older than I, he seemed to be a pretty decent sort of fellow and so we got together and formed the team of Montgomery and Stone. Haverly's Minstrels happened along right then and we went to work with that show. We did a song and dance together and I also did some acrobatic stunts. That was just about twenty years ago and we've been together ever since."

"And you'll find us together twenty years from now, too," said Dave Montgomery. "I don't know just what we'll be doing, but we won't have to bother for the next three years, any way. All we've got to do is to sit down and count the money that will be coming in from 'Chin-Chin.' Pretty soft for this fellow Stone to have a partner like me who can put a show over big."

Callers come and went, but while they were there the interviewers had a chance to look around a bit. The most prominent feature of the room was a photograph of Paderewski on Stone's dressing table. During the performance of "Chin-Chin" Stone gives an imitation of the celebrated pianist and it is not an unstudied imitation either. He follows the photograph closely in making up for the part and he imitates every move of the other artist to perfection.

And in that imitation Stone plays a piano on the stage. There are a lot of people in the audience every night who think Stone isn't really playing and one of the big laughs of the entertainment comes when Stone flails from the piano stool and the instrument keeps right on. That happens to be the only moment when Stone isn't really turning out the music himself, for he can play the piano just as well as he can dance.

ACTOR-MANAGER OWNER-BUILDER

THERE are not many actor-managers in America, and it is not easy to think offhand of any actor-manager who further controls his public destinies by owning his own theatre. There will be one soon, however, for the time is close at hand when Charles Hopkins will open his Punch and Judy Theatre in Forty-ninth Street. He might even run such a riot of hyphens as to call himself actor-manager-owner-builder, for he has associated himself intimately with every tiny detail in the construction of his tiny playhouse. It would not be difficult to find a witness who could swear to having seen Mr. Hopkins hovering about the workers as the theatre began to take on shape, himself hatless and coatless, as if any minute he might put his hands to a wheelbarrow.

Nov. 10 is the date set aside, at least tentatively, for the opening with "The Marriage of Columbine" as the attraction. It represents an ambition that goes back to the days when Mr. Hopkins was an undergraduate at Yale. His particular time in college seems to have been active dramatically. He was in college with Paul Gordon, seen here some weeks ago as the lieutenant in "Kitty MacKay," and with Robert Housum, whose play, "Sylvia Runs Away," took flight after a brief appearance at The Playhouse. Hopkins's class was '08, and among the dramatic ventures of New Haven in his day was a production of "King Henry IV," when he played the king and Paul Gordon (then plain Thomas Achelis) was the Hotspur.

But Mr. Hopkins was graduated long since, not merely from Yale, but from the ranks of the amateurs. He played with John Drew, with Ben Greet, and in a Washington stock company. He had his own company in 1913 at the Fine Arts Theatre in Chicago. Now he will have his own company in his own theatre, on his own ground (taxes paid in advance) in New York.

CONCERNING PLAYS, PLAYERS, AND PLAYGOERS

STUDY PLAYWRIGHT'S ART FROM AN ORCHESTRA CHAIR

So Advises Mr. Ames, Who, Out of 2,650 Manuscripts, Found Only Fifteen Worth Producing.

THE old adage—"Of making books there is no end"—would hit as near the mark if it read, "Of making plays there is no end," according to the experience of Winthrop Ames in the $10,000 play contest, decided in favor of Alice Brown.

"From almost the first day that the contest was announced until it came to a close, on the 15th day of August last year, there flowed into my office a steady stream of plays," Mr. Ames remarked to a recent visitor, "plays that were bound in bookform, plays with beautifully decorated covers, plays without covers, plays in red ink, plays in black ink, plays in green ink, and plays from which the three colors flared, as though the sender had entered into open competition with the billposter of Barnum & Bailey's Circus.

"In all, I received 2,650 manuscripts, 1,000 of which were promptly returned because the author had in some way failed to be governed by the rules of the contest. The winner was decided upon through a gradual process of elimination. As the plays were read by the judges, those that were at all possible were put in a pile, to be read and reread in comparison with the later manuscripts which would arrive. Considering the total number of plays received and the number of times that a large proportion of them were gone over, I should say that the average number of readings for each must have been about four times."

It was the assorting, reading, and comparing of this unexpectedly large number of manuscripts which postponed the decision for many months after the contest had closed. Gradually, through this same process of elimination, those plays considered as having a chance in the ultimate decision of the judges were reduced in number until but twelve remained. It was then that the three judges really settled themselves for the pull into the homestretch. The result was a unanimous decision in favor of Miss Brown's play, entitled "Children of Earth." It is to be produced around Thanksgiving time, with Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon in the leading rôles.

"The proportion of men and women writers who entered the contest was about equal," Mr. Ames said. "Out of the final twelve manuscripts considered, six were written by women and six by men. Three were sent by persons living in New York City, two of whom were women and one a man. From Chicago came three also, with the proportions exactly reversed, two having women authors and one being written by a man. Two arrived from Boston. California contributed two, while Washington and Seattle contributed one each. Taking into consideration, then, the one condition of the contest which emphatically stated that no contestant not a resident of the United States would be considered, and that this condition was strictly adhered to, and accepting the large number of plays submitted as a fair working basis, we reach the conclusion that scattered throughout the vast territory of this country there are at least 2,000 persons who have written one play or more. Out of this number there are approximately 1,300 women writers, showing that—if this far-reaching contest may be taken as a criterion—there are as many women engaged in this profession throughout the United States as there are men.

"The judges were Augustus Thomas, President of the Society of American Dramatists; Adolph Klauber, at that time dramatic editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES, and Mr. Ames himself.

"The plays were of all types and assorted kinds," Mr. Ames said. "Verse-tragedies and the lower type of farces were present, but greatly in the minority. The largest proportion of manuscripts dwelt upon modern themes, and the largest number of these were crook plays, the authors apparently having reached the conclusion that, because 'Within the Law' had been received with favor by the public, the demand for like plays was unlimited, and that a similar plot must needs receive favorable consideration.

"But a small percentage of the manuscripts received were correctly written. Many of those rejected were submitted in scenario form, merely an outline of the plot being given. In some cases the would-be author simply sat down, pen in hand, play in head, and suggested in a long explanatory epistle the plot of what he had already pictured as the winning play. It is possible that several of these suggestions would have been favorably received by the scenario editors of the various film producing companies.

"Leaving this contest out of the question, I can safely say that an average of five plays are received at my office daily the year around. Considering these in conjunction with the great number received during the six months that the contest was open, I will say that the American playwrights, as a class, lack technic but are strong in ideas. This in itself speaks well for the future of the American stage, far more so than if the opposite were the case. Technic can be learned; ideas cannot. There is no school which will instill plots or themes into the barren mind. But there are schools of playwriting and valuable books dealing with the subject. I believe in both; but I am a firmer believer in the theatre as a school for young playwrights, not if they attend the play like a baby in a perambulator, but if they will go to the theatre with their eyes and ears open for suggestions and an insight into the way that a successful play is written or an unsuccessful one not written.

"Many times in my experience have I had both young men and young women ask for a position behind the scenes so that they could observe the hidden workings of the stage. They were willing to do any sort of work, erroneously thinking that the experience thus gained must needs prove a vast help to them in their chosen profession. This is not so. There is far more to be learned by the prospective playwright before the footlights during an evening's performance than he or she could learn in a year behind the scenes. To derive the best results it is necessary to spend more than one evening at the same theatre viewing the same play, because it is not until the novelty of the first visit has worn off that the real advantage is gained.

"If the young aspirant for the honors and remuneration accorded the successful playwright will then observe with a critical eye that part of the performance intended to be seen from before the footlights and dissect in his mind the various climaxes, effects, and relations thus thrust forcibly before his very eyes, he will have learned a valuable lesson for his future guidance. He must decide for himself why some trivial bit of comedy suddenly thrust into a dramatic situation caused a laugh entirely out of proportion to its actual worth, and why this same comedy inserted a moment earlier would have passed unnoticed. In other words, he must observe the performance not for the story that is told in its lines but for the manner in which this story is conveyed to the interested audience. He must know within himself the reason for the apparent suspense of the people about him as the players gradually approach a climax, and he must realise the subtle inner workings of the author's brain who could by his lines and plot key an audience to the highest pitch of excitement, relieve them for a moment by the insertion of an irrelevant spark of comedy and again recall their minds to the seriousness of the situation he has so graphically pictured.

"What I have said applies to the successful play, from which more can be learned than from one which fails to draw its fair share of patronage. The poor play, also, if properly studied, affords an excellent object lesson to the young playwright.

"There is probably one playwright out of two hundred who is successful," Mr. Ames continued gloomily. "Although there are a number of writers who have each written and had produced a successful play, there are few who have doubled the performance and yet fewer who have tripled it. It is a strange fact that few playwrights have a long line of successful plays to their credit. If you question any one of a hundred young playwrights as to why he or she has not succeeded in having a play accepted, that person will most likely aver that it is because they are not known, that they have no reputation as a writer, and that, although their script has more value than nine-tenths of the stuff getting by on Broadway, they are not considered by the producers. Such is not the case. Every play which finds its way into my office is read or at least partly read. I do not say if a play proves at the very start that it has no value we wade through it looking for a needle in a haystack; but every play receives enough attention to assure us that we are not passing a good thing by.

"It was largely due to the echoes from these assertions of the disgruntled ones that I conceived and put into action the open play contest. I was sickened by this constant wail, and I decided to open the highway to reward for playwrights, young and old, famous and unknown. I so arranged the conditions and stipulations of this play contest that the only needed qualification for the author was merit. Bill Smith could enter upon an equal footing with Tommy Jones, and, apart from the natural and acquired advantages of a college professor over a truck driver, they met anonymously and upon neutral ground. It has been stated that a man's handwriting is an index to his character and habits. Be that as it may, one thing is certain: You cannot judge character or personality by the letters of a typewriter, and it would be quite an undertaking for the combined wits of Sherlock Holmes, Old Sleuth, and a few lesser lights to decide whose fingers pounded the keys of an unknown typewriter. With this opportunity opened before them the American authors who contributed—2,650 in all—sent to me fifteen plays which, according to my judgment, were sufficiently meritorious to warrant their being produced. Any one of the final twelve plays would be worth considering for production, and besides this number there were three which would have stood a fair chance. That was all."

NOTES WRITTEN ON THE SCREEN

VITAGRAPH THEATRE.—"Sylvia Gray" and "The Fates and Flora Fourflush."

BROADWAY ROSE GARDENS.—"Three Weeks."

HAMMERSTEIN'S LEXINGTON.—"The Ordeal."

STRAND THEATRE.—"The Man From Mexico."

WEBER'S.—"Cabiria."

THE strange story of "Sylvia Gray," a drama with hypnotism as its theme, and the funny comedy "The Fates and Flora Fourflush" are the feature pictures of the Vitagraph Theatre's current programme which begin their second and last week on Monday.

"Sylvia Gray" is in four parts and is the life history of a vain, dissatisfied woman who gives up husband and child for life with a wealthy clubman who soon tires of her. It combines a number of stirring, dramatic episodes that make of it an interesting story, which leads up to a logical climax—the daughter of Sylvia Gray, a pliable subject under the influence of Dr. Frakenstein, a disreputable hypnotist, is about to kill her blind father for his money, when vengeance overtakes the villain through a dagger thrust by the hand of his jealous wife. The cast includes Helen Gardner in the dual rôle of mother and daughter, assisted by Charles Kent, Mary Charleson, Charles Eldridge, Gladden James, Arthur H. Ashley, Phyllis Grey, and Edward Elkas. The comedy picture, "The Fates and Flora Fourflush," is a mystery serial in three parts—"Treachery in the Clouds," "The Treasure Temple of Bhosh," and "The Race for Life" and visualizes the adventures of Flora Fourflush, Frank Goodheart, a street sweeper, and Sir Simon Blackheart, a villain who pursues the young people all over the earth, under the sea and in the clouds, and who, as a fitting climax, meets his just deserts at the hands of an Indian Rajah, who blows him to atoms with dynamite because of the previous theft of a precious ruby.

John Barrymore in "The Man From Mexico" will be seen on the screen of the Strand Theatre all week. In the motion-picture version of the play a wider scope is possible, and the star has unusual opportunities to display his artistic talent, his ludicrous mannerisms, and mirth-provoking pranks. The play was produced by the Famous Players Film Company. Another interesting feature will be the showing of a new installment of war pictures taken on the European battle fields.

This week at Hammerstein's Lexington, Fifty-first Street and Lexington Avenue, "The Ordeal," in five parts, will be the feature attraction produced by the Life Photo Film Corporation. Sterling and Keystone comedies, Scientia pictures, and the Topical News complete the picture programme. Mlle. d'Alnert, from the Opéra Comique, Paris, will sing new selections, and Roy Lepearl, the singing blacksmith, and Miss Dorothy Sothern, soprano, will complete the programme.

Elinor Glyn's sensational novel "Three Weeks," detailing principally a certain romantic love adventure between a wayward Queen and a youth named Paul, has been transferred to the films by Manager B. S. Moss of the Moss chain of local theatres and will be shown publicly for the first time tomorrow at the Rose Gardens Theatre at Broadway and Fifty-second Street. Madaline Traverse, who appeared in the rôle of an Egyptian woman in "Joseph and His Brethren," appears as the runaway Queen, and Mahlon Hamilton as Paul. The feature will be exhibited four times daily.

"The Crimson Wing," one of the novels written by Hobart Chatfield Chatfield Taylor, Chicago and Washington society leader, is being dramatised by the Essanay Company for the motion-picture stage.

Director Arthur Mackley has begun work on his twenty-sixth picture for Reliance-Mutual release, in which he appears in the rôle of a Western Sheriff. The title of this picture is "Sheriff for an Hour," in which the Western officer and deputies arrest a young crook who has been deceiving his mother by making her believe he was earning an honest living. Since originating his part as Sheriff Mr. Mackley has played in almost 200 subjects, averaging 1,000 feet each, and appearing in almost half of the scenes. With sixteen pictures to each foot, his face appears in a total of 1,600,000 motion pictures.

HARD WORK IN "EXPERIENCE"

SOMETHING of George V. Hobart's allegorical manner may be gathered by this extract from "Experience," the morality play now at the Booth Theatre. The scene is the Street of Disillusion, near the Primrose Path. Youth (William Elliott) is there waiting to meet his erstwhile friends. Experience is with him.

Then enter Work, a big and powerful man. He carries his coat over his arm, his sleeves rolled up. He is mopping his perspiring brow, and is in a hurry. Experience stops him.

EXPERIENCE—Oh, this is an opportune meeting. How are you, Work? I'm glad to see you. Youth, meet my good friend, Work.

YOUTH—Work! How are you? I was thinking about you and wondering what you looked like.

WORK (roughly)—Youth, eh? Well, you size up all right to me. I'm looking for huskies like you. I've got a lot of vacant places down at the bottom of the ladder. Come on, speak up, speak up; don't stand there staring at me. Oh! I'm rough, I know, but there isn't any harm in me—ask your friend Experience!

YOUTH (ingenuously)—I know there is not any harm in you, but—well, (turns to Experience) he isn't at all attractive, is he? See how the perspiration is rolling down his face! I don't believe I'd like to chum around with him.

EXPERIENCE—Oh, Work is all right. Why, in time you'd learn to love him like a father.

WORK (roughly)—Now, just a minute—this is not my way of doing things. If you want to have any dealings with me come right along—don't shilly shally around here. What is it? Speak up, speak up.

YOUTH—Well, to be frank with you, I didn't think you were quite so rough in your manner. I thought you were—well, you see, your hands are all rough, and you—

WORK, (interruptingly.)—Oh, I knew; you expected to find me looking like a picture of a new suit of clothes. Well, you've got the wrong idea, boy. I'm old Work—the original—and I have no spare moments to put on boiled shirts and fol de rols. Maybe it is one of my sons you expected to meet—I have five of them. Now, there's my oldest son, Job. He takes after me—he's rough and ready and willing, Job is. Then there's my twins, Position and Employment—fine boys, but a little unsteady sometimes. Then there's the pride of the family, Profession. I sent him to college and he made good. He's all right; he's a credit to his father and mother. And then there's Sinecure—he's the black sheep of the family, Sinecure is. He's dolled up all the time, and he travels around with a loafer by the name of Graft. Sinecure is the only one in the family I have no use for, but I don't see much of him; it's pretty hard to find him. I don't know why I'm wasting my time standing here to tell you all this—but you're a kid and there's only one way to start right, and that is through me. If you're with me I'll take you home and let you meet my missus. Her name is Content. She's a mother to all my boys, Content is—she'll be a mother to you—and she's the finest, grandest mother in all the world. Now, listen, boy. I know your mind is all confused and you're not strong for me right now, so I'm going about my affairs, and when your thought turns to old Work—when you surely want me—well, you come out and look for me. So long!

THIS THEATRE A STORE.

"Say," said a man in the lobby of the Cohan Theatre the other night, "this isn't a regular theatre; it's a store."

"I don't get you," answered his friend.

"Well," continued the man, "figure it out for yourself. I've been a regular patron of the house ever since it was opened, four years ago. The first time I came here a chap named Wallingford was selling covered carpet tacks. The next time I fell for it a kid named Broadway Jones was selling chewing gum. The third time, which was last season, a couple of men named Potash and Perlmutter were doing a thriving business in the cloak and suit trade, and now they are selling soap.

"It looks to me like the whole scheme is an advertising frame-up to put things on the market and boost business; and they tell me this man Cohan is an Irishman, too."

"Chez" Maurice.

Maurice and Florence Walton are meeting with success in their direction of "Chez" Maurice. In rendering the music for the pericon and sand dance steps, which are performed by Maurice and Walton, only reed instruments and oxskin tom-tom drums are used by the orchestra

Where Jones Got His Idea.

Henry Arthur Jones, the author of "Mary Goes First," with which Marie Tempest opens her répertoire engagement at the Comedy Theatre tomorrow night, got the idea for that comedy at a dinner party given by his son-in-law six years ago in Gibraltar. Mr. Jones's son-in-law was one of the British Commissioners appointed to sit on the Moroccan troubles engaging the English authorities at that time, and among others of his duties was the giving of an official dinner party to the various dignitaries. As the latter represented every rank in the United Kingdom, from a Duke to plain Mr. Jones, the question of precedence assumed the proportions of a gigantic nightmare for the host, and so impressed father-in-law Jones that he immediately drafted a scenario for a play, with the question of who should go in first to dinner as the theme thereof. Instead, however, of making men the protagonists, as they were at the original dinner party, Mr. Jones substituted a pair of women.

LIFE BEHIND THE SCENES A SERIOUS PROPOSITION

That Is When It Is Crowded Into Three Hours, as Is Done by Mr. Brady at Manhattan Opera House.

"LIFE" is a pretty serious proposition. If any one happens to think it's not all he or she will have to do to be convinced will be to drop down to the Manhattan Opera House, give the magic password, which may not be revealed here, and walk through the stage entrance back to the stage.

There he will see "Life" in so many different forms in such a short period of time that his breath will be quite taken away—at least THE TIMES man who made it his business to see "Life" from behind the proscenium arch was swallowed up in such a whirl of events that it was hours and hours before he could realise that he wasn't living in a tangle of boat races and automobile dashes and death cells at Sing Sing, to say nothing of wild rides over a Mexican desert.

You see, William A. Brady, who likes to do big things in the theatre, got the idea that a play called "Life," in which large slices of about everything in this world might be crowded into three hours of time, would be a pretty good thing to show to audiences. Now Mr. Brady has a caged dramatist in his offices (if it is possible for a man who is here, there, and everywhere and busy every moment of the time, to have such things as offices) in the person of Thompson Buchanan, who writes plays only for Mr. Brady's consumption. In the old days, when Thompson Buchanan was a reporter on an evening newspaper and was known as just plain Buck, he wrote about everything from a church festival to a murder most every day of his life. Therefore, reasoned Mr. Brady, who was more fitted to turn out a real big melodrama which would be a true portrayal of life in a big city?

Who indeed but Mr. Thompson Buchanan, née Buck? So the author was pushed into a little office at the Manhattan Theatre, given a lead pencil or whatever gifted authors use to turn out "a gripping, living, wonderful melodrama," and told to go as far as he liked, but to go quickly.

Perhaps the scenes at the New York Hippodrome are bigger and more massive than the scenes at the Manhattan Opera House, but then the stage at the former playhouse is so much larger that the realm behind the scenes at the latter temple of art and the drama is a much more complicated affair. Leander Richardson, who writes things for the papers about Mr. Brady's shows, acted as the guide for the hungry soul who wanted to see "Life." That is, Mr. Richardson went as far as the stage door, whispered the mysterious password, which sounded something like Itsallrightmikehesanewspaperguy, and then departed. The searcher after truth was left alone on the big stage. That is, he was alone in that no one paid any attention to him. Two hundred and fifty stage hands were there, as were something like a hundred actors, a dozen or more horses, a couple of automobiles, two racing shells, and more scenery than the reporter believed existed in the whole world.

Until the first act began everything seemed to be more or less mixed up, but in reality there was nothing mixed at all. Everything was right in its proper place to be hauled out and used in the quickest possible time and after it was used back it went to the identical spot it had been taken from.

There is no use going into the story of "Life" as it is played by Mr. Brady's company. Most every one in New York who goes to the theatre at all will go there and see the play sooner or later. Let it be said, however, that one of the first exciting moments in the big drama is a boat race between Harvard and Yale in which sixteen very husky young oarsmen and a couple of likely looking coxswains almost row their heads off for about five minutes.

The shells in which the oarsmen race are real ones. Even papier mâché boats couldn't be made any lighter than the real articles, so Mr. Brady bought a couple of the boats and told the stage carpenters to get busy. The shells were mounted on platforms ten feet high and these platforms are on ball bearing rollers. When the time comes for the race they are hauled into position, the oarsmen climb into the seats and then the water is built up around them.

It is a very real looking river—that water. From the footlights back to the boats long strips of canvas are stretched across the stage, and on this canvas, which is nothing more or less than a moving-picture screen, a machine throws a picture of a rapidly moving stream. The effect is perfect. The oarsmen tug at their oars, which are real oars, too, and the moving-picture machine clicks off a river. Stage hands, back in the wings, pull on the ropes, which slowly drag the boats across the stage and then suddenly the winning post flashes past and the race is over. The winning post is in reality a man-propelled affair which, instead of being stationary, flits across the stage in the opposite direction from the boats' course. It looks for all the world as though the boats were passing it at the rate of a mile a minute. Mr. Brady himself worked out this idea. Congratulations are in order.

Later in the evening comes the escape of an innocent man from Sing Sing just about two jumps ahead of the electrician who has the chair all ready for his execution. Two automobiles are used in this. One is a real machine, and the other is a "prop," made to explode and blow up at just the proper moment.

Both machines are mounted on heavy, low trucks. Instead of the wheels touching the floor of the trucks, however, they move against a series of other wheels, on the same order as a bicycle home-training machine, and no matter how fast the automobile wheels turn, the under ones go just as fast, and the only forward movement is furnished by the ever-ready stage hands, who once more tug away on the ropes. Again, too, the moving-picture machine is brought into play and the streets and country roads go whirling past. Suddenly a tree, which, like the winning post in the boat race, is man propelled, comes shooting across the stage and bumps into the pursuing automobile. The explosion follows. A number of very lifelike dummy figures in the car are shot sky high and the real automobile dashes off the stage to safety. Some night that real machine is going to jump from the truck which carries it and go plunging through the brick wall ahead. When this was suggested later to Mr. Richardson his eyes fairly sparkled with delight at the thought of the space he would get on the first pages of the papers if it really did happen.

DOUGLAS CELEBRATES.

Kenneth Douglas, the English comedian, who is playing the leading part in "A Pair of Silk Stockings" at the Little Theatre, in something over a month will round out his twenty-first year upon the stage and be old enough to cast a vote in favor of his profession. Mr. Douglas will not give the exact date, for he is very modest about it.

In the course of his busy life he has essayed nearly every branch of dramatic art. He made his first appearance on the stage in 1893. The following year he sprang to success as Bullock Major in "The New Boy" at Terry's Theatre, and immediately began his long gallery of contributions to the English stage, among them such characterizations as Tom in "One Summer Day," Gavin Dishart in "The Little Minister," George Leete in "The Marrying of Ann Leete," Lieutenant Seton Boyne in "Beauty and the Barge," Lieutenant Alan Hartley in "The Drums of Oude," Colin in "Josephine," Harding O'Grindle in "The O'Grindles," Freddie Perkins in "Mrs. Dot," Maximilian in "Samson," Paul Barton in "Is Matrimony a Failure?" and Richard Beaufort in "Dad."

SAILING THE PINAFORE

NOT a few pieces of theatrical property are accumulating dust in the storehouse this season but that gallant square-rigged frigate Pinafore, which rode at anchor at the Hippodrome last Spring, is cruising all over the continent. Those who remember the massive production of the Gilbert and Sullivan opera will wonder how this can be done, for theatres which even approach the Hippodrome in size are few and far between and the attempt made four years ago to send a Hippodrome show out on tour broke up in confusion after a few cities had been tried.

In the midst of his preparations last Summer for "Wars of the World," the spectacle now on view at the huge Sixth Avenue playhouse, Arthur Voegtlin took enough time off to work out an elaborate plan whereby "H. M. S. Pinafore" a la Hippodrome could be moved about the country. From all accounts the plan is working, and already such cities as Albany, Montreal, and Buffalo have had a chance to see the real ship afloat on a real if temporary Portsmouth tide.

When "Pinafore" opened at Albany a stage crew of expert mechanics preceded it by nearly a week, and the physical equipment accompanied them. Armed with blueprints they set to work before, after, and during the presentation of the attraction then playing, and when its tenure ended the stage was as bare as a polo field. "Pinafore's" physical production went on, and every one was amazed to see Harmanus Bleecker Hall converted into a sea. Meanwhile another crew of the same type, with similar equipment, was at work in Montreal, with the same result. "Grand draperies" that have never disappeared from the view of the audience were hoisted out of the way, and every theatre in which "Pinafore" has appeared has presented a new aspect to the audience, because depth, width, and height never suspected have been created. The same is true in every city where "Pinafore" appears.

While it is playing in one city a technical staff is ahead in the next where it is scheduled. There are two complete sets of scenery; two efficient technical staffs and two casts—with one or two exceptions the same as appeared at the New York Hippodrome.

Of course all this is a tremendous annoyance to the company preceding "Pinafore," and likewise to the one following it. In the first instance, before, during and after the performance the engineers, hydraulic experts and mechanics are hard at work. When "Pinafore" moves out, the stage is poorly prepared to receive another show, because the incidentals, "props" and details have disappeared as though a cyclone had swept through the place. In whatever degree the touring theatrical people may suffer, the public benefits. The man who pays $2 to see a show is not in the least interested in the amount of work or worry involved in giving him the most possible for the money.

ANGELA LEARNS TO LIKE ACCOUNTING

WHEN Matson Turner, engineer and mathematically methodical, first met his future wife it was a certain irresponsibility in her character that attracted him. She never knew what she had done with anything; no person could guess what she might decide to do next. Even her hair had a way of coming unfastened and blowing across her face—which was one more reason why the engineer was attracted.

When the ceremony was over and the pair were newly settled Turner continued to admire the quality of irresponsibility in her. For himself he felt his responsibilities every time he drew his salary check. When he discovered that the same quality that had made her an attractive sweetheart made her an extravagant, if adorable, wife, he began to get a new light on things.

Once the iceman claimed and got payment for a third more than Mrs. Turner thought was due him. Then the grocer's monthly bill was more than Turner had been led to expect—more by $18.65.

The engineer talked with his wife about it, and ended by comforting her clumsily. She declared tearfully that figures had always been her despair. She vowed that it was his easy and confident proficiency in mathematics that had drawn her attention to her husband. She said that, except when he handled them, she hated figures. But the next morning she came to the table with a do-or-die expression and said that she would learn to conduct the household on a strictly business basis.

As a starter he brought out an old ledger which he had partially used for filing notes, and, tearing out the used leaves, made it ready for its new duty.

Angela did not seem any too well pleased when she found that she was expected to enter every cent of household expenditure in the old, dilapidated book. But the engineer preached economy at the start and knowledge and no need for economy at the end, so she gave in with what grace she could muster.

Turner and his wife settled on a monthly allowance for housekeeping, and he gave her a lecture on how to use it. He impressed upon her the need of marking everything down in easily understandable details, so that she might know at the end of the month just how everything had gone. From the data thus gathered there could be arranged those economies that in time would make possible the desired saving.

From day to day thereafter Angela tried to get him to look at the old book. She was proud of the rows of neat entries, and proud of the perseverence that had gone to keep the entries straight. But the engineer, after vainly trying to put her off with the plea that he was too tired after a long day with figures at the office, at last came right out and refused to examine the book before the end of the month. He wanted to teach her self reliance.

He would talk with her of the best way to save. He showed her easy methods of apportioning the allowance for a given period, so that she could know how much she might expect to owe or be ahead at the end of that time.

When she was $3.75 ahead of the game he found it easy to rejoice with her; and when, after the Marshalls and Cousin James Poindexter had been to dinner and the $3.75 had magically given place to a deficit of $2.82 he was sorry, but refused to grow despondent. He ate what she set before him thereafter in silence and thought to himself that if it did not quite come up to his ideal of a well found table, there were better times ahead—after she had learned her lesson. He took to assuring himself that she was learning, and that the credit all belonged to him.

As the end of the month drew near his interest increased, but he steadfastly refused to look at the book. His wife hinted daily that there was really going to be something left. He encouraged her, delighted to believe that his idea was bearing fruit so soon. Then Angela ceased to ask him to look at the book, and did not mention it save when she could not avoid it.

The last few days of the month there was very little for dinner. Angela still seemed worried, but said no word of the accounts. He thought that it was better not to question her, and he let things take their course.

At last the end of the month arrived, and Turner managed it so he could get home early. Angela was all smiles, and there was a first-class dinner, eaten in expectant appreciation.

After dinner he lit his pipe and asked for the old account book. His wife went into the library and returned with an ornately bound book, from which hung silken ribbons in profusion. When he opened the book wonderingly he found: "Received from Matson $60" at the top of the first page. Opposite was a short list of entries headed by the glaring statement: "Spent all but $6 for the house."

The engineer looked up to find his wife smiling with conscious satisfaction. "Why," he said, "I thought you were keeping an itemized account. Everything you spent money for marked down when it was spent. In the old book, you know."

Angela took a precarious seat on his chair arm and arranged the book so that both might see. "Now let me show you, goosie," she explained.

"On the 28th I was sure that I was going to have something left over, so I thought I might as well get a new book. I didn't know whether I could make the clerk understand just what I wanted, so I took the old one down with me. And on the way home I lost it.

"But it was as easy as could be to find out how much I had spent—I remembered about the milkman; the iceman had left a lot of used tickets; I just called up the grocer, asked for the month's bill, and he was nice about it as could be. Then I transferred those amounts, just as you see them, into this new book.

"I knew when I went downtown for the book that there was going to be enough left for a silver inkstand, too, and I thought I ought to have a pretty pen to put in it, so I just got them while I was down."

She pointed to the entries below the "Spent all but $6 for the house," and read: "Inkstand, $3.50; Pen $2.50."

Turner sat silent and she went on: "So then when I realized that things were going to turn out so nicely I thought I might as well get a little desk—not too cheap, because it had to go with the inkstand and pen, you see—and I got the dearest one for only $16.50 at Golder's. Now don't you think I did fine?"

Turner took a moment before he mustered courage to ask: "But these things cost money, my dear, and what about the bills for last month's living expenses. You've spent $16.50 more than we allowed already."

"Oh, now, Matson," explained Angela sweetly, "I thought the old living expenses didn't matter so much—I can keep the account of what remains unpaid in this new book with the expenses for the coming month. There's lots of room for both. And with that dear of a pen, and that perfect love of an inkstand, and the cute desk I won't mind making lots of entries. Not a bit!"

THE MILLIONS OF ROCKEFELLER FOR WAR RELIEF

Foundation Begins Systematic Campaign to Aid Destitute Non-Combatants.

COMMISSION TO GO ABROAD

FIRST SHIP OFF TOMORROW

With 4,000 Tons of Food, the Massapequa Will Leave Here for Rotterdam.

CHARITY WILL BE NEUTRAL

Other Agencies' Help Still Needed, J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., Says—How Fund Operates.

The Rockefeller Foundation, which is endowed with $100,000,000, announced yesterday that it had made arrangements for the relief of the destitute non-combatants of the warring nations in Europe. A commission will be sent abroad to investigate conditions and devise means of administering aid.

Pending the organization of a systematic campaign, the foundation has chartered the Massapequa of the New York & Porto Rico Line, which will leave New York tomorrow, bound for Rotterdam, with 4,000 tons of flour, rice, and beans. She is a ship of 3,193 tons displacement, which has been in the New York-San Juan service, and is under command of Capt. B. J. Olsen.

The magnitude of the undertaking can be measured by this first step, which represents an outlay of approximately $275,000. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who made the announcement, quoted letters from Americans abroad who estimated that relief of the Belgians, more than 7,000,000 souls, would cost at least $1,000,000 a month.

Ready to Spend Millions.

Mr. Rockefeller pointed out that the foundation's work would not render that of other relief agencies unnecessary. His statement follows:

THE ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION.
Oct. 31, 1914.

It having become clear that one of the most terrible and appealing effects of the war will fall upon the non-combatants—those most innocent of any part in the cause or the conduct of the conflict—the Rockefeller Foundation has determined to exert itself to the extent, if necessary, of millions of dollars for the relief of non-combatants in the various countries involved.

This action is taken as a natural step in fulfilling the chartered purposes of the Foundation, namely, "to promote the well-being of mankind throughout the world."

I have written the American Ambassador in London that "we foresee the probability that large resources will be very much needed for rehabilitation at a time when the resources now being drawn upon for immediate relief will be perhaps very nearly exhausted. Under the circumstances we feel the need of further advice."

In order to obtain expert opinion as to the time, place, and means of rendering aid most effectively, the Foundation has arranged to send to Europe within the next few days a commission which shall visit the countries affected and advise us first hand. The Chairman of the commission will be Wickliffe Rose, Director General of the International Health Commission, whose successful experience in organizing the campaign against hookworm disease in various parts of the world peculiarly fits him for the task.

We are also seeking to enlist the cooperation of one or two others, experienced in the administration of relief to those in need.

The sending of such a mission will not render unnecessary the efforts of other agencies of relief, for the need is widespread, and millions of people are suffering. All steps which the Rockefeller Foundation takes will, of course, be absolutely neutral.

To avoid delay and to provide relief at the earliest possible moment for the suffering people of Belgium, the Foundation has chartered the largest neutral ship available in New York Harbor, and purchased a full cargo of supplies, to be dispatched immediately.

Ambassador Page's Appeal.

This action will but supplement the public-spirited efforts of the Belgian Relief Committee, of which Robert W. de Forest is Chairman. That the necessity is vital and worthy of the heartiest support is indicated by the following cablegrams which, in reply to inquiries, we have received from Mr. Page, the American Ambassador at London:

Belgians on verge of starvation. I emphatically regard it most opportune to help. I have never known such a case of need. Committee to distribute food consists of prominent Americans here and influential Belgians in Belgium and American Minister and Consuls in Belgium, all under my direction. British Government forbids export of food, and no food can be bought on Continent. Help needed is food and clothing for women and children.

It will require $1,000,000 a month for seven or eight months to prevent starvation. In fact, many will starve now before food can reach them. No food can be bought and exported from any country in Europe. Every dollar you choose to give will save or produce a human life if you give it quickly enough. No other time will come in any land when there can be greater need. Do not send money.

Buy six parts wheat, two parts rice, two parts beans, and ship in neutral ships consigned to American Consul at Rotterdam. Inform me when you ship and I will arrange all diplomatic requirements for landing, for transit to Belgium, and for distribution in small quantities by the Commission of Relief, which as a means of reaching all the people have taken over all grocery stores.

Immediately upon receiving these messages the Rockefeller Foundation enlisted the co-operation of the shipping department of the Standard Oil Company of New York in securing the steamship, and at the same time gladly availed itself of the services of Lionel Hagenaers, a Belgian, now resident in New York and member of the Belgian Relief Committee, in purchasing the cargo. The Foundation encountered considerable difficulty in finding a cargo-carrying vessel, and the pressure upon the market for food-

DRIVES 3 TO DEATH UNDER FAST TRAIN

Dr. Gerald West, His Mother and Cousin Killed When Engine Hits Their Auto.

Three members of one of the most prominent families in Rockland County were killed at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning when a train on the New York & New Jersey Railroad crashed into an auto containing Dr. William West, his mother, his brother, and a cousin, at the Alice Street crossing of the railroad, near Haverstraw. Here is a list of the dead:

WEST, Mrs. JAMES E., 72 years old, a widow, of Garnerville, N. Y.

Dr. William West was injured mortally and his death was thought to be a matter of a few hours.

Dr. Gerald West and Dr. William West were paying a week-end visit to their mother, Mrs. James E. West, a sister of the late Thomas Garner, founder of the Garner & Co. Print Works at Garnerville. Miss Johnson had been spending several weeks with Mrs. West, who was her aunt.

Yesterday morning the West party left Garnerville in an automobile for Haverstraw, where they were going to church. They followed a road parallel to the railroad tracks and for half a mile or more before they came to the Alice Street Crossing, near Haverstraw, maintained only a small lead on a passenger train running on the tracks beside them. Dr. West turned at the crossing and tried to speed the automobile across the tracks in front of the locomotive.

According to Engineer Joseph Frohlis of the passenger train, his engine was within less than 100 feet of the crossing when the automobile started to turn, and he had no chance to reduce the speed of the engine. It crashed into the auto, throwing the four occupants in all directions.

When the train stopped, the train crew and passengers went back to the place where the accident had occurred. They found the crushed body of Dr. Gerald West about thirty feet from the tracks. Twenty feet from him lay Dr. William West, who was unconscious, and dying from a crushed skull and other injuries. The body of Miss Johnson was found in a field on the other side of a fence sixty feet from the tracks. Mrs. West's body was found on the pilot of the engine.

After a physician on the train had examined the bodies and had found that Dr. William West was the only one of the autoists alive, the Coroner was called, and the three bodies were taken to the home of John A. Filor near the place where the accident occurred.

Mrs. West had lived for nearly fifty year in Garnerville. She was the widow of James E. West, a wealthy manufacturer, who died several years ago. If Dr. William West dies the only surviving member of the family will be Harry T. West, a lawyer of this city.

Dr. William West was unmarried. Dr. Gerald E. West leaves a wife and two children, who were in Brooklyn when the accident happened

50 TONS OF GOLD DUE HERE.

The largest single shipment of gold ever made by the United States Government, $25,000,000, left Denver last Friday for the Sub-Treasury in this city. Great secrecy surrounded the preparations for shipping the gold from Denver, and no word has been given of the time that it is expected to arrive here, but it is believed that it will be locked in the Sub-Treasury vaults some time today or tomorrow.

The gold, which weighs more than fifty tons, was put in three special cars, and was guarded by a large force of armed men. The shipment was made through the American Express Company, and the cars were sent by different routes.

As soon as the trains carrying the gold arrive in this city they will be met by armed men, who will guard the auto trucks which will speed off with the precious metal to the Sub-Treasury. The gold is required in this city to fill the place of the large sums which were shipped abroad.

LA FOLLETTE BREAKS DOWN

Senator Jumps Into Crowd and Secretary Stops His Speech.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 1.—Engagements which Senator Robert M. La Follette had made for campaign speeches tomorrow in support of J. J. Blaine, the Independent-Progressive candidate for Governor, have been canceled. Senator La Follette planned a three-day whirlwind campaign of the State, to wind up on the day before election, but on the first day he was forced, for lack of crowds, to cancel three of the scheduled speeches. On Saturday he was forced to cancel one speech for lack of attendance.

In another case the Senator stopped speaking after eight minutes on the advice of a physician. At Stevens Point Senator La Follette's vehemence caused more comment than he has evoked at any public appearance since he broke down in Philadelphia two years ago. The Senator leaped from the platform into the crowd and was so excited that his secretary, John J. Hannan, stopped his address. He was to make six addresses in as many different towns tomorrow, but it has been decided that he is in no condition to speak.

Fifteen actions at law for $50,000 damages each have been instituted by E. L. Philipp, the Republican candidate for Governor, against State newspapers which, following La Follette's example, have called him a lobbyist. The suits follow the repetition of the charges against Philipp once made in a magazine, for which Philipp obtained damages.

SAYS CROWN PRINCE DIED.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—A private letter received by a young woman in Washington from a Lieutenant in the German Army refers to "the funeral of the Crown Prince."

The letter came to the attention of State Department officials when its recipient asked the American Government to undertake to transmit a reply for her to the Lieutenant, to whom she is engaged to be married. The request was denied, as many similar ones have been. The letter made only a casual reference to the funeral of the Crown Prince, speaking of the big crowds which turned out to see it.

A week ago dispatches from London reported that private letters had been received from Germany saying the Crown Prince had been buried.

ALL SEE VICTORY; PROMISE REFORMS

Glynn Pledges Home Rule—Tanner Says It's Whitman and Efficiency by 95,000.

SULZER EXPECTS BIG VOTE

Deposed Governor Says He'll Poll 500,000 and Win by 50,000.

MRS. GLYNN CONFIDENT

Tells Why She Expects the Governor's Election by More Than 70,000.

Confident predictions of victory at the polls tomorrow were made by nearly all the candidates and their campaign managers yesterday. When Gov. Glynn was asked to forecast the result of the election last night, he said:

"Each new report that I receive from my friends throughout the State strengthens my belief that I will win by a decisive plurality. Mr. Whitman's failure to meet me squarely on State issues has caused practically every independent in the State to throw his influence toward my election.

"In the last week Mr. Whitman's willingness to profit by the intolerant and un-American issue, which his supporters had injected into the campaign, appears to have lost him the confidence of all broad-minded Republicans.

"From two up-State candidates today I received word that Mr. Sulzer's statement, that if elected he would give Mr. Whitman blanket powers as a public prosecutor, and would turn over the State Government to Mr. Whitman after Mr. Sulzer had finished with it, has caused the few Democrats who still clung to Mr. Sulzer to disown his candidacy.

"Surface indications all point to my election. The careful canvass made this week, by Democratic leaders up-State, also indicates a sweeping victory for me next Tuesday; but so far as I am concerned personally, my chief reason for expecting success is my belief that the people of New York can give but one answer to an issue which calls into question their broad-mindedness and their American sense of fair play."

Republican State Chairman Tanner predicted that Whitman would be elected by a plurality of not less than 95,000, and that the entire Republican State ticket would win.

"Mr. Whitman's plurality outside of New York City will exceed 145,000," he said, "and Mr. Wadsworth will have substantially the same plurality. There appears to be no question whatever of the election of a Republican Senate and Assembly.

"I am convinced that Gov. Glynn's plurality in New York City will not exceed 50,000—and I regard this as a liberal figure.

"Ex-Gov. Sulzer will receive a surprisingly large vote, the greater part of which will come from the Democratic Party. He will run third in the race, and I estimate his vote at not less than 145,000.

"Mr. Davenport's total vote will not much exceed one-half of Mr. Sulzer's vote and will be negligible in the final result.

"The Republican ticket for Delegates to the Constitutional Convention will receive about as strong support as the State ticket, assuring a Republican majority in the convention."

Frederick M. Davenport did not predict victory in his last word to the voters, but he expressed the opinion that the party would poll the full Progressive strength and also get the votes of many independents who were not enrolled with any party.

"I look forward to the result on Election Day with satisfaction," he said. "The Progressive Party is going to give a good account of itself."

William Sulzer, who was the guest of a number of his friends at a dinner in the Broadway Central Hotel last night, said:

"I shall win by 50,000 plurality. My vote will be in the neighborhood of 500,000. The reports we have received from every section of the State show that I have got the bosses beaten and the grafters on the run. This is the taxpayers' fight and I am the taxpayers' candidate, and the taxpayers' are going to win."

WHITMAN PLEDGES EFFICIENCY

District Attorney Promises to Appoint Clean Men to Aid.

District Attorney Whitman decided yesterday, after conferences with Chairmen Tanner and Koenig, to spend the last day before election in a tour into Rockland County, followed by a whirlwind campaign by automobile through the Bronx at night. He will leave over the West Shore Railroad at 12:15 o'clock and will return to 242d Street and Broadway at 7:45 P. M., where he will be met by John J. Knewitz, the Bronx Republican leader. Mr. Knewitz will be in command of several automobiles in which Mr. Whitman and other political leaders will parade through the principal Bronx streets.

A plan to hold night meetings in Manhattan was abandoned upon the request of the Bronx leaders that they be allowed to take charge of the candidate on the eve of election.

Until late yesterday afternoon all visitors were kept away from Mr. Whitman, in conformity with his request that he be permitted to "play with the baby for one day" in the midst of the campaign's turmoil.

A suggestion from Catholics who are Republicans was transmitted to Mr. Whitman by telephone that he permit the distribution at Catholic churches of his statement disclaiming responsibility for the anti-Catholic issue which has been injected into the campaign. The request was made on the ground that friends of the Democratic candidate had distributed in this manner a letter attributed to Governor Glynn, in which the latter declared himself opposed to the Catholic Church. The letter was declared a forgery by Governor Glynn.

WAY FOUND TO OPEN LONDON EXCHANGE

Bank of England to Advance 60 Per Cent. of Loans—A Government Operation.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The reopening of the London Stock Exchange has now come within the pale of practical politics. A plan was officially announced tonight to provide against forced realization on stocks on a large scale. This is the first step in rehabilitating the Stock Exchange position.

The banks, protected by their ability to secure the new currency rates, have found themselves able to dispense with State assistance, and they agree not to press for repayment of loans until one year after the war. The Government will arrange with the Bank of England to advance to Stock Exchange members 60 per cent. of the value at July 29 prices of stocks held by lenders at 1 per cent. above the bank rate, these advances to be repayable at any time. When stocks reach the July 29 prices again the lenders have a right to call their loans.

The Stock Exchange Committee will shortly publish new rules by which clients, so far as possible, may share in the advantages of the scheme. If any lender who might come under the scheme presses for repayment of loans the Exchange as a body will on the borrower's behalf plead the Courts Emergency Powers act.

The Stock Exchange will only reopen at a date and under conditions approved by the Treasury. By this plan the operations of the London Stock Exchange are for the first time submitted to Government approval. The chief criticism likely to be made is that big men rather than small are helped.

TSING-TAU IN FLAMES; DEFENDERS FIGHT ON

TOKIO, Nov. 1.—Official advices show that a desperate fight is being made at Tsing-tau. For miles from shore the sea reflects the flames from the burning ship yards, gas reservoirs, and houses that had been set afire by shells from the Japanese and British warships and land artillery which cover the rushes of the infantry.

The Germans are strongly intrenched, having at least thirty fortified positions with 100 guns, while elaborate systems of barbed wire entanglements and subterranean mines have impeded the advance of the Allies. Since Oct. 28 there have been casualties daily. The losses yesterday were slight.

Aeroplanes and balloons furnished the ranges for the gunners. The Kaiser's fort has replied fiercely. The guns of Iltis Fort have done no damage.

It is announced that as a tribute to the gallantry of Meyer Waldeck, the German Governor of Kiao-Chau, no demand for the surrender of Tsing-tau has been made.

SUBMARINE U-9 TANGLED IN FISH NET

Captain of Dutch Trawler Hurriedly Left It There and Fled to Port.

LONDON, Monday, Nov. 2.—A dispatch to The Daily News from Rotterdam says that a Ymuiden steam trawler reports that on Friday while fishing in Latitude 54 North and Longitude 4 East a submarine boat became entangled in the nets and sent up a rocket. The Captain hailed the submarine in English, but received no reply, and the trawler abandoned the nets and returned hurriedly to port.

The Daily Mail's Amsterdam correspondent says it was the famous German submarine U-8 which got entangled in the trawler's fish nets.

GERMANY AND ENGLAND THREATEN REPRISALS

Each Incensed Over the Reported Imprisonment of Civilians by the Other.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Nov. 2.—The Daily Chronicle makes the following semi-official announcement on a matter which has been the subject of considerable discussion for some time past:

"In view of the action taken by the German forces in Belgium and France of removing as prisoners of war all persons who are liable to military service, his Majesty's Government have given instructions that all enemy reservists on board neutral vessels should be made prisoners of war.

"Although this course was rendered necessary, in its vital interests, it is the wish of the Government that it shall be carried out with as little inconvenience as possible to neutral shipping.

"The decision is only the sequel to the action which the Germans themselves are taking with regard to persons of military age, and its importance is evident from the fact that there are vast numbers of German and Austrian reservists in various neutral countries only waiting an early opportunity to join their colors."

BERLIN, Nov. 1. (By Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—Gottlieb von Jagow, Minister of Foreign Affairs, in a telegram to the Dresden Anzeiger announces reprisals on British subjects in Germany for the imprisonment of German civilians in England in the event that the British Government does not accede without delay to the German request for the liberation of the Germans. $50,000,000 War Loan by Germany to Turkey

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Nov. 2.—The Daily Mail's Copenhagen correspondent says:

It is reported that Germany's preliminary war contribution to Turkey will amount to $50,000,000. I learn that financial circles in Germany are preparing for the issue of a new war loan of $125,000,000.

LONDON, Monday, Nov. 2.—According to dispatches received here Turkish troops have already crossed the Egyptian frontier. They had been on the border for a considerable time.

The Turkish fleet continues to menace Russian towns and shipping on the Black Sea.

The Constantinople correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company, in a dispatch dated Saturday, says:

"It is reported that a body of 2,000 armed Bedouins has penetrated Egyptian territory.

"It is expected that the Cabinet will fall and be succeeded by a War Ministry representing the extreme elements of the Committee of Union and Progress, (Young Turks.)

A dispatch from Rome to The Express says a report has reached there that 400,000 Turks are massed on the Caucasus border, and that 300,000 are waiting at Beirut, Jaffa, and other ports for transshipment to the Sinai Peninsula. The ports, it is said, are well guarded by the British and French fleets.

"I am officially informed," says The Express correspondent, "that a circular announcing the mobilization of the Greek Army has been received by the foreign Consuls."

Turkey has definitely thrown in her lot with Austria and Germany, and, if Portugal be counted, there are now eleven powers at war, with the prospect that three more—Greece, Bulgaria, and Rumania—will be drawn in within a few days.

The note which Great Britain presented to Turkey last Friday, demanding, besides an explanation of the actions of the Turkish fleet in the Black Sea, the dismantling of the cruisers Goeben and Breslau, which Turkey bought from Germany, was really an ultimatum, to which Turkey was required to make a reply by Saturday evening.

So far as is known here, telegraphic communication with Turkey being interrupted, no answer was made, and the Ambassadors of the Triple Entente at Constantinople, it is understood, demanded and received their passports.

Neither Russia nor Great Britain was unprepared for the move on the part of Turkey, which, Government officials here say, was known to be under the influence of Germany, and the allied powers have forces on hand ready to oppose a Turkish invasion.

When the regular British forces were withdrawn from Egypt to take part in the war in Europe they were immediately replaced by troops from home, much greater in numbers, and only last week they paraded through the streets of Cairo, making a splendid impression.

The principal problem both for England and Russia is the attitude of their Moslem subjects, who, under ordinary circumstances, would prefer not to fight against Turkey. In this war, however, they have rallied to the Allies' flag, as have all other races under British or Russian rule, and care is being taken to explain to them that in this case Turkey, under the direction of Germany, has been the aggressor.

Another problem relates to the attitude of Rumania, Bulgaria, and Greece. Bulgaria's existence is due to Russia, and she is under many obligations to Great Britain. Besides, she is desirous of possessing Thrace as far east as the Enos-Midia line, which was awarded to her by the London Conference after the first Balkan war, but which Turkey retook when Bulgaria was attacked by Greece and Servia. She would naturally side with the Entente powers, but objects, political observers point out, to fighting side by side with Greece and Servia.

Russia, however, will, it is expected, ask Bulgaria to declare definitely on which side she is ranged, as her mere neutrality under the circumstances appears insufficient. Should she join the London hears that the Turks have already crossed the Egyptian border. The Ambassadors of the allied powers asked for their passports, and left the capital of the Porte, according to an official announcement from Bordeaux.

The French War Office announces that violent attacks made by the Germans in France yesterday were repulsed, and at several points the Allies made marked advances. In Belgium the German Army resumed its assaults near Ypres, but were repulsed, the Allies regaining ground they lost on Saturday.

The Germans report that the advance of their army in Belgium has been made more difficult by the flooding of the Yser River and the Ypres Canals. Despite this, however, it is stated that the Germans have made gains near Ypres, capturing many prisoners and guns. An advance westward of Lille is reported.

The Russian official bulletin tells of the advance of the victorious army along the whole front beyond the Vistula River. Successes are also mentioned in Galicia, and against Austrians who descended from the Carpathians.

Berlin states that the battle against the Russians is still indecisive. Vienna, on the other hand, announces that a new battle has developed in Russian Poland, and that all attacks against the Austro-German positions have been repulsed.

From Tokio comes word that the shells of the allied fleet and land forces have set fire to Tsing-tau, which is being ably defended by the Germans.

GERMANS FACE FLOOD AND FIRE

DEADLIEST BATTLE YET

Searchlights Aid Cannon and Rifles in Beating Back Valorous Invaders.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

NORTHEASTERN FRANCE, Midnight, Friday, Oct. 30, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The battle of Flanders has now been in progress for sixteen days. Though at the moment at which I write the stupendous struggle cannot be said to have reached its conclusion, I think it may be safely stated that the result is no longer in any doubt, and that the situation can be summed up in concise form.

The German raid on the three coast towns of this part of France—Dunkirk, Calais, and Boulogne—has not only been frustrated, but the would-be raiders have been punished in a manner which cannot fail to have a tremendous effect on the morale of the entire German Army and on the whole German plan of campaign.

Last night reports from the front spoke of a lull in the titanic struggle. The Allies were said to be in impregnable positions, and fighting with magnificent élan. The Germans were struggling with the valor of desperation. Now and then, with superb dash and with high bravery they pushed forward here and there, only to be driven back. Again and again they returned to the charge. The long line swayed and reformed itself; it twisted and straightened again, but it held everywhere.

Thursday's sun sank, and the two wearied armies welcomed the darkness. Here and there under its cover the Germans abandoned lines of trenches; but this did not mean retreat. Before the morning light illuminated the field of carnage the guns were at it again with redoubled vigor, shaking the windows of houses within a radius of twenty miles and waking the sleepers.

Reinforced, Germans Attack.

The artillery duel opened another terrible day. Hardly was it light when great masses of Germans were attacking once more. Undoubtedly extremely strong reinforcements had arrived. It was not merely a local attack; it extended along the whole front in Belgium and then spread itself away beyond Lille, to the south and southwest of which it raged with particular violence.

I think it may be said that for the time being the battle of Flanders, renewed in this manner, partook of the nature of a diversion, while a desperate effort was being made to penetrate the Allies' line in the La Bassée canal region, in pursuance of the German plan of reaching the coast first at the unfortified town of Boulogne.

However that may be, the day on the Flanders front saw as savage fighting as any of the fifteen that had gone before it.

The battle of Flanders will undoubtedly go down in history as the most sanguinary in the first three months of the war. Before the struggle for the road to Calais is ended—and ended I am sure it will be at an early date—the battle will almost certainly be marked down in history with the hideous fame of the bloodiest in history. The slaughter on the Marne and the Aisne pales before that on the undulating country-side of Flanders. It is indeed doubtful if the number of those who have perished will ever be exactly reckoned.

Those who have been in the battle tell me the grimmest stories of the slaughter of the past week. The fields and swelling seaside dunes are littered with the dead. Death has come in wholesale fashion and filled the trenches. The Yser—a name always to be remembered in history—has, it can be said without exaggeration, run with blood. The canals in some places can be [illegible] with dead bodies. The area [illegible] Nieuport [illegible] Dixmude [illegible] which [illegible] thick with corpses and made muddy with the splash of shells.

Caught Between Fire and Water.

It was a terrible sight, an officer tells me, to see the Germans caught in their intrenchments when the flood came rushing in upon them. Just at that time the fire from the fleet and from the batteries of the allied forces was increased very greatly in intensity. On the edge of the flooded area infantry were at work with bullet and bayonet. Between fire and water, in a tornado of terror, which no one who saw it can ever possibly wipe out of his memory, trench after trench was taken, and a deep wedge was driven into the German positions.

I talked with a soldier of the Black Watch. "It's hell back there," he said. He sat down, and we listened to the booming of the guns. He told me how the guns of the monitors raked the trenches.

"Why," he said, "there have been more shells thrown between the sea and Dixmude during the last week than were fired during the whole of the Boer war. I was in one trench which was charged by the Germans fifteen times in two days and a night and without success. After that it was simply impossible to charge any more, as the ground was strewn so thickly with dead bodies. Seven of the charges were made at night, and during the last six or seven days most of the heaviest fighting has been done after dark. Those Germans are brave—one must say that. They come on again and again, and in such numbers! But when they see the glint of the British bayonets they simply turn and run."

Desperate Night Attacks.

The severest fights of the long battle have been night encounters and charges. The artillery fire both from sea and land has exceeded in intensity that of any previous engagement of the war. English artillery has done extraordinarily effective work. Captured German officers express their surprise at the volume of the fire from the English positions and at its amazing accuracy.

Belgian and French officers have given me vivid accounts of the German night attacks. They were very severe tests for the men in the trenches, but not on a single occasion has a success crowned an effort of that kind. The scenes in the searchlight-streaked darkness are eerie in the extreme. Shells, shrapnel, and bullets roar and whistle through the night. The men fire into the darkness. The charging Germans rush forward, not seeing a yard in front of them; then the searchlight flashes and flares, revealing the oncoming foemen, a shower of lead and a rain of shrapnel burst upon them; in the livid light they fall in heap after heap, then fade away, followed into their trenches by the searchlight's glare.

The other side sends out its men. There is a strange silence, and they come upon deserted trenches. The light shifts forward again to guide the cannon fire as they rake the trenches and shelter to which the enemy has retired. Again there is a charge, which dies away as those before it did. Again the trenches are abandoned; then again, perhaps, a line of trenches will be recovered by a tremendous effort, and upon it the British and French artillery will rain death and destruction.

So the battle goes on: every yard of ground is won with tremendous effort and lost at appalling cost.

Germans Intrench to the Rear.

CALAIS, Nov. 1.—All yesterday the battle in Flanders continued with almost unabated fury. Time and again during the past two days the Germans have succeeded in throwing forces across the Yser Canal, but on every occasion those have been hurled back.

The carnage of this part of the field has been frightful, and all the officers and men with whom I have had an opportunity of speaking declared that the striking force of the Germans has for the moment almost ceased.

It is reported, however, that reinforcements are being pushed up and that strong defensive positions are being prepared between the present line and Brussels. Around the capital particularly is the work of making intrenchments being feverishly pushed forward, so though the dash on Calais may be considered as frustrated and the coast towns as safe, severe fighting will certainly take place.

The desperation of the Germans shows clearly how important to them is success in this region. I think it may now be stated that success has been denied them.

Some refugees who have recently come from the district between Ypres and Roulers tell me that the villages between those two places are simply heaps of blackened ruins. It is impossible to say what the losses on the side of the allied forces are.

The wounded of the three nations are taken to different bases, and as the attacks have mainly been made by the Germans on particularly strong defensive positions, our total killed and wounded can only be a fraction of the losses sustained by the invaders.

YPRES OR RETREAT?

Kaiser's Intercepted Wireless Said to Stake All on Town's Capture.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUNKIRK, Nov. 1, (Dispatch to The London Daily Mail.)—It is reported here that one of the Allies' posts has intercepted a personal wireless message from the Kaiser to a German General—I believe the Duke of Württemberg—telling him that it is absolutely necessary that Ypres be taken before Nov. 1; otherwise "we shall have to withdraw behind the Rhine."

TWO VILLAGES RETAKEN

Allies' Forces Said to Have Reached Leffinghe, Close to Ostend.

BERLIN REPORTS PROGRESS

Admits "Difficulties" on Yser, but Says Troops Are Advancing Near Ypres and Lille.

PARIS, Nov. 1, 11:04 P. M.—The following official communication was issued here tonight:

In Belgium there is nothing new to report.

During today we have repulsed violent attacks of the enemy in the vicinity of Lihons, Lequesnoy-en-Santerre, Vailly on the Aisne, and in the Bois de la Grurie, in the Argonne Forest.

To the north of Souain we have continued to make slight progress.

In the Vosges, through our offensive movements we have taken possession of the heights of Verzinee de Sainte Marie.

The official statement, issued in the afternoon, said:

There is nothing new to report on the Nieuport and Dixmude front.

The Germans have continued their fierce attacks throughout the region to the north, east, and south of Ypres. All these attacks have been repulsed, and we have made slight progress to the north of Ypres and advanced perceptibly to the eastward of this locality.

At daybreak hostile forces debouching from the Lys succeeded in seizing Hollebecke and Messines, but these two villages were retaken toward evening by vigorous counter-attacks on the part of the allied forces.

On the rest of the battle front yesterday was marked by violent cannonading and several unsuccessful counter-attacks of the enemy, which were intended to recover the ground conquered by us during the last few days.

The struggle is still very violent in the Argonne region, where the Germans, however, have made no progress.

According to statistics furnished by our service in the rear, 7,083 German prisoners were interned during the week of Oct. 14-20 alone. These figures do not include the convalescent wounded in our field hospitals nor the detachments which are ready to be sent from the front to the rear.

Berlin Reports Progress.

BERLIN, Nov. 1, (via London.)—The German Army Headquarters issued the following communication this morning:

The operations in Belgium have been rendered difficult, owing to inundations of the Yser and the Ypres Canals by the destruction of the sluices at Nieuport. Our troops have advanced near Ypres. At least 600 prisoners were captured; also some British guns.

The forces fighting to the westward of Lille also have made progress.

Many prisoners were taken near Vailly—about 1,500. In the region of Verdun and Toul there has been only insignificant fighting.

ADVANCING ALLIES ARE CLOSE TO OSTEND

Have Reached Leffinghe, 3 1-2 Miles Away—Submarines Halted at Bruges.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ON THE DUTCH FRONTIER, Nov. 1, (Dispatch to The London Daily Mail.)—After enormous losses, the Germans have been driven further back along the coast and the Allies have reached Leffinghe, three and one-half miles south-southwest of Ostend.

A submarine in sections arrived at Bruges this morning.

LONDON, Monday, Nov. 2.—A Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam says a report, received from Flushing, states that heavy gun firing was heard all Sunday near the Dutch frontier.

The dispatch adds that it is reported that the Allies have occupied Mariakerke, southwest of Ostend.

The Exchange Telegraph Company's correspondent at The Hague sends the following:

"Several trains filled with cannon and [illegible] bound from Germany to the Belgian coast and destined for the proposed attack on the English coast, have passed Liége, but have been stopped at Bruges until further notice, the attack on England having been postponed until the present battle is decided.

"Germany has prohibited the importation of Dutch newspapers into any part of the German Empire."

A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Amsterdam says:

"The Handelsblad says that all the German attacks yesterday north of Nieuport were repulsed, and in some places they were forced back several kilometers, while the Allies on the left wing advanced to Middelkerke. The whole coast line occupied by the Germans is strongly fortified, and trenches have been thrown up near Knocke.

"The way to Bruges is now open to the Allies, owing to their recapture of Roulers, and the Germans are digging new trenches behind Ghent with feverish energy. To do this is to announce their retreat." This statement is made in The Observer in a dispatch dated "Near the Franco-Belgian Frontier." The message continues:

"Their (the Germans') losses have been enormous. A German officer captured yesterday estimates that there have been 150,000 killed or wounded since the occupation of Ostend, in northwest Flanders, alone. Whole batteries and battalions have been annihilated by the shell fire from the warships. Thousands have been drowned as the result of the opening of the dikes. In hand-to-hand fighting the German losses have far exceeded those of the Allies. Thousands of bodies of Germans floating on the inland sea bear bayonet wounds.

"Only the main roads and railroad tracks remain exposed above the flooded area. The shattered German regiments are having no time to reform and amalgamate. They are abandoning their wounded, guns, and transports. Unless their fleet comes out to create a diversion they will be driven from the Belgian coast within a week."

POOR CHANCE OF INVASION.

British Expert Says England Must Make Ready at All Events.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Nov. 2.—A military expert discussing the possibilities of the invasion of England says: "If Germany thinks that there is a sporting chance of being able to land an army on British soil she is very likely to take it. German militarism would willingly sacrifice a quarter of a million men in order to be able to ravage a slice of England as Belgium has been ravaged.

"The men may be sent, though I do not think that they will succeed in landing as a complete and effective fighting force. It would be foolish, however, on our part to refuse to contemplate the possibility of a successful attempt. We must insist that those who rule us shall make every preparation to meet such a contingency. Above all, we must insist upon knowing what each of us personally and individually will have to do and demand facilities for preparing ourselves for whatever task may be allotted to us.

"The authorities must clearly understand this fact: that against an invader we shall all fight. If no ordinary weapons of war are available, we shall fight with shotguns, pistols, and pikes. If no organization exists to direct our efforts and make the best of our fighting powers, we shall just go out and fight as our instincts guide us. We shall go out to kill and be killed until no enemy is left in the land.

"Such ferocious behavior may seem to be quite foreign to the nature of peaceful English citizens, yet that is how we should behave, and the result would be slaughter such as the world has never seen—war unmitigated in its effects by any of the conventions made by civilized man."

GERMANS ARE REINFORCED.

Big Battle Appears to be Developing in Middelkerke Region.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 31, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The stubborn efforts made by Germany to recross the Yser Canal after their first repulse have not succeeded. An English infantry brigade did brilliant work in clearing the region at the bayonet's point and driving the Germans from their trenches. Moreover, the naval guns did deadly work on the Germans' flight. Their losses were severe, and their dead lay in heaps. The Germans attempted to advance along the coast beyond Nieuport, but were repulsed.

It appears that a big battle is developing in the region of Middelkerke, Wilskerke, Slype, and Westende. The Germans have moved up reinforcements, but it is not believed that they will be able to make good their grave losses. Every day long trains are conveying wounded from Ostend, Bruges, and Ghent. I learn that several German soldiers have been arrested in Ghent, dressed in civilian clothes, so as to enable them to desert. The marines particularly are said to be in low spirits, as they are not accustomed to fight in trenches in the field.

As to the feeling among the German troops in general, the following remarkable report has been telegraphed from Roosendaal to The Nieuport Rotterdamsche Courant:

"A doctor from Antwerp said yesterday that three German officers begged civilian clothes of him in order to pass across the Dutch frontier. This morning 300 German soldiers of the garrison troops in Antwerp failed to answer to their names. It is presumed that all deserted."

A telegram from Oostburg says that fugitives arriving there said that the Germans had set fire to the pier at Blankenberghe. They added that the Germans were retiring.

GERMAN FORCE CUT OFF?

Rumor of Many Thousands of Prisoners Taken in Belgium.

NORTHERN FRANCE, Nov. 1, (Dispatch to The London Times.)—A report has just reached me that as the result of the blowing up of a railway bridge by a Belgian cyclist corps a very large German force was cut off from the main army and surrendered in a body. WAR'S CHANGES SINCE OCT. 1.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 1, (Dispatch to The London Chronicle.)—Comparisons of conditions a month ago and now made here show that on Oct. 1 the centre of fighting was about sixty miles from Paris, while on Nov. 1 it is 155 miles away. The Allies' position, indeed, is much better than it was a week ago when—there is now no need to disguise the fact—matters were in a critical state.

Paris is animated with a spirit of calm confidence. The Chambers will be convoked in special session about Nov. 15. Three days before the opening session the Budget Committee will meet to examine the financial proposals, which the Government will present to Parliament.

GERMAN LOSS NEAR NIEUPORT.

Belgian War Office Says the Allies Took Many Prisoners.

HAVRE, Nov. 1.—The Belgian War Office today issued the following official communication:

This morning the enemy, who still occupied a part of Ramscapelle, was repulsed beyond the railway line between Nieuport and Dixmude. They lost a great number of prisoners and left many wounded on the field.

On the other parts of our front the enemy made no further infantry attacks. The bombardment was rather violent at Nieuport during part of the day and intermittent on other points of our position.

The inundation between the Yser and the railway line between Nieuport and Dixmude has made the ground marshy and the trenches of the enemy unbearable.

To the south of Dixmude, between Lingbem and Passchendaele, the French troops have continued their offensive movement. Pelkappelle was completely surrounded last night.

At the south of Passchendaele the English troops were violently attacked by German reinforcements, but had taken at the end of the day the ground they had been forced to cede in the neighborhood of Gheluvelt.

On several other parts of the fighting line the English have repulsed attacks by the Germans, inflicting upon them important losses.

On the other part of the front there is no general action, but slight offensive movements have been repulsed by the Allies and by the enemy.

The French made progress almost everywhere, especially on the heights of the right bank of the Aisne, below Solssons, and on both sides of the Meuse at the north of Verdun.

The troops of the Third Reserve German Corps have received supplementary men since their departure from Antwerp. A company of the German Regiment No. 35 has received ninety men, and a company of Regiment No. 12 forty-five men. All these men are from 33 to 35 years of age. They appear to have little spirit.

INDIAN TROOPS TOOK SHELLS FOR FIREWORKS

Their First Experience in Trenches in Belgium Described in an Officer's Letter

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Nov. 2.—The London Morning Post prints an extract from a letter of a cavalry officer, giving an account of how the Indian troops behaved in their first encounter with shell fire. Although a cavalry officer, the writer was serving in the trenches. In his letter, dated Oct. 24 and written from Belgium, he says:

"Night before last we were told that the regiment was going to be relieved by the Indians. I was delighted till I heard that my troops were to stay out to give them moral support, as it was their first go—a compliment, I suppose, although I didn't think so at the time. It was the most weird sight I've ever seen.

"There were six farms and a windmill blazing, all at slight by shell fire, when these fellows, with turbans and with flashing eyes and teeth, came up out of the darkness. The undefeated dragoons, of course, became firm friends with them at once. French, Belgians, Indians—they make pals with them all.

"Well, these natives had hardly got into the trenches on either side of me when the Germans opened fire. It was the worst half hour I've ever spent. As, of course, I couldn't make them understand and as they had never seen shells before, I didn't know what they would do. They behaved splendidly, and I think they thought the shells were fireworks let off for their benefit.

"The officer in charge of them told me that morning that he was most frightfully anxious as to how they'd do, but they shouted with glee when they saw a German and let him know what good shots they are. In the middle of the attack one native hurled himself into my trench and spoke excitedly to me. Of course, I couldn't make out what he wanted, but thought he meant a doctor for some one, as he kept pointing at a cartridge, so I sent for him, but when he arrived I discovered it was more ammunition he wanted and got the details.

TALE OF A CHASSEUR WHO SLEW 40 FOES

Disturbed by Their Singing, He Stole Up With Rifle and Enfiladed Them in Trench.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—An attendant on an English hospital motor car bringing wounded from the firing line told me today of a remarkable instance of French heroism. Among the wounded Friday night was a young Frenchman with a gold medal about which he refused to speak and a slight wound in the foot about which he made considerable fuss. Disgusted by these complaints among so much suffering silently borne, my informant elicited from the youth's comrades the following story, which subsequently was verified fully:

At a point where the French trenches were barely fifty yards from the enemy's a party of Germans sang songs during the night which infuriated the French—"They wouldn't let us sleep with their howling," as one of the French soldiers put it. Finally one little chasseur, crying, "I will silence them," seized a rifle and disappeared before any one could detain him.

After a moment's silence came the crackle of rapid firing, followed by German shrieks and wild volleys. The firing continued, accompanied by shouts in French as from an officer directing an attack; then in gutteral tones: "Stop! Stop! We surrender." A few minutes later the little chasseur reappeared escorting several unarmed Germans. He said: "You can occupy the trench; there's nothing but corpses left to defend it."

Advancing, the French discovered forty dead Germans in the trench, killed by the little chasseur, firing from the end, whither he had crawled unnoticed. In some cases the same bullet pierced several Germans.

When the remnant had surrendered, he ordered the Germans to pile their arms outside the trench. The last to emerge was an officer, who, seeing the Frenchman alone, tried to seize his revolver; the Frenchman bayonetted him through the head.

The chasseur was promoted and rewarded with a medal by Gen. Manoeuy, who pinned the medal on personally, saying: "It is a reward for a daring act, worthy of the emulation of the rest of the army."

The chasseur escaped absolutely unscathed, but in a subsequent skirmish received the flesh wound, which occasioned such loud lamentations.

ORDER PRIZE COURT IN KROONLAND CASE

Action Follows Instructions to Our Ambassador — England Fears Copper Is for Germany.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Consul Sprague, at Gibraltar, today notified the State Department that the steamship Kroonland of the Red Star Line, detained with a cargo of copper and rubber, and 1,000 passengers, at that port, had been ordered before the British Prize Court at that place. The news followed the announcement yesterday by the department that it had instructed Ambassador Page at London to inform the British Government that the United States considered that both the Kroonland and her cargo should be released at once unless investigation on the part of the British authorities disclosed facts in relation to the detention of the vessel and cargo other than those known to the United States.

It is understood that the British Government has directed that the Kroonland's case be expedited before the Prize Court. The Kroonland was carrying goods for Naples. Before ordering the steamship's cargo before the Prize Court the British Government sought to obtain assurances from the Italian Government that the cargo would not be exported from Italy to Germany or Austria. It has been charged that Genoa furnishes a route for shipments into Germany and Austria, and the suspicion of the British Government was that the Kroonland's cargo ultimately might reach Genoa for such transshipment.

TURKISH TROOPS INVADE EGYPT

Austrians and Germans, Rumania is almost certain to declare for the Allies, and Greece, even before this, may decide to take her revenge on Turkey. In fact, it is believed that her treaty with Servia would compel her to take action should the latter be attacked by Bulgaria or Turkey.

Italy, too, is brought nearer to war by the entrance of Turkey, for she has large Mediterranean possessions, to protect which would not be easy with a strengthened Turkey.

RUSSIA STILL HOLDS OFF.

Turkey Has a Chance to Disavow Hostile Acts in Black Sea.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 1, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The situation in connection with Russia and Turkey still remains obscure.

Russia has recalled all her diplomatic and Consular representatives from Turkey, but has not yet proceeded to acts of war.

The conditions on which Turkey may avoid war include, of course, a full apology and damages, with the dismissal of the offenders and probably all other Germans in the Ottoman services by land or sea.

The cruisers Goeben and Breslau remain, in the eyes of the Allies, German, not Turkish ships, and will be dealt with as such according to the general usages of war. That is, they must be disarmed and interned in a neutral port for the duration of the war.

As regards the Dardanelles, it is probable that the existing regulations will be left untouched in case of the best. In the worst, of course, the whole Eastern question comes up for final settlement.

The allied Governments have, doubtless, jointly considered every possible question that can arise out of this war, but it is too early for public discussion.

If Turkey fails to get out of the German clutches and war is inevitable, the Dardanelles is one of the main points for settlement. Upon possible differences of opinion between the Allies on this point Germany is basing all that part of her plans which depends upon the embroilment of Turkey in the world war. As on every previous occasion, her calculations here are at fault.

When this war is over there will be two great waterways at opposite extremities of the European continent whose future status must be settled as England, France, and Russia may decide. There seems to be no reason why both should not be settled on the same lines—namely, handed over to neutral small States and guaranteed open in perpetuity for the commerce of the world.

The Dardanelles and the Kiel Canal will thus serve the purposes of peace and the prosperity of humanity at large.

ENVOYS OF ALLIES DEPART.

Leave Constantinople — British, French, and Russians Quit Turkey.

BORDEAUX, Nov. 1.—It is officially announced that the French, British, and Russian Ambassadors to Turkey asked for their passports yesterday and left Constantinople today.

The American Ambassador, Henry Mergenthau, has taken charge of French interests in Turkey.

PARIS, Monday, Nov. 2, 9:15 A. M.—The Turkish Ambassador has not yet left his residence here.

At the Turkish Embassy it is stated that no news has been received from Constantinople.

The Ambassador has refused to see newspaper men.

All the Mohammedan newspapers in the Caucasus are energetically denouncing Turkey's aggression against Russia and pledging the loyalty of the Caucasian Mohammedans to the Russian Government.

The Russian military officers are being overwhelmed with offers of Cossack volunteers, who, although they are exempt from military service, desire to serve.

LONDON, Monday, Nov. 2.—Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent sends a telegram received from Berlin, which says that during the last few days British, French, and Russian subjects have hastily left Constantinople.

"The Russian Ambassador," the dispatch from Berlin says, "advised all Russian subjects to depart immediately from Constantinople, and the British Ambassador sent his family home.

"Many enthusiastic demonstrations have taken place in the streets of Constantinople.

"The Sultan has notified all the powers that the British attitude toward Egypt prevented the execution of his sovereign rights, and that the Khedive will demand of Great Britain an explanation of her actions."

BULGARIA IS WARNED

If She Attacks Servia Her Ports Will Be Shelled by Russians.

ROME, Nov. 1.—A dispatch received here from Athens says:

"Since the beginning of the war Petrograd has admonished Bulgaria that if Bulgaria, profiting by the situation, attacks Servia, the Russian fleet in the Black Sea will punish Bulgaria by bombarding her coast towns."

ALL IN GERMAN UNIFORMS.

A Captain's Statement as to the Turkish Cruiser Breslau's Crew.

PETROGRAD, (via London,) Nov. 1.—The Russian steamship Jerusalem, which has arrived at Odessa from Constantinople, reports that she was overtaken by a Turkish squadron, headed by the former German cruiser Breslau, on the night before the Turkish ships bombarded the Russian ports.

The Turkish battleship Turgut Reis ran across the bow of the Russian steamer, causing her to reverse her engines.

It was seen from the steamer's deck, according to the Captain, that the entire crew of the Breslau were in German uniforms.

Before leaving the Bosporous the Jerusalem was stopped by two blank shots and held for six hours. Later she received puzzling wireless orders, including one directing her to proceed to the Crimea. The genuineness of this was doubted by the Captain, who disregarded it, and later found that the message had not been sent by his company.

BERLIN, (By way of Amsterdam and London,) Nov. 1.—A dispatch to the Tageblatt from Constantinople says that the Turkish fleet when it bombarded Novorossysk, on the Black Sea, sank fourteen Russian transports and destroyed several warehouses, oil reservoirs, and a wireless station.

The Russian artillery, both at Novorossysk and at Odessa, proved ineffective, it is added. At Odessa the Turkish shells set on fire five oil tanks and damaged five transports.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The Turkish cruiser Hamidieh, which bombarded the Russian port of Novorossysk last Thursday, flew the Russian flag as she approached the city, according to the Petrograd correspondent of the Reuter Telegram Company.

SAY RUSSIA BEGAN IT.

A German Report Which Is Indignantly Denied in Petrograd.

BERLIN, Nov. 1, (by Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—An official Turkish report forwarded from Constantinople by the correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung says the Russians opened hostilities on Oct. 29 by firing upon a portion of the Turkish fleet after having for some time interfered with the evolutions of the warships.

"The communications from Berlin and Vienna agencies saying that the Russian fleet opened hostilities against the Turkish squadron are mere inventions. They are trying manifestly to lead into error public opinion in Constantinople, which is purposely being kept in ignorance concerning the perfidious attack on our coast by Turkish warships under the command of German officers.

"The same proceedings were employed when Germany declared war on us, it being said that Russian soldiers invaded German territory, while, as a matter of fact, not a single Russian soldier crossed the frontier before war was declared.

"Previous to the Turkish hostilities our fleet undertook no action. It is evident that if the initiative had been taken by the Russian fleet the bombarding of the ports and the sudden attack of the Turkish fleet could not have taken place."

MORE WORK FOR OUR ENVOYS.

Warring Powers Place Their Turkish Interests in Their Hands.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Great Britain and France have placed their interests in Turkey in the hands of the American Embassy. Italy is looking after Russian interests there.

Servia has also asked the United States, through Ambassador Morgenthau, to look after her diplomatic interests at Constantinople, "in case of war with Turkey." Servia's request is regarded as particularly significant, indicating her intention to throw her forces into the field against the Ottoman Empire once more.

What nation will care for Turkish interests in Russia is not known here, though it is believed that the United States will be intrusted with this task, as has been the case with practically all the belligerents in Europe.

The Turkish Consul at Havre has turned over his Consulate to the United States and is preparing, with other Turkish Consuls, to leave France.

In another message Mr. Morgenthau stated that the Turkish Minister of the Interior had informed him that Turkish warships within the last three days had bombarded Sevastopol.

No mention was made in Mr. Morgenthau's dispatches of any declaration of war.

Communication with Constantinople was interrupted late last night, and the last message, which was dated 11 P. M., Oct. 31, referred only to fiscal matters of the embassy, mentioning incidentally that conditions in the Turkish capital were quiet.

The only positive statement that war had been officially declared between Russia and Turkey came in a private message from a business house in Constantinople to its home office in New York, transmitted by the American Embassy yesterday. State Department officials explained today that they had always permitted American embassies or legations in neutral countries to transmit cipher messages, in order to facilitate communication through belligerent countries, but only with full knowledge by the American diplomatic officials of the contents of such messages. The presumption of the officials is that the American Ambassador filed a similar message to the State Department which has been delayed in transit, as has been the case with many messages from Constantinople.

EXPECTS MUCH FROM TURKEY.

"But We Are Not Boasting," Says the Cologne Gazette.

BERLIN, (via Rome,) Nov. 1.—"The entrance of Turkey into the war was certainly not due merely to her admiration of Germany, although she may well have realized that her only real friend in Europe is Germany, which will not permit Turkey to go under, but will protect her against being swamped by Russia," says the Cologne Gazette in commenting on the situation. The paper continues:

"Turkey brings the first assistance for Germany and Austria. We are ready to admit that we expect much from the intervention of Turkey, but we are not boasting. A few weeks will show whether her intervention will result in materially improving the position of the two central powers."

Matter furnished to the press from official sources says:

"Russia by threats is now attempting to incite Bulgaria to make war on Turkey. Bulgaria is firmly resisting this coercion."

RUSSIANS REGAIN MORE OF POLAND

BATTLES NEARER THE RIVER

Advances on East Prussian Line Are Announced with Failure of German Offensive.

VIENNA CLAIMS A VICTORY

After Stubborn Fight in Galicia — Battle Still Undecisive, Berlin's Only Comment.

On the East Prussian front our troops are progressing in the region of Vladislawow (Government of Suwalki,) and the Forest of Romentin.

The German attacks in the region of Bakalargewo on Oct. 31 have ceased, following terrible losses suffered by the enemy.

Beyond the Vistula we have advanced victoriously along the whole front. We have occupied Piotrkow, Opoczno, and Ozarow. Battles took place on the roads leading to Opatow, where we routed the rear guard of the enemy. We took 400 prisoners and captured 6 rapid-fire guns, convoys, and provisions.

Upon the San River, near Lezachovo, a Russian regiment which had intrenched itself step by step reached the enemy's position, and profiting by the panic among the Austrians, took by assault a temporary fort. Five officers and 500 soldiers were taken prisoners, and 5 rapid-fire guns were captured.

A column of the enemy which descended from the Carpathians and fortified itself near Nadworna, was attacked and put to flight.

VIENNA, (via Amsterdam and London,) Nov. 1.—The War Office tonight issued the following official statement:

A new battle has developed in Russian Poland. All attacks on our positions have been repulsed.

The stubborn battle which had been raging several days in the district northeast of Turka and south of the Stry-Sambor line, (Galicia,) resulted yesterday in a complete victory for our arms. Two infantry divisions and one rifle brigade of the enemy were dislodged from the position.

Czernowitz is still held by our troops. The Russian artillery fire is directed especially against the residence of the Greek Archbishop, but has produced little effect.

BERLIN, (via London,) Nov. 1.—German Army Headquarters says:

In the northeast the battle against the Russians is still indecisive.

NEARING THE WARTA LINE.

Germans Retreating Rapidly—Desperate East Prussian Battle.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 1, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—On the Vistula front, the Russian pursuit continues with full success. The retreating Germans are now within twenty miles of the Warta River. Thus over execrable clay roads the Germans have marched about fifteen miles a day for a week.

The Russians have discovered huge mounds having the appearance of common graves, but when examined these were found to contain whole parks of heavy and even light artillery which the Germans were unable to carry off.

Petrograd is momentarily expecting intelligence that the Germans have been caught on the Warta River and either rushed past their last line of intrenchments on Russian territory or brought to stand at the river itself, the bridges over which have probably been cut by Russian cavalry and volunteers who are far in advance of the Russian main armies.

The distance between Lodz and the Vistula is sixty miles, and represents the front of Russia's pursuing forces.

On the line of the Austrian retreat the Russians had taken up to the 28th eighty-two officers, 8,000 men, and twenty-four Maxims, all belonging to the Fifth Hungarian Corps.

When it became evident that the campaign was lost on the Vistula front, the Germans on the East Prussian line made and continued most persistent attemps to break the defense of the Russians there, either in the hopes of coming to the rescue of the retreating corps by covering their left flank or to create a diversion of the Russian forces.

The fighting there has been obstinate to a degree exceeding anything yet experienced, but the Germans have entirely failed to make an impression on the Russian defense. In some places the trenches are not a couple of hundred yards apart and the Germans, making repeated attempts to take the Russian intrenchments, have left such heaps of dead before them as to interfere with the Russian fire.

The desperation of the last days at length reached a point at which the Germans advanced to their heaps of dead and used them as breastworks. Another definite sign of the desperate straits of Germany on this front is the fact that among the troops opposed to the Russians near Bakalargewo, which number several divisions with a disproportionately large number of heavy artillery, are not only regiments of active and reserve formations, but also garrison troops from Königsberg, and even from Posen, 300 miles away. The Russians have begun a forward move along this front.

"It is semi-officially announced that in the German attack on Bakalargewo, on the East Prussian front, which began last Tuesday, several divisions, supported by numerous heavy guns, participated. These included parts of the Königsberg and even the Posen garrisons.

"Between Gorbatkalizh and the Vistula the Russians captured, in the four days ending Wednesday last, 82 officers and 8,000 men, belonging chiefly to the Fifth Hungarian Corps. The Russians also took 24 Maxims.

"The Austrians are retreating between the Vistula and Radom, having separated themselves from the Germans, who are retreating in a more westerly direction, but the Seventh Austrian Cavalry Division is covering the German retreat.

"On the East Prussian front at several points the distance between the two opposing forces is only 200 to 500 yards.

"Near Warsaw recently peasants found huge mounds surmounted by brosses and German helmets which are used to indicate graves.

"Being suspicious, the peasants dug into the mounds and found German quick firers and ammunition buried in them."

BLOW UP CATTARO FORT.

Montenegrins Bombard Port—Advance in Herzegovina.

PARIS, Monday, Nov. 2.—A dispatch to the Havas Agency from Cettinje, Montenegro, dated Sunday, says:

"The Montenegrin artillery yesterday continued the bombardment of Fort Vermatz, near Cattaro, Dalmatia. A shell penetrated the munitions depot, blowing up the fort.

"The Montenegrins marching on Gasko, in Herzegovina, near the Montenegrin frontier, yesterday occupied an important position at Kobila, inflicting an appreciable loss on the enemy."

BULGARIA TO BE NEUTRAL.

She Will Reject All Suggestions to Enter the War.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SOFIA, Nov. 1, (Dispatch to The London Times.)—I am informed on the highest authority that Bulgaria will maintain the strictest neutrality, rejecting all suggestions to embark on adventures in Macedonia, notwithstanding the unhappy condition of the population of that country.

Any course of action tending to bring this country into conflict with Great Britain or the Allies will be avoided, in the hope that her legitimate aspirations will be recognized by the powers of the Entente.

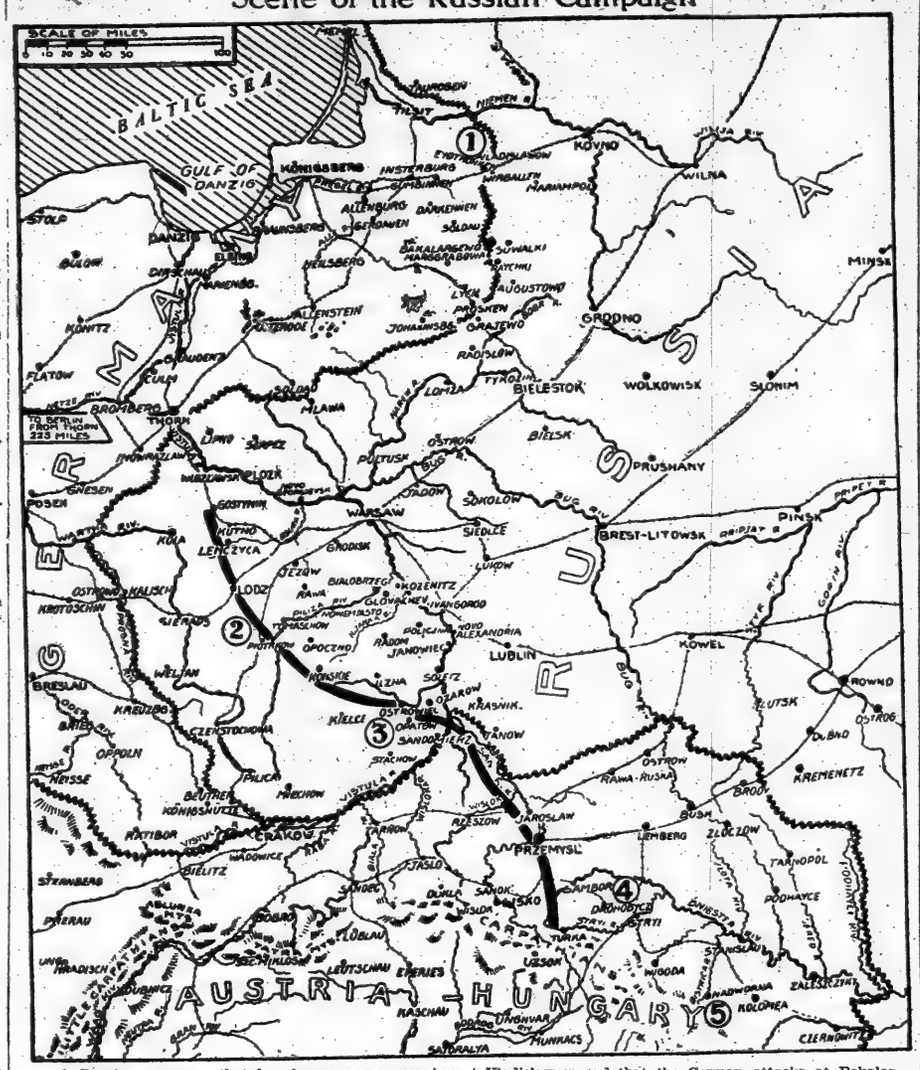
DENY PERSECUTION OF JEWS.

Russians Say Germans Exact Information from Them in Poland.

PETROGRAD, (via London,) Nov. 1.—A semi-official note denies the German allegations that Jews are being persecuted in Poland. The note points out that the war is being conducted by a united Russia, comprising all nationalities without exception.

"Unfortunately, in contravention of Article 44 of The Hague Convention," says the note, "the enemy's troops operating in Russian territory are exacting from the Jewish population information concerning our army and means of defense, thus making the population liable to inevitable responsibilities."

Scene of the Russian Campaign



1. Russia announces that her forces are progressing at Vladislawow and that the German attacks at Bokalargewo have ceased.
2. The front of the pursuing Russian army has reached Piotrkow.
3. Rearguard actions have taken place near Opatow.

5. An Austrian movement across the Carpathians has been checked at Nadworna, Petrograd reports.

(An Associate Editor of The Army and Navy Journal.)

The recapture of Hollebecke and Messines, south of Ypres, shows a repetition of the tactics that have marked the fighting in Belgium and France. When troops occupy a line as in the great battle in France they are not placed in a continuous line, shoulder to shoulder, but are massed in groups holding the various points of especial strength. These are selected at intervals of 100 yards to 400 yards, placed so that the fire of troops in the trenches can sweep all the intervening ground. These supporting points are then strengthened by double and treble lines of trenches, with deep cellars or bombproofs for the protection of the soldiers when off duty and for the storage of ammunition. The garrisons range from 250 men to 1,000, according to the importance of the position, which means that the immediate firing line requires about two men to a yard of total length to furnish a strong enough garrison to repel all ordinary attacks.

The supporting points may be considered as marking the main line of resistance. In order to reinforce them the artillery is placed from one-fourth mile to a mile in the rear, where it can be well concealed by the folds of the ground. Concealment has been found even more valuable than shelter for maintaining the service of the field guns. Each battery accordingly takes up a position where hills or woods or similar features act as a screen to hide its position, while the enemy's line is watched by observers well away from the battery, who telephone in any information discovered. Whenever any body of the hostile troops is located, a rapid computation determines the approximate setting of the guns in azimuth and elevation to deliver a fire that will reach the desired target. The observers telephone in after every shot the corrections that are needed, such as to shorten up the range or to change the aim to the right, giving the definite amount in accordance with the system by which the sights are graduated.

These two branches of the military service, the infantry in their redoubts and the artillery in their concealed positions, form the fighting line, or the line of resistance, for the battle front. The commander cannot, however, risk the outcome on his front line alone. He must retain in well-sheltered positions additional bodies of troops that can be sent to any position where reinforcements are needed. In order to be of prompt service, they must be held within three miles of the front, and as this is within range of the enemy's artillery, the reserves are sheltered by constructing in the reverse side of hills long lines of bombproofs, formed of excavated chambers roofed over with logs and covered with five feet of earth. When the enemy delivers an attack it often happens that the first line is overpowered. The reserves then rush in from both sides and bring an added pressure to bear upon the enemy's column that soon stops his advance, and that often drives his attack back clear of the original position.

This same principle of reserve forces held in hand to check the enemy's attacks, is carried out on a larger scale for each division of the armies. It is by the use of these forces that the German attack at Hollebecke was stopped after its first success, and that the Allies were able to recapture this town. With the large numbers of troops that are now massed in the fighting forces on both sides of the great battle in France, the minor successes reported from day to day have little influence upon the final outcome. The side that gains the priority in massing its strength for an attack at a particular point breaks through and advances for a few miles. The impetus of the attack is soon spent, while the reserves of the opponents rush in from both sides and exert a pressure that generally forces the assailant to abandon his advanced position. It is only by making such thorough preparations that any preliminary success can be followed up steadily for a campaign of ten days to two weeks that any important success can be gained by either side that will force the other to evacuate its present position.

The fighting in Russia has reached a most interesting stage, which can best be followed by locating on a map the positions now occupied by the contending armies. In the north the battle line lies on Russian territory just east of the German boundary and extends from the Memel River through Vladislawow, Wierballen, and Bakalargewo to Szczuczyn, twenty miles south of Lyck. The Germans have been forcing the fighting in this field for the last two weeks, since the Russians were forced to weaken their strength on this part of the line in order to mass troops in the vicinity of Warsaw. The Russians have been successful in holding back the German forces on the East Prussian border while waiting for the outcome of the more important fighting in Poland. The German plan to capture Warsaw and to line up their armies on a continuous front from the Carpathians to the Baltic Sea has been defeated by the Russian successes at Warsaw. The German retreat has been to the southwest, away from their troops in East Prussia. Their forces in Poland are thus deprived of support from the north and must sustain the full force of the armies that the Russians have concentrated in the effort to crush them.

The German line has now been forced back to a position which extends from the Vistula River, west of Plock, through Gostynin, Kutno, and Lodz, to Tomaszow, on the Piliza River. The Austro-German line to the south has also been further driven back, though it is still some twenty-five miles east of the northern wing. This part of the line at its northern end rests on the Piliza, near Novimiasto, and extends through Radom, Ostrowiec, and Opatow, to Sandomierz, at the junction of the San and the Vistula Rivers. The Russian success at Tarlow, in Poland, just west of Josefow, drove back the Austro-German armies on Oct. 30, and regained for the Russians the undisputed possession of both banks of the Vistula River from the Galician border to Warsaw.

In Galicia the conflict still follows the San River to Przemysl, and then runs nearly due south to Turka, on the Stryi River. Each day develops more clearly the importance of the success gained by the Russians, in this great battle. The outcome cannot yet be definitely predicted, for it depends upon the energy with which the Russians are able to follow up these preliminary advantages.

SAW THE HERMES HIT BY SUBMARINE BOLT

Writer Who Stood on French Shore Heard Guns as Ship's Crew Fought Unseen Foe.

NO WARNING OF THE ATTACK

Officers Knew Nothing of Enemy's Approach Until Dishes Were Hurled from Breakfast Table.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ON TOUR IN FRANCE, Oct. 31, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—I have just witnessed one of the most tragic things that can happen at sea—the sudden sinking of a great ship of war. While walking along the seashore listening to the throb of the guns fighting out the great battle of Flanders, I saw, in company with another newspaper correspondent, the appalling spectacle of the sinking of the light cruiser Hermes.

The weather was somewhat misty, but the ship could be plainly seen through our glasses, and for some time I stood watching her sailing along. Suddenly there rose from her side a dense cloud of black smoke, while I could also see the splashing of the waves against the vessel. The Hermes stopped, and there was heard what I took to be the rattle of guns.

It was a strange and bewildering sight. It was evident that something was happening, and the rattle of guns at an invisible enemy suggested at once that the vessel was in conflict with a submarine. My glasses, powerful though they were, failed to detect, however, the presence of any such enemy. For a few seconds the black pall of smoke hung about the stricken cruiser, and the Hermes turned her stern toward where I was standing. The good ship was evidently sinking bows first, for her stern towered up higher above the water. Then it disappeared slowly. It was as though a vessel with a high stern was fading over the horizon. Several other vessels, indistinctly seen in the mist, were to be seen standing by.

Meanwhile on shore, where the loss of the ship had been witnessed, help signals were hoisted, and presently two French torpedo boats, with full steam crowded on, rushed out to the spot where the Hermes had gone under. One could not help keeping one's eyes fixed on those hurrying little craft, knowing that a similar tragic fate might be awaiting them on their life-saving errand, but evidently the German submarine commander deemed his feat sufficient for the time being, and we watched the torpedo boats return in safety. Several fishing smacks lingered for a time on the spot.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Dr. Moffatt, surgeon of the British cruiser Hermes, which was sunk by a German submarine yesterday, speaking today at a recruiting meeting on the marine parade grounds at Dover, gave a brief story concerning the sinking of his vessel.

"We were all sitting at breakfast," said Dr. Moffatt, "and the first intimation we received that anything was wrong was when the plates on the table flew about the wardroom and our breakfasts fell into our laps. There was no panic. Every man flew to his station in good order. I went to the sick bay and saw the removal of the invalids, and then went on deck and reported that all the sick men had been put into boats."

Dr. Moffatt urged an immediate response to the call for men to support the King and the country.

The Hermes was sunk twelve miles east by southeast of Goodwin Sands, in the Straits of Dover, at 8:15 o'clock in the morning. Several torpedo boat destroyers and other vessels immediately rushed to the assistance of the wounded ship, which floated three-quarters of an hour after being struck, and then heeled over and sank.

In the meantime the destroyers rescued the greater number of the crew of 300 men, while other vessels searched the sea in an endeavor to find the submarine. Two men were killed by the explosion and nine were injured. About forty others are missing.

DUTCH ACCUSE GERMANS.

Say Soldiers Out of Uniform Tried to Cross Their Frontier.

ROTTERDAM, (via London,) Nov. 1.—Several hundred German soldiers, out of uniform, attempted to cross the Dutch frontier, but were turned back by the Dutch sentries, according to the Maasbode.

The Dutch Government has decided to increase the guard and exercise greater vigilance at all frontier villages.

GRANT ARMISTICE TO GEN. DE WET

Authorities Give Rebel Leader Five Days in Which to Make Peace.

INSURGENTS ARE BEATEN

British Force Defeats Independent Rebel Commando, Slaying 13 and Capturing 240.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Nov. 2.—A dispatch to The London Daily Mail from Durban says that a deputation left Harrismith on Saturday to interview Gen. De Wet in the vicinity of Frankfort.

Subsequently the Government at Pretoria granted a five days' armistice, presumably in order to arrange peace.

The inhabitants are composed, in the majority, of loyal Dutch.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Cape Town says:

"Col. Alberts has defeated the rebels in the Lichtenburg district of the Transvaal, killing thirteen, wounding thirty, and capturing 240. Among the captured is Commandant Claussens.

"Commandan De Villiers was out reconnoitering when he met a strong rebel commando with white flags attached to their rifles De Villiers approached the band, whereupon the rebels attacked him and captured 110 of his men.

"The rebels then advanced against Col. Alberts's force from two directions, but Alberts defeated them and chased them twenty miles across the border. In their flight the rebels discarded their carts and bicycles."

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

CAPE TOWN, Oct. 31, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—Notwithstanding the extreme reticence of Government news from the northern provinces, the opinion is held by the majority here that the crisis has passed and this time definitely. This does not mean that the danger has ended.

That cannot be said until De Wet's commando is broken up, but it has passed the maximum point, and it is felt that the Government's vigorous pursuit organization stands to it all the more as the commandos are now in the thickly populated districts, where the rebels can obtain neither food nor fresh horses.

The Government's action in declaring martial law in the districts where the rebellion is active has had a good effect. Many rebels have surrendered, and the Government's clemency in dealing with them is appreciated.

The Government's vigorous action and the extensive support it is receiving from the Dutch will make waverers realize what rebellion means.

Ability, leadership and resources, particularly in the way of supplies of arms and ammunition are all on the side of the Government. Further, if De Wet, Beyers and other leaders whose names are known here although they are not mentioned in official statements, cannot raise the people against the Government, nobody can.

The forces of Maritz and Beyers have broken themselves in flight. De Wet only remains in the field, and Dutchmen here believe that Hertzog is sincerely attempting to persuade the Free Staters in De Wet's command to lay down their arms. Hertzog is a fanatic, but is claimed to be an honest fanatic where his inordinate personal vanity is not touched, and he has great native shrewdness.

Advices from the Orange Free State indicate that Bloemfontein and also the southern and eastern portions of the province are sound. The danger zone is the northern part of the Free State, where De Wet is in the field. He has actually forced Englishmen to join his forces. As regards the Transvaal, my information suggests that the Government has the situation well in hand.

Disguised Englishwoman Dressed His Wound and Told Her Nationality

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ON THE BELGIAN FRONTIER, Saturday, Oct. 31, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—A vivacious English woman, the wife of a very well known officer bearing a famous name, today returned over the border into Holland, after an adventurous day's tour behind the German lines.

"I made up my mind to see for myself what was going on," she told me. "I was warned that if I went out in my usual clothes I should be seized as a spy; so I disguised myself as a Flemish peasant woman, with the assistance of the national costume—earrings, headdress, and everything complete, down to the very shoes—stained my face brown with a concoction of strong coffee, borrowed a pair of spectacles and a market basket, and set off across country on foot.

"I reached Bruges safely enough and with nothing untoward to mark my journey. Bruges I know well enough in ordinary times; but as the city was when I entered it I should not have recognised it. It was a city of supreme sadness, gloom, desolation, and pain. There were wounded Germans everywhere wandering about the streets aimlessly, apparently uncared for. Motor cars, vans, and all manner of vehicles were being used to hurry the wounded through and out of the town. The hospitals were overcrowded, and the less severe cases were left to take care of themselves.

"The town was placarded with notices forbidding any civilian to possess any kind of firearms, and ordering all householders to be indoors with all lights out by 9 o'clock. The revelry that has marked the conduct of German soldiers in other towns in their occupation was here totally absent. The soldiers moving in and out in constant procession all looked anxious, tired, and harassed, as though some dark fate which they could not understand was hanging over them. There was no hilarious forgathering at the cafés, no drinking, no uproarious laughter, but everything was strangely, almost uncannily quiet.

"The military commandant evidently noticed this, and it worried him. He ordered a regimental band to form in the Petit Place and play enlivening music. The band obeyed and began playing dolorous jigs with absolutely no jig to them. Finally the commandant stamped, ground his teeth and sent out an order that if the band could do no better than that it had better stop. So it stopped.

"On my way out of town I met a German soldier with his arm and hand dreadfully shattered. His bandages had slipped and he was trying vainly to replace them. I helped him redress his nasty wounds and rebandaged them with a pocket bandage I happened to have with me. The soldier fumbled in his pocket and at last produced a crumpled five-franc notes which he offered me. I refused it.

"'Why do you refuse good money for a good action, Madame?' he said.

"'Because I am an Englishwoman,' I replied, 'and Englishwomen do not take payment for good deeds, however small or great they may be.'

"'I cannot believe you are English,' he said, 'but you are an angel, and angels have no nationality. May I kiss your hand?'

"I held out my hand. He bent low and kissed it. There were tears in his eyes, and I rather wish now I had accepted that five-franc note to keep as a souvenir of Prussian gratitude."

THE EMDEN NEVER TALKS.

Officers of German Cruiser Only Listen to Wireless of Other Ships.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Under the heading, "Why the Emden Lives," The Standard publishes the following letter from the wife of the Captain of the steamer Kabinga, one of the Emden's victims:

"They (the Germans) destroyed our wireless the first thing. The Emden's officers told us they listened to all the various ships talking, but never talked themselves, and that our naval ships were careless and used no codes, and that they knew the whereabouts of all in these Eastern stations, and knew just how long they could make their raid without risk of meeting an English cruiser. They were quite right, for we had no protection in the bay whatever, and they did what they pleased."

Honors for the Emden's Commander.

BERLIN, (via London,) Nov. 1.—Capt. von Mueller, commander of the cruiser Emden, has been honored with the freedom of the City of Blankenburg, his native town.

OVERTURES TO RUSSIA RESENTED IN BERLIN

Veiled Allusions in the Newspapers to a Bad Blunder in German Diplomacy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BORDEAUX, France, Nov. 1, (Dispatch to The London Daily Standard.)—Concerning Germany's recent attempt to bring about peace with France alone, I am now able to state that during the week preceding these overtures to the French Government, similar efforts were made in Petrograd. As in the case of France, there was no official communication from Germany to Russia, but there were unofficial messages, similar to those conveyed to the French Government from certain personages in Berlin by way of a neutral country to certain influential quarters in Russia.

The proposal was put forward from Berlin that Russia should abandon her allies and conclude a separate treaty of peace with Germany, thus leaving the Kaiser free to hurl all his forces against the two Western powers. Those eminent Russians who were approached indignantly repelled the treacherous advances so insulting to their sense of honor and loyalty. Nor were these steps approved by every one in Berlin. There was quite general knowledge of them in the German capital, but writers so far apart in politics as Theodore Wolff, editor of the liberal Berlin of the conservative Deutsche Tageszeitung, wrote articles in which veiled allusions, unmistakable in their meaning, were made to advances to Russia. Both these publicists seem to have understood that the German Government had blundered badly in expecting to detach Russia from her allies.

IRON CROSS FOR KAISER.

He Accepts It in Recognition of the German Nation's Bravery.

LONDON, Monday, Nov. 2.—An Amsterdam dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company says:

"A Munich telegram states that King Leopold of Bavaria, in the name of the other German Princes, has asked Emperor William to accept the Iron Cross in honor of the German army.

"The Emperor, in expressing his thanks, said he would accept the recognition of the determination and bravery of all Germans in the fight for Germany's honor."

SCANT WAR NEWS IN BERLIN.

Newspapers Rely Mainly on Dispatches from Outside World.

BERLIN, Nov. 1, (via London.)—Only the scantiest news from the German side is being published here. For their descriptive stories the newspapers rely largely on dispatches telegraphed from abroad, which they are permitted to print fairly freely. Information concerning the comparatively definite location of the battle line is derived almost entirely from such sources.

There are indications that both sides have greatly improved the effectiveness of their anti-aeroplane defense. The Germans have installed anti-balloon cannon extensively and have converted a large number of captured French machine guns for use against the flyers, thereby hampering air attacks on the batteries and trenches such as described in the following letter from an artillery officer:

"We were bivouacked in a little wood. Suddenly we sighted three aeroplanes. Two, evidently French, flew directly toward our battery. Rifle fire against these dare-devils was absolutely useless. We crouched like flocks of hens under a hawk as an aviator circled overhead. A bomb whizzed down, but luckily the wind carried it to the edge of the wood, wounding only one man, while the flier was circling to regain his position above us.

"Now we are protected by balloon cannon, which, as I write, are firing on a British flyer who is making off. Yesterday our protectors brought down a British machine. The observer was killed, and the aviator was wounded by shell fragments. The machine, curiously enough, was little damaged."

GERMANS TELL HOW THEY TOOK ANTWERP

NEW 12-INCH GUN USED

Correspondence of The Associated Press.

HEADQUARTERS GERMAN MARINE DIVISION, Antwerp, Oct. 12.—Roads to the south of Antwerp by which the correspondent of The Associated Press came into Antwerp today are jammed with unbroken columns of siege artillery, mortar batteries, and baggage trains trekking away from the just-captured fortress. The infantry and field artillery of Gen. von Beseler's besieging army are well on their way south, to turn the scale, if possible, like Nogi's army at Mukden, in the great battle of the Aisne.

The bluejackets and marine infantry from Kiel, Cuxhaven, and Wilhelmshaven, smelling salt water again after a campaign of more than a month through Belgium, remain at Antwerp for further disposition, but whether to engage in a naval campaign from their new base, or merely to garrison this quarter of Belgium, the cable will have told before this letter reaches America. It may be significant that detachments of sailors recruited from the German mercantile marine and armed only with cutlass and revolver, have lain for several weeks behind the army, taking no part in the fighting and evidently destined for sea duty after the capture of the port.

The story of the siege of Antwerp from the German side, as related to the correspondent of The Associated Press by an officer attached to the staff, is largely the story of the marine division, of the pioneers and of the artillery, which formed the backbone of the heterogeneous army of Landwehr, Landsturm, and reserve formations intrusted to Gen. von Beseler to attack one of the strongest fortresses in Europe.

Fall Came Earlier Than Expected.

Antwerp fell, it is learned, eight days earlier than Gen. von Beseler had expected. This termination to the siege was due in part to the discouragement of the Belgian forces, disheartened by nine weeks of defeat, and with little hope of prolonging the resistance until relief could arrive, and partly to the fact, discovered by the Germans when they took possession of the city, that the fortress lines had been practically penetrated when the fortified positions behind the Nethe River were carried Oct. 6 and 7.

The Belgian engineers, apparently realizing that the inner girdle of forts was too close to the city, set up a second line of defense behind the flood barrier of the Nethe, dammed up to inundate a belt of land a quarter of a mile wide, and had robbed the inner forts of their heavy guns to arm this improvised but exceedingly strong position. Once this line was carried, the inner forts could offer comparatively little resistance, and the city itself lay open to bombardment.

Antwerp itself, as seen in a drive through miles of city streets, has suffered less from the bombardment than might have been expected. Signs of the German shells are observed in all quarters of the city, but the destruction is usually confined to individual houses or groups of houses at widely scattered intervals, the great mass of intervening buildings being untouched.

New Guns in Use.

The artillery park with which the fortress was reduced was far stronger than was publicly known, containing in addition to the widely heralded sixteen-and-one-half-inch mortars a large number of twelve-inch Krupp siege guns, the existence of which had hitherto not been mentioned and which were in efficiency only slightly inferior to their larger sisters. Two Austrian automobile batteries of twelve-inch guns were also attached to von Beseler's Army.

The effect of these great guns, seen in the forts of Waelhem, Wavre-St. Catherine, and the so-called Railroad Redoubt, protecting the line of the railroad from Brussels to Antwerp, is even more striking than on the forts at Liége. Two of the big armored turrets at St. Catherine were struck fairly and put out of action with single shots. In one the heavy steel beds for the guns are broken in two and the heavy masses of metal hurled bodily five or six yards from their original positions. In another the concrete embankment, thought capable of resisting any shell, is pierced like cheese and the steel turret uprooted. A turret in the railroad redoubt is upended completly and now lies with its base pointing skyward and the gun buried below. Behind the embankment of Fort Waelhem, where a twelve-inch shell penetrated the magazine, a heavy engine, furnishing power for the electric light plant, was blown twenty yards from its base. The whole top of the fort here is blown off. Sixty men of the garrison are said to be buried beneath the ruins. Other turrets were put out of action by shells striking the concrete embankments or the earth in front of them and cracking or displacing the cement walls so that the turrets could no longer be turned.

The line of attack against the fortress, as already stated in headquarters bulletins, was directed against the southeast sector of the fort girdles, between Malines and Lierre. The marine division under Admiral Schroeder conducted the attack against the middle of this line, the land troops being placed on either flank of the sailors and marines. Behind them lay the heavy artillery, so far back as to be out of reach of shells from the forts.

Fire was opened on Sept. 28, and by nightfall of Sept. 30 Fort Waelhem was considered ripe for storming. A night attack was ordered. Volunteers were called for. Pioneers, marines, and sailors competed for the dangerous honor. A forlorn hope storming party was selected for the advance, with life preservers and hand grenades, and sent forward to swim the moat, cut the wire entanglements and cover the advance of the main storming column. When within 100 yards of the fort, however, the Germans were received with such a murderous fire, particularly from Belgian canister, that further advance was impossible.

Germans Forced to Fall Back.

The German lines fell back 500 yards to give the artillery a free field, and at daybreak the bombardment was resumed. At 3:30 P. M. the white flag appeared on the fort. The commander, Major Witte, said that his guns were all out of action and that he could no longer hold his men to their work.

The remnant of the garrison, about 200 men, were allowed, in consideration of their brave defense, to march out with the honors of war. A German guard formed up and presented arms to the little Belgian garrison casting by to stack arms outside the fort. The officers were allowed to retain their swords.

Fort Wavre-St. Catherine was also a difficult nut for the German forces to crack, a moat about fifty yards wide and elaborate wire entanglements, (charged with a high-tension electric current, according to German account,) making the fort apparently almost impregnable to direct attack. Nevertheless, volunteers in plenty were found for the task. The capture of this fort and of the railroad redoubt brought the attackers to the second line of defense, the Nethe.

Working like beavers since the outbreak of the war, the Belgians had converted this natural obstacle into a veritable fortress. Successive lines of trenches, shelter pits, and bombproofs had been built for the infantry, positions for the field guns were scattered everywhere, wire entanglements had been laid even in the flooded portions of the river valley, the water also hiding deep trenches dug at irregular intervals in all directions, and everywhere before the lines were dug "wolves' holes," deep conical pits filled to the brim with mud, which hid sharp steel spikes to impale any one stepping into them. Fifty-four heavy guns from the forts were brought to this line and mounted behind earthworks.

The Germans gradually fought their way to this line and then intrenched, the hostile trenches being separated by the width of the flooded valley. So vigorous was the fire that a head could scarcely be shown above the trench without drawing a fusillade, and the German and Belgian riflemen resorted to the time-worn expedient of holding up their caps to draw the enemy's fire and give themselves a chance to get in an aimed shot. The Belgian machine guns, with steel shields pierced only with narrow slits for aiming, gave particular trouble, the Belgians spraying the firing slits of the German trenches with these to keep down the infantry fire. The dead in these trenches were all, according to the German officers, killed by head shots.

The position was found to be so formidable that the German lines were retired from the river bank and the German artillery was told to reduce the Belgian lines sufficiently to permit the infantry to resume the attack with some hope of success. The infantry fire was finally beaten down, and a crossing was forced near the town of Lierre, which lay in the middle of the flooded district. German pioneers swimming across under cover of darkness and laying bridges over which the infantry and field artillery dashed under heavy artillery fire. This success turned the flank of the Belgian position, the passages were forced at various points, and by Oct. 7 the German troops were everywhere across the Nethe.

With this success the Belgian defense practically collapsed. The Belgian troops fell back rapidly from their river lines, abandoning their heavy artillery and a number of machine guns, and the Germans, who had hastily intrenched themselves to repulse the expected counter-attack, were able to bring forward their heavy artillery at once for the attack on the inner line of forts and the bombardment of the city. Before the infantry was fairly across, the pioneers were laying bridges strong enough to bear this, using the piers of bridges blown up by the Belgians, and the bombardment of the city could be announced, according to The Hague Convention, by the afternoon of Oct. 7. The Spanish Military Attaché from Brussels was requested to carry the announcement into the city.

This phase of the operations was of unexpectedly short duration. After about eighty shells had been dropped in various quarters of the city according to the plan earlier described, the white flag appeared on Forts 6 and 7 of the inner girdle, and the Burgomaster came out to tender the surrender of the city. Negotiations, he was told, could only be conducted with the Belgian military authorities, but upon his representations that these were nowhere to be found the "Cease Fire!" was sounded, and the attack suspended.

WIRELESS TIPS TO GERMANS.

Cherfils Hears That a Hidden Station Signals French Movements.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—A wireless station, the location of which has never been discovered, is being used by the Germans to report all movements of the French troops, according to statements made to Gen. Pierre Cherfils by wounded soldiers who had been brought back from the front. Every effort has been made to find the mysterious station, but without result.

Gen. Cherfils mentions this in illustrating the thoroughness of the German system of making war. The absolute knowledge possessed by the officers of all parts of the country has permitted them to make advance arrangements which are serving them well. At Lassigny a mushroom cellar was found to have been converted into a munition depot, while a spot near Dixmude had been prepared some time before, to receive German wounded.

"It is this scientific precision and perfect method," says Gen. Cherfils, "which has permitted the Germans to choose so well the line from the Aisne and in front of Rheims, there to fasten a sufficiently easy resistance which still lasts."

The latest attempt at an offensive movement on the part of the Germans and the probable result is the particular topic of the war news discussion. It is admitted that the German Army in the north is showing remarkable solidity in hand-to-hand contests to gain the slightest advantage. It is not denied that it is offering a powerful offensive, but the French are of the opinion that it will be unsuccessful. The fact that the Germans have attempted other offensive movements, similar to the most recent one, which have been without result, is one reason for this belief. It is also asserted that the violent attacks at many places simultaneously indicate a lack of a general plan, and explain the alternative advances and withdrawals referred to in the official communications.

Definite results, it is argued, can only be obtained by the general breaking of the equilibrium, to accomplish which a different strategy would be required.

The fate of the German forces which succeeded in recrossing the Yser is a matter of speculation. Their ability to get out of this difficulty, though probably with great losses, is admitted.

NEW WAR FORECAST WITH TURKEY IN IT

Suez Canal Locks to be Blown Up in Exactly Ten Days and a "Holy War" Begun.

BULGARIA TO FIGHT RUSSIA

Italy to Move and Greece to be Proved a Bluffer—Prophecies of Dr. Graves, Who Says He Is an ex-Spy.

"The Suez Canal has long been marked for destruction by Germany and will go up within a fortnight.

"Before the week is out Bulgaria will declare war against Servia and Russia.

"Huge stores of ammunition and other munitions of war sent secretly by Germany await the Turkish invading forces of Egypt at Symrna and Damascus.

"The threat of Greece to enter the war against Turkey is pure bluff.

"Italy's attitude toward Greece is increasing in significance and vital developments may be expected from the Quirinal within the next few days."

These few predictions on the course of the war were added yesterday by Dr. Armgaard Karl Graves, who says he has been in the German secret service, to previous efforts along these lines, some of which have proved true. His forecasts, he says, are based on information gathered while he was a German spy and on communications which reach him at present through secret channels. Continuing his discussion of European conditions after making the foregoing statements, Dr. Graves said:

"The rather dramatic entrance of Turkey into the European conflict, which I have been expecting daily, is due entirely to the blundering of the Allies, especially England. When the two German cruisers, Goeben and Breslau, made their dash for the Bosporus I plainly pointed out then their ultimate destination—Turkish waters. The refusal of Turkey to disarm and dismiss the vessels and their crews showed plainly the attitude to be expected of Turkey. Obviously, she was going to use these menof-war against the Allies. I have the reason for the Allies' blunder in permitting Turkey to sit on the fence the way she has without forcing her hand. England knew of the hurried preparations made by Turkey for her entrance into the war, but England was led to believe to the last moment British influence and money would efface the Osman over to the Allies' side. This was a disastrous mistake. German influence has been all powerful in Turkey. England overlooked the trenchant fact known only to close students of the Ottoman Empire that, while money will buy a Turk, it will not buy the true Osman, and the ruling powers in Turkey today are true Osmans. Moreover, they know only too well that the existence of Turkey rests solely on the success of Germanic arms. A successful Triple Entente, notwithstanding all promises made to the contrary, would not prevent—and could not if they wished—Russia from making full use of her power to gain, once and for all, complete control of the long-coveted Bosporus.

"Another factor in the holy war, but to go into the religious effect and aspect of a general Hadjie is too big a field to cover. Such a war is very imminent, however, and its results would recast the map of Asia. Think of the vast hordes of Moslems in Britain's colonial empire. To my own knowledge sectional equipment in guns, pontoons, and motors have been stored in secret by Germany in Smyrna and Damascus since 1908. The first aim of the Turks as devised by the German General Staff will be the destruction of the Sues Canal. This will take place at the Red Sea entrance at the locks of Suez. And having covered a good part of that territory in the interests of the German secret service and knowing the preparations for just such an event I am able to state a definite time for an attempt upon the Suez locks—ten days from today. Moreover, in connection with this whole scheme of Turkey's participance in the war, I need only call your attention to the strategical value of the Bagdad Railway. What a blunder England made in allowing Germany to gain control of that line, by which troops can be fed into Asia Minor. What the destruction of the Suez Canal would mean to the Allies is obvious.

"To those who have any doubt on which side Bulgaria will enter the war I need only to point out this: Within the last five weeks Germany has sent great quantities of the latest guns and ammunition, and even submarines in sections, through Austria and over the Bulgarian frontier in Turkey. It is as plain as the nose on your face that Bulgaria would not have permitted such a secret violation of her neutrality if she had intended going to war against Turkey. Today Bulgaria is the keystone to the attitude of the rest of the Balkan States. The threat of Greece to enter the field against the Turks is pure bluff on the face of developing events.

"One more point. I'll give you another bit of inside news that has just come to me. The sudden attack of the Turkish fleet, led by the Goeben and Breslau, on the Krim (Crimea) was a deep laid scheme on the part of the German General Staff. The aim is to gain control of the inexhaustible supplies of the Baku oil fields for the purposes of Germany's naval and aerial fleets."

Dr. Graves also promised to disclose within the next few days startling facts regarding the much talked of invasion of England by German Zeppelins.

WHY ITALY'S CABINET QUIT.

Revenues Drop and Military Demands Increase, King Is Told.

ROME, Nov. 1.—All the Cabinet Ministers who resigned their portfolios yesterday met today in the presence of King Victor Emmanuel, with whom they discussed the situation for about two hours.

Signor Rubini, Minister of the Treasury, gave a lengthy explanation of his reasons for resigning. He said the budget showed a deficit of $4,000,000 before the European war began. That deficit might easily have been overcome by an increase in revenues and limiting expenses, the augmentation of the revenues including the slight raise in taxation which already had been approved by Parliament and from which it was expected to realise $16,000,000 annually. The war, however, changed the whole situation, Signor Rubini said, and the military budgets alone would require $160,000,000.

Owing to the European crisis, Signor Rubini continued, the revenues, instead of increasing, had diminished by about $20,000,000, the new taxations bringing in $6,000,000 instead of $16,000,000. He added that he recognized the necessity for urgent military expenses, but wished to counterbalance them with new taxations.

A majority of the Ministers preferred to postpone the taxation until after the war, but Signor Rubini said he feared such action might be considered unconstitutional.

HONORS TO SOLDIER DEAD.

All Saints' Day Observed by Special Church Services in Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—This beautiful Fall morning the streets of Paris had a brighter aspect than they had had on any previous day since the war began by thousands of flower girls, who mingled with the throngs brought out to celebrate All Saints' Day and honor the soldier dead.

The services at all the churches were of a patriotic character, and tributes to those who died for their country were paid at Nôtre Dame, the Madeleine, St. Augustin, the Sacre Coeur, La Trinité, and Nôtre Dame des Victoires.

As soon as the early masses were concluded the pilgrimage to the cemeteries began. In the brilliant sunshine the flags of the allied nations were flying everywhere, and multi-colored bouquets relieved the melancholy impression made by the sombre dress of the long files of men and women who were going to decorate the graves.

Gen. Galliéni, Military Governor of Paris; M. Delanney, Prefect of Police, and the League of Patriots went to the cemeteries at Pantin, Ivry-sur-Seine, and Bagneaux to place flowers on the monuments raised to the soldiers of the present war.

A detachment of the aviation corps cruised over the city throughout the day to prevent interference with ceremonies through a visit of hostile airships. Special measures have been taken to accommodate the record crowds which are expected to visit the military cemeteries tomorrow.

ALL ITALY FAVORS ALLIES.

An American Just from Rome Thinks Nation Will Soon Go to War.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—According to Henry Evans, an American, who arrived today from Italy, the feeling in that country is overwhelmingly with the Allies. When he left there a few days ago it then felt that Turkey would enter the conflict, and many Italians, he said, expressed the opinion that Italy soon would join the Allies.

"The Italian Army," he said, "is in fine shape, and so is the navy. The Italians believe their navy could soon make the position of the Allies in the Mediterranean beyond question, while the army could deliver a mortal blow to Austria. There is no shortage of coal in Italy now, although there appeared to be some time ago. Even what I could learn Italy was preventing foodstuffs from going into Germany. Many of the Italian papers bitterly assail the Germans, while Italians themselves say there would be a revolt if they had to fight for the Austrians."

ITALY WATCHING TURKEY.

Military Critics Say Allies' Cause Will Not Be Affected.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—A Havas Agency dispatch from Rome says:

"The entrance of Turkey into the European conflict produces a deep effect in Italy. The newspapers are filled with comment upon the new factor in the war. The Russian Embassy avers that the attack of the Turks causes no anxiety in Russia. The aggression does not take Russia by surprise because the relations between Germany and Turkey have been followed at Petrograd and a strong Russian force is ready in the south to meet any emergency.

"The military critics consider that the Turkish army will be unable to worry Great Britain, Russia, and France. The only vulnerable points are Caucasus and Egypt. It is declared that the Turks will be lost in the mountains of Caucasus, and as for Egypt, the holy war preached in 1911 and 1913 failed of results. A similar agitation on behalf of Germany is no more likely to succeed today."

PRAISES KING'S BRAVERY.

Dutch Observer Says Albert Is Calm Under Shell Fire.

AMSTERDAM, (via London,) Nov. 1.—"The bearing of the King of the Belgians when he is under fire is splendid," says The Tijd's Dunkirk correspondent. "While the wounded were being withdrawn on one occasion he stood calmly smoking a cigarette and superintending operations, with projectiles bursting all around.

"The King is a great comrade to the soldiers. Frequently he takes his meals at the soldiers' mess, discussing with the men the conduct of the campaign and the likelihood of early peace. He has been greatly amused at a visitor's account of the huge retinue of guards with which the German Emperor is surrounded."

PRINCE OF MONACO REBUKES KAISER

This Is How a Prussian General Treats a Friend of Germany, He Writes of Levy on His Chateau.

OFFERS FINE TO EMPEROR

Willing to Pay Direct After the War If Home Is Saved—Gives Copies of Letters to Whitney Warren.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—This was the day fixed by Gen. von Bülow for destroying the Prince of Monaco's chateau de Marchais, near Sissonne, and the villages in the neighborhood, unless a fine of 500,000 francs ($100,000) was paid. This fine was levied because, it was alleged, broken glass was scattered on the road to impede the military automobiles. The inhabitants denied the accusation.

Lieut. Col. von Krupka, commandant of the post, ordered the fine paid in full so as to avoid "heavy damages to the commune." The authorities of the commune replied that they were unable to collect 500,000 francs, and could gather only 120,000. A council of all the Mayors of the district was held, and apparently the Mayors suggested calling upon the Prince of Monaco for help. Lieut. Col. von Krupka, after consultation with Gen. von Bülow, decided to allow two delegates to visit the Prince. His authorization read:

I am authorized by His Excellency to tell you that the remaining part of the fine must be paid before Nov. 1. The delegation is instructed to mention this decision to the Prince of Monaco, adding that if the sum is not paid, besides other acts the château belonging to the Prince and the commune of Marchais will be demolished and burned.

Willing to Pay the Kaiser.

Gen. von Bülow allowed the delegates to go to Monaco by way of Switzerland. The Prince received them, and sent the following letter to the General:

Monaco, Oct. 22.

Monsieur le General: To avoid for the Commune of Sissonne and that of Marchais the rigorous fate with which you have threatened them, I, on my honor, pledge myself to remit to Emperor William, if the war ends without intentional damage to my residence or to the communes, the sum necessary to complete the 500,000 francs which Sissonne was fined by you.

As a sovereign Prince, I will treat with the sovereign who during the fifteen years has called me friend and made me Knight of the Black Eagle. My conscience and dignity place me beyond feeling fear; my energy will place me beyond all regret. But if you destroy the Château of Marchais, which is a centre of science, interesting to the whole world, and a centre of charity; if you reserve for this jewel of archaeology and history the fate of the Cathedral of Rheims, and without a hostile act against you on its part, the world will judge between you and me.

I address myself to your Excellency, expressing the highest consideration. ALBERT, Sovereign Prince of Monaco.

Wrote to German Emperor.

The Prince also wrote a letter to Emperor William as follows:

Sire: I forward to your Majesty several documents concerning an affair which is very grave and urgent. Gen. von Bülow has occupied for a month and a half my Château of Marchais, situated three miles from the village of Sissonne. The General has fined the 1,000 inhabitants of this poor, ruined village 500,000 francs, of which they are unable to pay more than a fourth part.

Moreover, he sent to me two delegates bringing documents in which he threatens to destroy my residence and the village of Marchais, besides that of Sissonne, in case I would not take on my shoulders—and this before Oct. 31—the aforementioned sum. This is how a Prussian General acts toward a sovereign Prince who, during forty years, has been a friend of Germany, and who has received from every country tokens of respect and gratitude for his work.

I answered the demand of Gen. von Bülow, saying that I pledged myself on my honor to complete the said 500,000 francs, because I wish to prevent a horrible action, coldly accomplished. As a sovereign Prince I put this question before the judgment of the Emperor, declaring that the aforesaid sum will be paid when the Château de Marchais shall be freed from the risk of intentional destruction.

I am with great respect, your Majesty, your devoted servant and cousin, ALBERT.

Copies of the correspondence concerning the demands of Gen. von Bülow were given by the Prince of Monaco to Whitney Warren, the New York architect, who, as a corresponding member of the French Academy of Fine Arts, is a colleague of the Prince.

ATHLETES' COLLEGE WRECKED

Institution Near Rheims Shows Effect of German Shell Fire.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—That the destruction of the cathedral was not the sole act of the kind committed by German gunners against Rheims is shown by an interview in today's Matin with M. Guy, the Director of the college for athletes, established on the outskirts of Rheims by the Marquise de Polignac. Guy says:

"The main gymnasium was gutted by the effects of shell fire. The swimming pool was irretrievably ruined. Even the cinder track was devastated with great holes, one being fully six yards in diameter.

"The German excuse that the cathedral was used for a signaling station cannot avail regarding the stadium, which indicates their hatred of anything likely to contribute to the regeneration of France."

17 BRITISH OFFICERS KILLED.

Sir Frank Stanley Rose Among the Dead in the Latest List.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—A casualty list received from headquarters today under date of Oct. 27 contains the names of seventeen officers killed, including Sir Frank Stanley Rose, Captain of the Tenth Hussars.

Among the twenty-four wounded officers mentioned in the list are Lieut. Col. J. L. R. Gordon of the Fifteenth Ludhiana Sikhs and several other officers of Sikh regiments.

Sir Frank Stanley Rose was the second Baronet, the title having been created in 1909. He was 37 years old and succeeded his father in 1913. Sir Frank served in the South African war in 1900-1 and received the Queen's medal with four clasps. He married Daphne, the youngest daughter of the late Capt. H. Brooks Gaskell of Kiddington Hall, Oxford, who, with one daughter and one son, the Hon. Charles Henry Rose, born in 1912 and now the heir to the title, survives him.

INDIA MOSLEMS FOR BRITAIN.

Prayers in Mosques for Her Success and Meetings to Aid Her.

SIMLA, Nov. 1.—The announcement of the unfriendly attitude of Turkey toward the Allies was made throughout India today in an official communication, in which the Viceroy deplores "the endeavor of a Chauvinistic element to drive Turkey into a war with Great Britain for the benefit of Germany and Austria."

The reception which the announcement got in the outlying districts will not be known for some days, but responsible leaders of the Mohammedan community are already holding meetings in support of Great Britain, while the mosques are organizing prayers for the success of the British arms.

The Mullahs are preaching homilies urging Turkey either to maintain neutrality or side with the Allies.

IGNORES CARRANZA TERMS.

First Chief Recalls His Resignation and Won't Recognize Leaders' Choice

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 1.—News has reached the capital that the Aguascalientes convention is electing a Provisional President, with the probabilities favoring Antonio Villareal or José Isabel Robles.

First Chief Carranza takes the stand that he has not resigned, as the conditions laid down by him are unfulfilled, and therefore he will not recognize the Provisional President elected by the convention.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 1.—A dispatch from Aguascalientes says the delegates to the conference have voted to accept the resignations of both Gens. Villa and Carranza, that of Carranza unconditionally, and that of Villa so as to mean his retirement from the command of the northern division alone.

It was agreed to abolish all military divisions and to place all the troops of the nation under command of a Secretary of War to be named by the convention. The dispatch says that Villa is to have this position. The convention will now proceed to name a Provisional President to succeed Carranza.

Gen. Carranza, accompanied by the Foreign Minister, the War Minister, and his private secretary, the President of the National Railways, and numerous Generals, left today on a special train. The Foreign Minister said the trip was for a day's outing; that the party was going to the Pyramids of San Juan de Teotihuacan.

GET SAM PARKS'S BODY.

Officers at Vera Cruz Receive Bones of Soldier Killed by Huerta Troops.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 1.—A few charred and broken bones, the remains of Private Samuel Parks, the orderly of Col. Taggart, who was executed last Summer by Gen. Huerta's troops, were returned to the American authorities today. There was nothing by which identification is possible, but additional evidence of his death was obtained from a Mexican at Tejira, a short distance from here, where the Mexican soldiers killed the American soldier and burned his body. The Mexican said that he witnessed the tragedy.

An American army surgeon and two assistants entered the Mexican lines by agreement with the Mexican Government and recovered the fragments of Parks's body.

Belgian Minister Leaves Mexico.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 1.—Paul May, the Belgian Minister, left this morning for Vera Cruz.

WAR NATIONS AT RECEPTION

At a reception at the Hotel Astor last night to celebrate the silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Chamberlain of London it was discovered that all but one of the warring nations was represented. Mr. Chamberlain himself is English, while his wife, a French woman, has a brother in the French Army. Carl Heinemain, one of the guests, is a German and told of his two brothers who are among the Kaiser's officers. Teodor Havenor, another guest, is a Belgian.

In the orchestra, it was learned, were an Austrian violinist, and a Russian 'cellist, and one of the waiters was a Servian. When the nationalities of the persons in the room were discovered, all joined in drinking a toast to peace, in which the pianist, an Italian reservist, joined. Some one in the party remarked that Turkey was not represented, whereupon the head waiter reminded the guests that they were drinking Turkish coffee, made by a real son of the Sultan.

Schroon Lake Buildings Burn.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Fire today destroyed the Leland House at Schroon Lake, one of the most widely known hotels in the Adirondacks. The Episcopal Church, three cottages, and an electric light plant connected with the hotel were burned. The fire started in a pile of dead leaves near the hotel. The hotel was owned by State Senator James A. Emerson of Warrensburg and his brother, L. W. Emerson, former Congressman.

A SERVICEABLE STATE OFFICIAL.

It is worthy of remark that many of the reforms with which Governor Glynn is credited were undertaken in response to suggestions from the present incumbent of the office of State Controller. A rigorous ruling that only current expenses be met by current appropriations had the effect of exposing the deficiencies and extravagances of preceding years. Department expenditures were so segregated that it became possible to ascertain with some degree of certainty what were the real resources of the State, and what funds would be available for a new fiscal year, after all expenses had been paid.

This put an end to juggling. In three reports to the Governor, the Controller outlined the ways and means whereby the State could deal, so to speak, in good faith with itself. Business principles were applied. The legislative Conference Committee having charge of matters relating to finance adopted a concert of action policy, the outcome being that the Controller's purposes prevailed, the Conference Committee's bills being substantially identical with all the suggestions he had to make.

Though there has been controversy on the subject, it is susceptible of proof that the State is indebted to the Governor for reduced taxation to the extent of more than $11,000,000, and for immunity from a direct tax. It is only fair to add, however, that part of the credit therefor is due to the Controller, who was not only in accord with the Governor, but who solved many of the incidental problems. Actual figures speak plainly. This year shows a surplus of $12,338,000, exceeding the estimates by not far short of $7,000,000.

Audits at Albany are no longer an official fiction. Upon the recommendation of Controller Sohmer, an act relating to them was passed, with the result that claims involving thousands of dollars have been disallowed, and contracts involving hundreds of thousands have been rejected. There would have been no Siegel failure had the bill suggested by the Controller been enacted into law. That suggestion is now part of the general banking bill, and those who deposit in private banks are protected.

This is but part of the record. It is set forth because much remains to be done, and because of the danger that there may be undoing. What the Controller does is apt to be very much less conspicuous than important. There is nothing spectacular about the present incumbent, but there is no exaggeration in the statement that he has been of great service to the Commonwealth. He it was that first called attention to the extravagances involved in awarding highway contracts without competition, and that put an end to the favoritism shown in supplemental agreements. The State can ill afford to lose the benefits of his experience.

that the Democratic candidates were being made the victims of religious bigotry.

Mr. Whitman refused the request, saying that under no condition would he permit campaign literature in his behalf to be carried to churches of any denomination whatever. He said he believed every candidate should keep his campaign entirely away from church doors.

Members of the Catholic Benevolent Legion called at Mr. Whitman's rooms to assure him that they were in favor of his candidacy and were entirely convinced that he had nothing whatever to do with stirring up a religious issue.

"I have not made a great many promises through the campaign, because I am in the habit of keeping what promises I make. And no man can tell in advance just what he can and what he cannot do in specific cases that may arise.

"When I first ran for District Attorney I was asked to make many promises, but the only promise I would make was that I would find good men and would work through them to do the work that the people wanted done. That is all that public service consists of, I insisted, and I asked that the people turn me out of office at the end of my term if I failed to find and failed to do the kind of work I said I would do.

"That is the only promise I am now making as to the Governorship. I will organize the small army of those who must serve the State under the Governor in order to make his administration a success, in such a way that I can always feel able to stand fully responsible for the actions of each subordinate. I will give an administration of clean men all the way from top to bottom, and it naturally follows, of course, that the administration will be efficient and will aim at being of service all the way through."

HOME RULE FOR THIS CITY.

Gov. Glynn Says New York Should Solve Its Own Problems.

Gov. Glynn spent the greater part of yesterday in his rooms at the Vanderbilt Hotel trying to rest, but he had little success. During most of the day he was receiving committees and callers as fast as they could be ushered in and out, and when left alone he was busy preparing himself for a final speech-making tour. He will carry on his campaign almost to the day of election, beginning with a Long Island trip this morning and ending with a chain of meetings in the city tonight. He will make twenty-four speeches on Long Island during the day and thirteen in Manhattan and Brooklyn in the evening. He expects to take a midnight train for Albany, where he will vote and await the returns.

Several of Gov. Glynn's callers yesterday asked him what special legislation and benefits New York City might expect from his administration, if he is elected, and last night he consented to express his views on this subject. He said:

"As I have stated repeatedly in my speeches, the best and fairest legislation that the State can enact for the benefit of New York City is a law freeing New York from the necessity for such legislation. That is to say, it ought not to be necessary for a city which includes within its limits half the population of the State to petition a distant Legislature for needed changes in its government.

Favors Home Rule for New York.

"Throughout its entire history the Democratic Party has advocated the principle of home rule, and during the last year the Democratic Party in this State has given a concrete expression to its belief in local self-government by passing a law giving every city in the State but two the right to choose a charter best suited to local needs. If the State can do this for Syracuse, for Binghamton, for Yonkers, and for Plattsburg, in justice it should do it for New York City and Buffalo.

"This great city has tremendous problems of its own which it should be permitted to meet and solve without outside interference. No Legislature was ever gathered together which understood the needs of New York City as its citizens understand them. Every Legislature has enough problems affecting the entire State to occupy its attention without being called upon to pass judgment on municipal questions. If the mass of legislation affecting New York City, which is annually passed upon by the State Legislature, were removed from its sphere of influence it would not only be better for New York City, but it would be better for the entire State.

"Another matter which I believe is of particular concern to New York City is the problem of unemployment. Last Winter the entire State was aroused over the number of men in this State who were unable to find work. Through my efforts, a law has been passed creating a State Employment Bureau, and before the Winter sets in, this bureau will be in operation. I do not flatter myself that there is no room for improvement in the law as it stands. In framing the law I sought counsel and guidance from the experience of European countries in their attempts to solve the problem of unemployment, but because conditions are not the same here as abroad I realize that the law creating the New York State Employment Bureau may be improved after the bureau has had the benefit of a year's experience.

Plans for Employment Bureau.

"As the one most largely responsible for this bureau I can assure the people of New York that if elected Governor I shall leave no stone unturned to make it as efficient and useful as possible. Under the law the State Bureau is to have branches in every section of the State. The Central Bureau is to be in charge of a director, who has been chosen by a civil service test and, who has had wide and extensive experience with the matters which will properly come under his jurisdiction. Each branch office will be required to register the application of every man who desires employment, and it must also register all requests of every employer who is looking for workers. Each bureau will keep in touch with every other bureau in order that those in search of employment may be directed to points where their labor is in demand. The State Bureau is empowered to advertise in the newspapers for workers and for positions, and is required to issue a bulletin giving all possible information on the condition of the labor market. Best of all, the service of the State Employment Bureau will be absolutely free.

"There can be no question as to the value of this bureau. As far back as 1904 the Public Employment Bureau in Berlin, which is somewhat similar to the one we have started here, found positions for 67,000 people. In their enthusiasm over the Workmen's Compensation act the laboring men of New York have not given the attention it deserves to the law creating the State Employment Bureau, but I feel that before the Winter is over the laboring men of this and every other large city in the State will regard the bureau with the same enthusiasm which they now display for the Compensation law."

The Governor added that he considered the establishment of the Employment Bureau at this time very fortunate in view of disturbed industrial conditions. He said it was his hope that it might help to avert the labor troubles predicted for the coming Winter.

How to Vote For Delegates to Constitutional Convention

Special effort is being made to get the voters to give proper consideration to the nominations made by the various political parties for delegates to the Constitutional Convention. The work of that convention rises above party considerations, and men should be selected to sit in the convention without regard to party lines.

Each voter will be called upon to vote for fifteen Delegates-at-Large. All of the political organizations, except the American Party, have nominated fifteen candidates. Their names will all appear on one separate ballot, in columns under their party emblems. The nominees of the three principal parties are:

DEMOCRATIC.	REPUBLICAN.	PROGRESSIVE.
Edgar M. Cullen,	William Berri,	Vasco P. Abbott,
John A. Dix,	Edgar Truman Brackett,	Carlos C. Alden,
Samuel Gompers,	Jacob Breuner,	Francis W. Bird,
D-Cady Herrick,	Alphonso T. Clearwater,	Homer D. Call,
Calvin J. Huson,	Patrick W. Culligan,	William Hamlin Childs,
Martin W. Littleton,	Seth Low,	Katharine B. Davis,
James M. Lynch,	Louis Marshall,	Charles M. Dickinson,
William F. McCombs,	John Lord O'Brian,	Frederick E. Draper,
Michael F. McGoldrick,	Herbert Parsons,	William H. Hotchkiss,
John F. Murtaugh,	Adolph J. Rodenbeck,	John Mitchell,
Morgan J. O'Brien,	Elihu Root,	Edwin R. A. Seligman,
William Church Osborn,	Jacob Gould Schurman,	Oscar S. Straus,
Jacob Ruppert,	Henry L. Stimson,	Charles H. Strong,
Samuel Untermyer,	George W. Wickersham,	George S. Van Schaick,
Robert B. Van Cortlandt.	Charles H. Young.	James C. Thomas.

The voter can put a cross mark under any party emblem and vote for the fifteen nominees of that party, or he can vote for any fifteen candidates by putting a cross mark in the blank square to the left of each candidate's name, taking care not to vote for more than fifteen altogether. There is nothing to prevent the voter from voting for more than one candidate appearing on the same horizontal line of the ballot.

In addition to the Delegates-at-Large, each voter will be called upon to vote for three District Delegates, the districts being the same as those for State Senators. The names of the District Delegates will appear on the ballot under those of the Delegates-at-Large.

In the Voters' Guide, published in THE NEW YORK TIMES last Sunday, appeared brief sketches of the lives of the forty-five Delegates-at-Large printed above. There was printed on the same page information gathered by the Citizens' Union regarding the fitness of all the candidates for District Delegates in New York City.

MRS. GLYNN'S FORECAST.

Governor's Wife Tells Why She Is Confident of His Victory.

Mrs. Martin H. Glynn, who spent yesterday at the Vanderbilt Hotel with her husband, was drawn into a discussion of the campaign by some of her friends who called to see the Governor. When asked her opinion on the result of the elections, she said:

"Mr. Glynn was asked that same question in Syracuse last Sunday afternoon, and I recall that he answered that it is a severe test of a candidate's impartiality to ask him to forecast the result of an election in which he is one of the principals. Don't you think it is even a greater test of impartiality for a candidate's wife? I imagine that in a few years the people will even go to the extent of asking a candidate's wife for whom she intends ot vote.

"But, seriously and trying to be as impartial as possible, I think there is no doubt but that Mr. Glynn will continue to be Governor for two years more. I know that he is absolutely confident he will win, and I have always found that his judgment on political matters, as well as other subjects, is unerring.

"How can he feel otherwise after the splendid reception accorded him all over the State? And does not the work he has done as Governor entitle him to re-election? I know how hard he worked to pass the workmen's compensation law, and how his heart was set on getting that bill through the Legislature. I know that since he has been Governor he has stayed up night after night studying ways to save the State's money and reduce the taxes.

"I know what he has done, and I believe the people of the State fully understand and appreciate that work and will vote to keep him in office."

Mrs. Glynn added that she thought even her husband would be surprised by the size of his plurality. She said in her opinion the plurality of 70,000 votes predicted for the Governor by his campaign managers was too small.

GLYNN REASSURES POLICE.

He Will Oppose Legislation Taking Away Right of Review.

Several representatives of the men on the police force called on Gov. Glynn at the Vanderbilt Hotel yesterday to find out his views as to legislation at Albany next year regarding the abolition of a policeman's right to review by certiorari. After talking with them a short time the Governor gave out this statement:

"Mayor Mitchel's public statement that he will not have any police legislation of this character made this question a dead issue. I do not regard it within the realm of possibility that any legislation taking away the policeman's right of review will be presented to me, but so as to settle any doubts that may exist, I want to say again that I am absolutely opposed to the policemen being deprived of their right of review."

John M. O'Hanlon, editor of The Legislative Labor News, sent a telegram yesterday to the Glynn headquarters, saying that Gov. Glynn deserved full credit for having the workmen's compensation law enacted.

The Regeneration of Church and World

LIFE EVERLASTING OBTAINABLE ONLY IN CHRIST

Why Regeneration Is Necessary—Why It Began at the First Advent and Not Sooner—Why the Restricted Limitations of the Present Age—Why Different Kind of Regeneration During the Millennium—What and Why the Difference Between the Two Regenerations—How and Why the Church Is Regenerated by One Father and the World to Be Regenerated by Another.

Pastor Russell, speaking last evening at New York City Temple, took for his subject, "The Regeneration of the Church and of the World. What are They? Why Different?" His text was, "Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again." (John 3:7.) He said in part:

In the past many of us have studied the Bible in a very careless manner, neglecting to give its inspired words the consideration and respect they deserve. In many cases the original thought has been utterly lost because of some fanciful interpretation. Consequently very few Christians have any concrete idea of the meaning of Bible statements respecting the future regeneration of the world.

Regeneration, or a second birth, is absolutely necessary if we would attain everlasting life. The fault is not that our Creator made us incomplete; for, as the Bible declares, "All His work is perfect." The fault is chargeable to sin. "By one man's disobedience sin entered into the world, and death as a result of sin; so death passed upon all men, because all are sinners."

This sentence of death upon Father Adam hindered him from giving to his children the perfection of life in which he was created. His entire race has been born into the world for six thousand years under a death sentence, or curse. The forfeited life cannot be prolonged; the sentence of death cannot be set aside; the Supreme Judge of the Universe cannot for any reason set aside His own decision. But God could provide for the re-generating of Adam and his race.

To generate, as all know, signifies to bring into life. Adam failed to generate a race to life, he merely generated a great race of thousands of millions possessed of only a spark of life—a dying race.

The Divine provision is that our Lord Jesus left the glory of the Heavenly condition and became a man for the purpose of ransoming, or redeeming, Adam and his race, which shared his condemnation. The record is that this sacrificed life laid down by Jesus is sufficient as a cancellation of all Adamic sin. On the basis of that sacrifice, and in the carrying out of the Heavenly Father's Program, our Lord was raised from the dead "a quickening Spirit," a life-giving spirit Personage, with a glory far higher than that which He had when He came into the world. "Him hath God highly exalted, and given Him a name which is above every name."—Philippians 2:9.

The glorified Jesus is Scripturally termed the Second Adam, the Life-Giver or Regenerator, and the Everlasting Father—the Father who gives everlasting life. Throughout the thousand years of His Messianic Reign, it will be the work of Christ Jesus, as the glorified Second Adam, to regenerate Adam and all his race. The regenerating influences will begin with their awakening from the death sleep, in harmony with the Master's declaration, "The hour is coming in which all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of God and shall come forth."—John 5:28, 29.

The coming forth from the tomb will be only the beginning of the regenerative work. The awakened sleepers will be in the same condition of mind that they were in when they fell asleep—in a very similar condition to those who will be living on the earth at that time. Before they can be regenerated, they must be brought to a knowledge of the Truth. Their eyes and ears of understanding must be opened. The Scriptures assure us that this will be accomplished. (Isaiah 35:5.) "The knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall fill the whole earth."—Isaiah 11:9.

The news of God's Love and of the possibilities of return to His favor through the atoning work of Jesus being clearly demonstrated to all, each will have the opportunity of deciding for himself whether or not he desires to return to human perfection and the blessed possibilities of everlasting life. To do so he must be begotten again by the Life-Giver; and the Life-Giver will beget again only those who desire the new life. Willful rejectors of the privilege, we are assured, will die the Second Death; while those accepting the Saviour's proposals will come under helpful and disciplinary experiences which will gradually lift them up mentally, morally and physically to perfection—to all that was lost for them in Father Adam's disobedience and its penalty, and all that was regained for them by the obedience of our Lord Jesus and the Divine arrangement of His Messianic Kingdom for the regeneration of the world.

The words begat, born and regenerated or born again associate themselves in our minds with our natural birth; but we are not to expect, as Nicodemus queried, that any would again be born as an infant from a mother. The begetting to a new birth will be in the mind—a covenant relationship with the Life-Giver.

Nevertheless, there is a beautiful analogy; for while Adam was designed to be the life-giver, father, generator, of the race, Mother Eve was designed to be its nourisher, caretaker and instructor, to bring the race up to complete development. So while Jesus is the Life-Giver in the sense that He gave His own life as a ransom-price for Adam, it is also a part of the Divine Program that there should be both a Second Adam and a Second Eve.

The world will need not only the start of the new life during the Millennium, but also the care and nourishment necessary for their development and uplift—for restitution to perfection. God's provision is that the Church, especially called and qualified for that purpose during this Gospel Age, shall be the Antitypical Eve—the Mother of the world—caretakers, nourishers, supervisors in respect to all regenerated or begotten by the Life-Giver Jesus.

What a beautiful prospect of collaboration with the Saviour in His great work of rescuing Adam and his race from the effects of Adamic sin and the death sentence!

The Church's Regeneration Different.

It was not Jehovah's program for His Son that He should change to human nature permanently. On the contrary, we are distinctly told that the Logos took the form of a servant only for the suffering of death. This purpose having been accomplished, the Father raised Him up by His own Power to spirit nature and glory—"where He was before," but to a still higher station on the spirit plane—"far above angels, principalities and powers, and every name that is named." This meant a regeneration or second birth, for the Lord Jesus; for "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God."—1 Corinthians 15:50.

Our Saviour exchanged His spirit nature for the human, but He could not exchange the human for the spiritual; else there would have been no object served in His humiliation. His human life was to be given up sacrificially as the Redemption-price for Adam's life and therefore as the Redemption-price of the whole world, since all lost life through Adam's disobedience. The application of the Master's sacrificed life would have left Him without life-rights as a man, but God provided for His regeneration—His re-birth.

The sacrifice of Himself as a human being was made when Jesus was thirty years of age and was symbolized by His immersion. Immediately the Father begat Him again, not to be a human being, but a spirit being. He was begotten of the Holy Spirit, which descended upon Him in a form like a dove. For three and a half years Jesus, as a New Creature, spirit-begotten, used His flesh body, consecrated to death, having no other. In it "He was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin"; and after He had demonstrated His loyalty to God, even unto death at Calvary, the Father raised Him from the dead on the third day—not a man, but a New Creature.

After His resurrection our Lord Jesus illustrated the lesson given to Nicodemus, of which our text is a part. He came and went like the wind. Some seven times during the forty days He appeared for brief intervals to the invisible vision of His disciples, just as angels have done. Later He ascended on high. "Now the Lord is that Spirit"—"the Second Adam."—2 Corinthians 3:17; 1 Corinthians 15:45, 47.

The Bible tells us that from the very beginning God had foreknown that our Lord Jesus would accomplish this work and become the Father of Adam and his race by regeneration; and the Apostle Paul assures that God foreknew also the Church as the Bride of Christ, His Joint-heir in His Kingdom. To some of the earliest members of the Church class our Lord said, "In the regeneration [in the Millennium] ye shall sit upon thrones." (Matthew 19:28.) Elsewhere He declared, "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My Throne."—Revelation 3:21.

The Father purposed that the Bride class should be selected from amongst the members of the fallen race and should be prepared for their work of future glory before the regeneration of the world would commence. He purposed also that this Bride class should have a change of nature similar to that which our Lord Jesus experienced—that it would begin with them as with Him at the time of consecration and spirit-begetting and would culminate with them as with Him, in the resurrection change.

Thus the Church has the promise that she shall be like her Lord, shall see Him as He is and share His glory. (1 John 3:2; Romans 8:17.) St. Peter, speaking of the call of the Church, declared that God gave unto this class "exceeding great and precious promises"—that by these promises working in their consecrated hearts to will and to do God's good pleasure this class might become "partakers of the Divine Nature."—2 Peter 1:4.

Life and Immortality Brought to Light.

It is manifest that this begetting of the Church to a change of nature is very different from the begetting provided for the world—a regeneration or re-begetting to the human nature which Adam lost but which Christ redeemed for the world. So also we have noted that the Church has a different Father. Jesus is not the Father or Life-Giver of this Divine life. He did not redeem it or secure it for anybody. He redeemed human nature and secured the right to regenerate the world to human nature. The Church's begetting or regeneration is by the Heavenly Father Himself; as the Scriptures distinctly say, "The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ hath begotten us." (1 Peter 1:3.) He alone can give this Divine Nature. This does not signify that the Church is not indebted to her Redeemer; for the Scriptures distinctly state that without Him we could do nothing; that "by His stripes we are healed"; that before the Heavenly Father would deal with us at all—before He would accept our consecration, or sacrifice—it was necessary that our Lord Jesus should appear on our behalf as our Advocate and Surety, and so open up to us a new way of life. Thus, as St. Paul declares, "Christ hath brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel"—life everlasting to the world and immortality or the Divine Nature for the Church. Prior to our Lord's First Advent the way of life was not manifested; no provision had been made for it except in the Divine Promise. God had promised His friend Abraham that somehow, some time, all the world would be blessed. This meant that all the world would be released from the curse of death and would experience the Divine blessing, which signifies life everlasting—not that the world will be given this blessing unconditionally, but that the opportunity for it will be extended to every member of Adam's race and to himself, for acceptance or rejection. The second part of this Promise to Abraham, that this blessing should come through his posterity, implied that some special members of Adam's race would bless the remainder of the world, their brethren. The Seed through whom this blessing will come, St. Paul most positively declares, will be The Christ, Jesus the Head and the Church His Body.—Galatians 3:16, 29.

THE AT-ONE-MENT BETWEEN GOD AND MAN is one of Pastor Russell's masterpieces, clarifying the doctrine of blood atonement—the necessity of a Ransom-sacrifice. In this comprehensive volume a very interesting and entertaining examination is made of every verse in the Bible in which the words Jehovah, God, Lord, Son of God and Holy Spirit occur. The birth of Jesus, from the virgin Mary, is Scripturally, scientifically, but delicately considered. A cogent, convincing, yet understandable answer is given to the question, "What is the Soul?" Over a hundred pages are devoted to the intensely interesting symbolisms of the Hebrew Tabernacle rites, with illustrations familiar to all who have taken a Masonic degree. This volume, beautifully bound in English maroon cloth, gold stamped, good type, over 600 pages, will be sent to any address, carriage prepaid, for 50c., accompanied by this coupon. Chauncey J. Hamlin

Progressive Candidate

FOR

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Mr. Hamlin is a representative of one of Western New York's leading families. His grandfather, Cicero J. Hamlin, was proprietor of the famous "Village Farm" at East Aurora, the home of "Mambrino King." A graduate of Yale, where he won his Y on the football team, and also Phi Beta Kappa key for high scholarship, and of the Buffalo Law School, with high honors; his ability at the bar was early recognized through his appointment to the important office of Referee in Bankruptcy in 1909. He held this office until upon the organization of the Progressive Party he felt it his duty to resign this Republican appointment.

In the City of Buffalo, his home, he has been a leader in many movements for the betterment of his city. He was one of the founders of the Municipal League of Buffalo, an organization which had for its sole purpose the compilation of the records of candidates, so that citizens might know the manner of men they were voting for; many a bad candidate has been defeated because of the exposures made by this organization. The next great municipal movement in which he became a powerful factor was the fight to obtain a commission charter for Buffalo; he was one of the five who drafted the new charter, and is one of the men whose efforts have largely contributed to the success of the movement. Last year he was one of the originators of a non-partisan, good government citizens' ticket in the City of Buffalo in an effort to take the municipal election out of the field of politics. Mr. Hamlin organized, and is President of the Legal Aid Bureau of Buffalo, which has done much humanitarian work in giving free legal aid to poor people. He is married and has three children.

Mr. Hamlin's candidacy is endorsed by prominent Independent Republicans and Democrats.

Adelbert Moot, one of Buffalo's leading Republicans and former President of the New York State Bar Association, in endorsing Mr. Hamlin's candidacy, said: "He should be supported, because of his public spirit and work in founding the Buffalo Legal Aid Bureau, in helping frame the commission charter and in starting Buffalo's first non-partisan and citizens' movement."

State Senator Gottfried H. Wende, one of the leading Independent Democrats in the State said, regarding Mr. Hamlin's candidacy: "Altogether, the Independent Democrats are under deep obligation to Mr. Hamlin for the good work he has done in the interests of clean politics and honest Government."

The Albany Knickerbocker Press, recognized as one of the leading Republican newspapers in the State, in editorially declaring in favor of Mr. Hamlin for Lieutenant Governor, says:

"If the next Governor dies or is impeached the Lieutenant Governor will become Governor of the State, it is therefore the part of wisdom to elect a man as Lieutenant Governor, who is fitted and qualified to perform the duties of Governor.

"Considering the qualifications of the respective candidates for this office and the possibility of one of them becoming Governor under the provisions of the Constitution, the Knickerbocker Press is compelled to say that Chauncey J. Hamlin is the most likely candidate."

ROCKEFELLER AIDS WAR RELIEF FUND

stuffs was such that it was impossible to comply exactly with Ambassador Page's suggestions as to proportions. To fill and dispatch the ship called for an expenditure of about $275,000.

Cargo of the Massapequa.

On next Tuesday morning, therefore, the Massapequa, of the New York and Porto Rico Steamship Company will sail direct to Rotterdam, Holland, laden with 4,000 tons of supplies, consigned to the American Consul. The cargo will consist of:

28,500 barrels of flour.
3,000 bags (200 lb. each) of beans.

The British Consul has kindly agreed to certify that these supplies are absolutely for the aid of noncombatants and should not be delayed in transit.

The extraordinary need in Belgium is further indicated by the following cablegram received from H. C. Hoover of the American Relief Committee in London:

Have received reports from members of our commission, from the American Minister in Brussels, and from local officials that within three weeks the last vestige of foodstuffs in Belgium will have been exhausted and the entire population of over seven million people will be faced with starvation. The minimum supply of foodstuffs required amounts to about ninety thousand tons of cereals per month, together with bacon or lard. The minimum monthly expenditure required is from four to five million dollars, of which some part is returnable through sales.

It, therefore, appears that the problem of feeding the people of Belgium transcends other than Belgian relief. The one function of Americans in Belgian relief is the purchase and dispatch of food. We have expended every dollar that we have received in the purchase and dispatch of foodstuffs already, and it will take all the funds we can raise here to take care of emergency pending arrival of stuffs from America.

It is obvious that no philanthropic exertion will be too great to relieve the acute suffering of those victims of the war who are innocent of any participation in it.

Praised by Belgian Consul.

When Starr J. Murphy and Frederick T. Gates of the Rockefeller Foundation were asked to amplify the statement, they replied that it gave all the details available at this time, and there was nothing they could add. Pierre Mali, the Belgian Consul General, at his home in Plainfield, N. J., said that he had not heard before of the undertaking.

"I can only say at this time," Mr. Mali added, "that it is a very handsome thing to do, and that I know the people of Belgium will be deeply grateful for it all."

Robert W. de Forest, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Belgian Relief Committee, was out of the city and could not be reached.

Lionel Hagenaers, member of the Belgian Relief Committee, said at his home, 119 Amity Street, Brooklyn:

"The importance of Mr. Rockefeller's generosity may be realized when it is known that not more than ten days' supplies remain for the Belgian people. This aid could not come at a more fortunate time. A splendid organization has been provided throughout Belgium for the distribution of supplies, which is recognized by both the Belgian and German Governments. This organization is composed of prominent Belgians, who will see to it that the food supplies reach those for whom they are intended.

Some Pay for Food.

"It was arranged that food should be furnished free to those who were unable to pay for it. Others able to pay would be required to pay the actual cost, whereby the relief fund would be helped to this extent and the money used over again for the good of the most unfortunate and poverty stricken in the war zone."

John D. Rockefeller's desire to establish the Foundation was made known first in March, 1910, when a bill was introduced in the United States Senate by Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire for its incorporation. Its object as stated in the bill was "to promote the well-being and to advance the civilization of the people of the United States and its territories and possessions and of foreign lands in the acquisition and dissemination of knowledge; in the prevention and relief of suffering, and in the promotion of any and all the elements of human progress."

For this purpose the corporation was to establish, maintain, and endow institutions. The membership of the Foundation was to be not fewer than five nor more than twenty-five, and elections were to be held by the members to fill vacancies. No limit was placed on the amount of funds the corporation might hold, and provision was made for the exemption from taxation of personal property and funds applied to the uses of the trust.

No member of the Foundation was to receive any pecuniary benefits other than a reasonable compensation for his services. The transactions of the corporation were to be reported annually to the Secretary of the Interior, and the charter was to be subject to alteration or repeal at the pleasure of Congress.

Foundation Once Criticised.

There was widespread criticism of the project. It was urged that there should be some restriction of the power of the members of the corporation to elect their own successors, and that the amount of money that could be accumulated should be limited. Some critics contended that the Foundation should not be perpetual, but subject to termination with a distribution of its funds, and that its control should be vested more specifically in Congress.

Amendments to the bill were made by Congress, providing that Congress might limit the objects of the corporation as the interests of the public might demand, and that all gifts or property should be subject to this provision. The total amount of property the Foundation might hold was limited to $100,000,000, and it was provided that the income should not be accumulated or added to the principal, but should be disbursed currently.

It was suggested that after a period of fifty years the corporation might distribute the principal as well as the income with the consent of two-thirds of its members, and that after 100 years Congress might direct such distribution. In order to prevent a self-perpetuating board controlling the corporation, it was proposed that new members should be elected subject to the approval of the President of the United States, the Chief Justice of the United States, the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House, and the Presidents of Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Johns Hopkins, and Chicago Universities. Another amendment limited the tax exemption on the property to Federal imposts, and gave it no relief from State taxes, while the minimum number of members of the corporation was raised from five to nine.

Chartered in New York.

The bill never became a law, and in 1913 a measure to give the Foundation a New York charter was introduced in Albany by Senator James A. Foley of this city. The Foley bill, as it was passed and signed by Gov. Sulzer, defined the powers of the corporation as follows:

To take and hold by bequest, devise, gift, purchase, or lease, either absolutely or in trust for any of its purposes, any property, real or personal, without limitation as to amount or value, except such limitation, if any, as the Legislature shall hereafter specifically impose; to convey such property and to invest and reinvest any principal, and deal with and expend the income and principal of the corporation in such manner as in the judgment of the trustees will best promote its objects.

It shall have all the power and be subject to all the restrictions which now pertain by law to membership corporations created by a special law, so far as the same are applicable thereto and are not inconsistent with the provisions of this act.

The persons named in the first section of this act, or a majority of them, shall hold a meeting and organize the corporation and adopt a constitution and by-laws, not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of this State. The constitution shall prescribe the manner of selection of members, the number of members who shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business at meetings of the corporation, the number of trustees by whom the business and affairs of the corporation shall be managed, the qualifications, powers, and the manner of selection of the trustees and officers of the corporation, the manner of amending the constitution and by-laws of the corporation, and any other provisions for the management and disposition of the property and regulation of the affairs of the corporation which may be deemed expedient.

Difficulties in Distributing Supplies to Non-Combatants.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—While representatives of the Rockefeller Foundation seem to have kept their plans for war relief work quiet it is believed here that arrangements of a general sort have reached sufficiently definite stages to insure the unobstructed transportation of supplies sent to the innocent sufferers from the war. These arrangements, though apparently without any direct reference to the sweeping plan announced today by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., were made some weeks ago in London. The subject then was considered particularly, it is understood, by the American Ambassador and the Belgian Minister in London with especial reference to getting foodstuffs to the starving people of Belgium.

It is believed those arrangements may be extended so as to apply the relief to at least the more accessible of the other countries now at war.

President Wilson may comment formally on the plan tomorrow, and meantime White House officials let it be known that unofficially the Government would do everything possible to aid the movement. Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador; Jules Jusserand, the French Ambassador, and other diplomats said the plans showed great public spirit.

"It is a magnificent idea," said Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, "and I am sure that it will be declared such unanimously by every one who has occasion to comment on this humanitarian plan."

Ambassador Jusserand declared that the news of such immediate and practical relief for the stricken Belgians especially would be indeed welcome to all the world.

"It has given me great pleasure to hear this," he said, "and I know that it will be of great satisfaction to every one, and especially to those who understand what terrible destitution exists among the families in Belgium."

The Belgian Minister, Mr. Havenith, was in New York today discussing methods for the furtherance of the work of the Belgian Relief Commission, with the Belgian Consul General. The news was received with gratification at the legation, and it was stated unofficially that the present action of the Foundation probably would be the means of saving a great many lives.

DR. ROSE COMING HERE.

Noted Southern Educator to Meet Foundation Colleagues.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Dr. Wickliffe Rose stated tonight that he did not know enough about the Rockefeller Foundation's plan for aiding the destitute non-combatants in Europe to make any statement on the subject.

Dr. Rose, it is understood, will leave for New York within the next few days to discuss with other members of the foundation the plan to send abroad a commission, of which commission he will be the head.

Dr. Wickliffe Rose has long been a prominent figure in Southern educational affairs, and since the chartering of the Rockefeller Foundation by New York has been one of its members. He is a native of Tennessee, and was educated at the University of Nashville. He has been at different times a professor in Peabody College, University of Nashville, and the University of Tennessee.

Why You Should Support

James W. Wadsworth, Jr.

For United States Senator

BECAUSE Senator Elihu Root writes to him: "I want you to be Senator because I have watched your career, and I consider that, above all the other younger men who have been in American public life in recent years, you have exhibited the greatest promise of useful public service of the highest order. I rank your ability and fitness for great service in the Senate of the United States far, far above the competency of any of your competitors."

Because, in the words of Robert H. Fuller, Esq., secretary to Governor Hughes, "He co-operated with the Governor in the passage of many other important but less conspicuous measures which Mr. Hughes recommended for the consideration of the Legislature. Speaker Wadsworth's attitude was always frank and above-board, and Governor Hughes felt a warm personal liking for him."

The argument that it is necessary to defeat Mr. Wadsworth in order to sustain the President's policy of neutrality is foolish and absurd. Every Senator, Republican or Democrat, will sustain that policy. That is not a question of politics, it is a question of patriotism.

Remember, you are electing a Senator to serve six years. Do you want New York represented in the Senate solely by Tammany Hall? Think this over.

Mr. Voter, Read Facts!

The statements which appear in the public press regarding the office of State Comptroller show that Mr. Whitman is so absolutely unfair in what he has to say about my department and so reckless in his misrepresentation that I feel justified in making a public reply.

Mr. Whitman charges that the transfer tax appraisers and other appointees engaged in fixing the transfer tax are members of Tammany Hall, which, in the county of New York in some instances is true, but Mr. Whitman did not state, and in all of his speeches has neglected to state, that the law provides for the appointment of appraisers in sixteen counties, and attorneys in all the counties of the State, and that in every instance I have appointed residents of each county to do the work in that county. He refused to state that under a decision of the Court of Appeals in New York and Kings counties I removed the appointees of my predecessor who were, with two exceptions, district leaders of the Republican organization. He refused to state that my appointees have performed month for month almost twice as much service as their predecessors; that besides keeping up the work of appraisals they have disposed of more than 1,500 cases neglected by their predecessors and that the revenues received from this tax have been each year more than $2,000,000 greater than during any year of the Republican administration, and that this increase would have been impossible if the appraisals had been conducted with such delay and laxity as existed under the Republican administration. Mr. Whitman refused to state that the enforcement of the Transfer Tax Law is under the direction and control of Judge George W. McElroy, an organization Republican, retained in office by me solely because of his efficiency.

Mr. Whitman in no place and at no time has dared to say that the work of my office has not been conducted efficiently and honestly; he has absolutely ignored the fact that during my administration more has been done to better the management of the fiscal affairs of this State than during the term of any predecessor. Mr. Whitman has ignored the fact that his party organization a few weeks ago sent a statement broadcast through the State that the State was bankrupt and the surplus had been exhausted, when the truth was that due to the efficiency of the administration of this office on the first of October last there was a surplus in the treasury of more than twelve millions of dollars. Mr. Whitman ignored the fact that if the policies followed by my predecessors had been continued there would have been no surplus, but the fact that a large surplus exists to-day is due almost entirely to the enforcement of the Finance Law along the lines laid down by myself. Mr. Whitman ignored the fact that while he had promoted a great amount of publicity concerning the management of our State highways without obtaining any definite result, that I had absolutely and completely stopped favoritism to contractors by means of supplemental agreements and had brought it about that not a dollar of the State's money is spent for the repair or construction of highways without free and full competition. Mr. Whitman cannot say anything or make any charge against the efficiency of the management of the Comptroller's office during the past four years, which is true. Again, while Mr. Whitman wilfully misrepresented my administration for the purpose of creating a prejudice which would benefit him, he is absolutely silent about the qualifications of my principal opponent in this campaign. I claim that if Mr. Whitman chooses to attack me he must, at the same time, approve the attitude of Mr. Travis on public questions while in the State Senate and be bound by his record.

When Mr. Whitman attacks me he must declare himself as favoring the repeal of the 54-hour law and the other labor laws enacted to protect the health and welfare of our children, for that is the record of my opponent. He must declare himself as being opposed to the pensioning of worthy employees in the several departments of the public service, because that is the record of my opponent. He must declare himself opposed to recognizing the long years of service of our public school teachers, because that is the record of my opponent. Finally, Mr. Whitman must declare himself as believing that matters of patronage are more important than matters of public policy and efficient public service, and that an appeal to prejudice is more effective in seeking the support of the voter than the record of duty performed and results obtained in the public interest.

TIGERS IN SLUMP AGAINST WILLIAMS

Tigers' Showing Far Below Standard They Will Display Against Harvard Saturday.

Under the broader scope of football attack, with the new rules in operation, the position of the big teams against the smaller college elevens does not become so prominent this season. The most conspicuous example on last Saturday was Princeton against Williams. This game resulted in a 7 to 7 tie, and yet, according to experts and according to officials, the result did not show the true worth of the Tiger eleven.

Princeton, in the first place, must have underestimated the strength of the Williams eleven. Another thing, after the worry they were subjected to in playing the strong Dartmouth eleven a week previous, there was a slump. The Princeton team, in the throes of a slump, is not the team that will face the Harvard eleven at Cambridge next Saturday. The Tigers have possibilities and it would be too bad to come to the conclusion that they showed their real talent against Williams.

Princeton is keyed up against Harvard and Yale, and the Williams game, after all, was not of vital importance to it. It must be admitted, however, that their attack was weak and their spirit not as high as they were capable of. According to those who are close to the Tiger eleven, the showing against Williams does not mean that the Princeton eleven has forgotten all its football knowledge; it just means that they did not measure up to their possibilities, in the face of an attack which very much surprised them.

During the coming week it is very likely that the Princeton team will measure up to its real worth, and will play its best game against Cambridge at the Stadium next. Harvard's showing on Saturday against Michigan was true to tradition. Harvard wanted to defeat the Westerners, and that is all. The touchdown and goal by "Tacks" Hardwick proved their superiority, and, after all, that is all they wanted to prove. Mahan was out of the game, and he will be in Harvard's two big games, and that means much to the Crimson.

The very fact that Coach Haughton did not deem it necessary to push his strongest attack against the Wolverines showed that he judged his enemy with good judgment. The Michigan old-fashioned line-plunging tactics proved that the West has not neglected the old game, but it also showed that Eastern defense has not been neglected, and it must be admitted that the fiercest attack that the Wolverines could show was solved by the Harvard defense.

Yale got full revenge against the Colgate eleven, which, however means little, because Yale is stronger and Colgate is weaker than both of these teams were last season. There is one significant thing about Yale's showing on Saturday which should not be overlooked, and that is, the Blue eleven under Coach Hinkey has not lost heart because of one reverse, and that it will go into the Princeton and Harvard games with all the inspiration which the new régime at New Haven can give. This in itself should mean much to the Yale eleven.

The Army team at West Point made a showing on Saturday against Villanova which was worthy of consideration. The Soldiers, even against a weak defense, showed an attack which promised great possibilities and it must be admitted that they have shown more in the way of wide-awake football than their bitterest enemy, the Navy. Coach Charley Daly has not confined his coaching efforts to one eleven, but he can call on a score of substitutes who play almost as well as the first string men.

Cornell lived up to their promise against Holy Cross and the Syracuse eleven which downed Michigan, showed that they made no mistake by smothering the Carlisle Indians.

The Navy eleven had no easy time in subduing the A. & M. eleven of North Carolina by a score of 16 to 14. The Navy has not resorted to new football in the same way that the Army has, and in order to measure up to the Army at Philadelphia on Nov. 28 it will be necessary for the coaches to spend much time in teaching the Midshipmen the secrets of the open game.

TIGERS IN CONDITION.

Only One Player on Hospital List—Hard Work on Gridiron.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 1.—All but one of Princeton's football squad is in condition to enter the final two weeks of the season, Trainer Fitzpatrick announced tonight. Because of the team's good shape, will also because of the miserable showing made against Williams, a week of strenuous work is in prospect preparatory for the Harvard game.

Everstadt is the only man out of condition. Capt. Ballin is recovering from the effects of a slight cold, and Eddie Trenkman, the big guard who has been out of the game for a week, will report for work tomorrow. Dickerman showed Saturday that he was fit to be used regularly, but he showed also that he needs a lot of coaching to remedy some of his defects in catching punts and running with the ball.

Navy Shy on Football Tickets.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Nov. 1.—Owing to the increased membership of the Navy Athletic Association and the smaller number of seats assigned to the Navy, some of the members will be allowed but two tickets for the Army-Navy football game in Philadelphia on Nov. 28, the others receiving three. The Navy A. A. bears all the expenses of the athletics at the Naval Academy, and the number of tickets assigned them is very inadequate in many cases. The smaller number will go to the members of shortest standing.

Layfield's Condition Unchanged.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Nov. 1.—The condition late today of Robert Layfield, the little quarter back of the Johns Hopkins team, who was injured yesterday in the football contest with Lehigh remains unchanged. An X-ray photograph of his back was taken this morning and the development of the plate did not reveal any fracture of the vertebra. The player is paralyzed from the waist down, and it is believed that he has suffered some injury to the spinal cord, the nature of which and just where remains to be revealed.

HARVARD PLAYERS TO REST.

Regulars Will Begin Work Tomorrow for Defense Against Princeton.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 1.—It will be a day or two before the Harvard football players who went through the Michigan game Saturday will be able to do much hard work toward the final getting ready for the Princeton Tigers, who will be this week's attraction in the stadium. No one was seriously hurt here Saturday, but all were battered hard. Trumbull, who wore himself out and also hurt his head again, will rest until Wednesday, and Wallace, as soon as he gets over his bump on the head, will get back into the middle of the line. Smith, the new end, who did so well at Hardwick's regular wing, hurt a leg that has been the cause of his keeping out of football most all the year, but even he is not expected to have to remain on the side lines long.

The substitutes will have the work tomorrow, but on Tuesday the regulars will get together to put on their Princeton offense and to bolster up their own defenses against what is believed here to be a versatile Princeton attack if not a finished one. Mahan and Pennock both will start in again. Each of these veterans could have been used against Michigan had Haughton thought necessary. The Harvard coach was determined to save them if he could, and that this came about is a great source of satisfaction in the Crimson camp. Saturday's game meant a lot for such players as Francke, Dees, Parson, and the younger end rushers, and altogether the match was about as hard football as any team could have.

EXETER'S FINE RECORD.

New Hampshire Schoolboys Have Clean Slate for Six Games.

Special to The New York Times.

EXETER, N. H., Nov. 1.—The Phillips Exeter Academy football team, coached by "Tad" Jones, the old school player who later was one of Yale's brilliant quarter backs, is furnishing the sensation of the interscholastic football season in New England if not, indeed, everywhere.

The team, rated as New England's best schoolboy product in 1913, this Fall is making an even better record than the eleven which closed its campaign against Andover with a 59 to 49 victory last season, Jones having played with Exeter nine years before, and on the occasion of the Academy's last previous win over Andover in nine years. Exeter has not lost a game since 1912, and although scored on several times a year ago, to date has a clean goal line in the six matches played in the 1914 campaign, and Saturday's victory over Princeton freshmen was the fifth consecutive one over the first year teams in the biggest colleges of the East.

Last Fall Exeter scored 171 points to its opponent's 29, being scored on for touchdowns in four of its six games, and an opponent's field goal coming in one of the others. But this Fall the Exeter's goal line has been defended bravely, the team not having been scored on and registering a total of 134 points in six games.

The season opened with an 18 to 0 victory over Cushing Academy, and then the Dartmouth freshmen were beaten by the same score. The Pennsylvania youngsters were taken into camp 17 to 0, and the Yale freshmen 14 to 0. Harvard, 1913, being the next in line and being beaten 34 to 0. Then, yesterday, the Princeton freshmen were smothered by a 23 to 0 score.

Ex-Capt. McCormack of Princeton is assisting Jones in preparing Exeter for its final match with Andover, now almost at hand.

YALE STILL UNSETTLED.

Contest Against Colgate Leaves New Haven Rushline Problem Open.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 1.—The problem of the Yale rushline was not settled by yesterday's one-sided game with Colgate. The latter repeated the performance that every team which has faced Yale this Fall has exhibited of gaining freely through the line. Colgate recorded 290 yards, securing seventeen first downs. This record is a consistent addition to indications of Yale's inability to weather a backfield attack, and compels the conclusion that the games with Harvard and Princeton, now only a fortnight distant, will be decided by the larger of two good sized scores. Yale's hope of winning from the Crimson and the Tiger lies in outscoring them and in becoming reconciled to several scores by each.

The long-awaited strengthening of the Yale rushline is due this week, however, when the two first-string tackles, Capt. Talbott and George Sheldon, resume their places in good condition for the first time this year. Capt. Talbott began the season by worrying, then the warm weather affected him, and finally a slight abscess compelled leaving his leg. Today he is waiting the healing of the bit of surgery and will return to lead his team in a few days in all-American form. He will begin practice slowly and will probably not play in the Brown game next Saturday which closes Yale's list of games preparatory to the Harvard and Princeton bouts.

Coach Hinkey is taking the Brown game as an incident of the season, developing the team and conditioning the players with a view to their simply being ready for the Princeton and Harvard matches.

Lincoln Giants' Last Stand.

The Lincoln Giants, world's colored baseball champions, will make their final appearance of the season tomorrow in a doubleheader with a selected team of big league players under the direction of Jimmy Eschen, whose team will be made up as follows: Pitcher, Al Williams, who plays next season with the New York Nationals; catcher, Otto Miller, Brooklyn Nationals; first base, Tim Jordan, Toronto; second base, Clinch of Lowell; shortstop, Getz of Brooklyn Nationals; third base, Burke of Lowell; left field, Reifigle of Detroit; centre field, Jack Dalton of Brooklyn Nationals; right field, Heinie Batch of Rochester. The game will take place at Olympic Field, 130th Street and Fifth Avenue.

All Nationals Are Victors.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 1.—The All-National League team, with Alexander "the Great" pitching, defeated the All-Americans here this afternoon by a score of 3 to 2.

Score:	R.	H.	E.
Nationals	3	11	2
Americans	2	10	1

TO ENLARGE YALE BOWL FOR 70,000

Extra Seating Capacity Required for the Yale-Harvard Game—All Seats Reserved.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 1.—Everard Thompson, manager of the Yale athletic ticket department, tonight announced an amusing condition following the closing for last night of the Yale-Harvard football game. It was found that, roughly speaking, 70,000 applications have been received. The new Yale bowl seats only 61,000 people. The situation was quickly met, and it was decided to immediately erect enough temporary seats to fill applications, which have been received up to last night. Between 69,000 and 70,000 seats will be sold. Applications continue to pour in upon the ticket department, but they will be returned. As the game will not be played for weeks it is believed that the Yale would receive applications for fully 125,000 tickets if the date for closing were set at one week before the game.

More than 61,000 seats have been already constructed and ready for use. About 9,000 more will be built around the parapet that caps the bowl. Space had been left arranging for standing room, accommodating about 12,000 people. It has been decided not to utilize this room for standing spectators this year, but to devote it to the construction of the 9,000 seats which will be built immediately.

Harvard has been alloted 20,000 seats in the new structure, and is clammoring for more. For the first time in fifteen years the Yale management allowed Yale alumni and undergraduates four tickets each this Fall. It was thought a week ago that the public would have a chance to purchase about 10,000 tickets, but the ticket department has been literally swamped with applications as the date for closing approached.

The construction of the stadium is complete in every detail, and the game could be played there tomorrow if necessary with 61,000 seats available. There was talk of playing the Yale-Brown game next Saturday there to allow Yale team to judge the air currents and light and shadows. It has been decided, however, to use the old field for the Brown encounter.

DEAD HEAT ON SPEEDWAY.

Good Racing in the Sixth Weekly Matinee of Harness Horses.

Edwin Shoemaker's bay gelding Startle and Nathan Straus's chestnut gelding H. O. McKinney, driven by Tim Sullivan, came down on even terms in the third heat of the Class A trot yesterday in the sixth weekly matinee on the Harlem Speedway. The event was the real feature of a card of eleven events, and showed Shoemaker a blue ribbon winner for the first time this season. With the dead heat counting as a victory for each horse, the event was still unsettled at the conclusion of the third meeting, and in the final brush to decide the winner of the class Shoemaker managed to send Startle under the wire in the lead after a spirited finish.

J. V. Hunt's brown mare Clover Patch appears to be in a class by herself when pacing half miles over the straightaway, and was again the winner of the Class A pace. With 20 points now to her credit, not including yesterday's victory, she is a sure winner for the first of the season's cups which will go to the sidewheelers.

Champion Brooklyns Outclassed.

Outclassed in every department of the game the Brooklyn F. C., amateur champions of the United States and holders of the Dewar Challenge Trophy, emblematic of soccer supremacy, were eliminated in the first round of this year's competition, which is under the auspices of the United States Football Association, by the Brooklyn Celtics, runners up last season, by the one-sided score of 5 goals to 1 at Marquette Oval, Brooklyn, yesterday before 3,000 spectators.

Golf for Belgian Relief Fund.

Latest reports from the Metropolitan Golf Association's headquarters are to the effect that practically all the clubs in the district are responding with a will to the suggestion to do something for the Belgian Relief Fund. Frederick H. Thomas, the Secretary, says that the firm which is striking off the medals is doing so at an unusually low figure; also that the demand for miniature flags is going to be larger than was first expected.

No less than five competitions have been mapped out for the members of the Fox Hills Golf Club tomorrow. Following this event will be a thirty-six hole medal play scratch event for the Captain's trophy. There will also be a qualifying round, handicap conditions, for the Brooklyn Cup, the best sixteen scores to qualify. Julius Siegbert presents a prize for Class B golfers, eighteen holes handicap conditions. The last event on the card is a four-ball handicap.

Holed Out in One.

A golfer's ambition of a life time—to hole out in one—was realized yesterday at Baltusrol Golf Club links when Tom C. Watkins of South Orange made the ninth hole in one while playing in a four-ball match. As a result of his achievement, Mr. Watkins, who is a veteran golfer, will find his place among the club's immortals. The entire club celebrated the event last night.

TEST PROSPECT COURSE.

Irish-American Athletes Find Championship Route Rather Stiff.

In a preparatory test for the senior Metropolitan cross-country championship race Nov. 21 Coach Lawson Robertson of the Irish-American A. C. yesterday sent his entire team twice around the Prospect Park course in Brooklyn, a distance of about six and a quarter miles. The practice event took on the nature of a race between the Winged Fistites, all of whom made good time over the rather stiff route, which comprises the best cross-country going in the park. Tom Barden led his team mates over the entire journey, which he covered in 36 minutes 31 seconds. A. J. Fogel, the young distancer, finished second to Barden, twenty yards in his wake, while Pat Flynn, the former Irish cross-country champion, was third, a second behind Fogel.

Jim McNamara, Frank Zuna, William Fogel, John Dennelly, William Rozette, Thomas Lawson, and Phil Keating, a New Jersey recruit of the Irish club, were others who followed the pace of Barden.

Soukup Cuts Own Record.

Improving his own record figures for the Holy Cross Lyceum road running course by twenty-five seconds, J. Soukup of the College Point Young Men's Catholic Lyceum yesterday won the weekly chase of the West Forty-third Street organization in the fast time of 20:00 flat. Two weeks ago the College Point boy established the former course record. Sixteen athletes started in the event and all finished. J. J. Cullen, unattached, after setting the pace for two miles, fell back and finished second, 150 yards behind Soukup. S. Silverstein of the Sheridan A. C. was third.

Easy Victory for Jackson.

An even two minutes were cut off the Dominican Lyceum cross-country course record yesterday when Sidney Jackson, the colored runner of the Irish-American A. C., easily annexed the principal honors in the club's weekly road contest in 25:20. The Collins of the Union Settlement A. C. registered the former figures three weeks ago. J. Lasgar of the College Point Y. M. C. L. (rescue) Jackson hard most of the distance, but finished 25 seconds after the Winged Fistite. Of sixteen starters not one failed to complete the four and three-quarter mile journey.

Lemberg First in Record Time.

Only seven athletes participated in the Trinity Club's invitation four-mile road run in Brooklyn yesterday. A. J. Lemberg, the home club's promising young distancer, was a minute and a half ahead of his nearest opponent, Charles Davis, also of the Trinity Club, at the finish, and made a new course record of 20:08. The old mark, 20:55, was established two weeks ago by Sidney Jackson of the Irish-American A. C. Lembefg won the 400 yards from Davis, who in turn was about 250 yards in front of C. Ochsenreiter of the Barbette A. C., third man to finish. Summary: A. Lemberg, Trinity Club, 20:08; Charles Davis, Trinity Club, 21:42; C. Ochsenreiter, Barbette A. C., 22:40; J. Burrell, Barbette A. C., 22:48; F. Englebohn, Finnish-American A. C., 23:31; J. Ryan, Barbette A. C., 24:25; J. Wilstader, 26:00.

Dominican Lyceum Entertainment.

"A Trip Through Erin" is the title of a scenic production to be presented by the "Irish Minstrels" in connection with the annual dance of the Dominican Lyceum in Lexington Avenue Hotel, Fifty-eighth Street, between Third and Lexington Avenues, tonight. Many prominent athletes will attend the affair.

Morningside Race Won by Stokley.

William Stokley of the St. Christopher A. C. won the four-mile cross-country run of the Morningside Athletic Club yesterday, covering the course in the splendid time of 20:00. E. C. Holay, unattached, ran second, with Oscar Nelson of the home club third. The pack, consisting of a dozen athletes, was well bunched up to the mile post, where Nelson took command. At the second mile he relinquished the lead, Stokley and Holay ran neck and neck until within 100 yards of the finish, when Stokley shook off Holay.

New Road Mark for Scheffer.

Casper Scheffer of the Long Island A. C. yesterday cut two more seconds off the record of the Atlas Athletic Club's cross-country course in Brooklyn, when he won the weekly hill-and-dale event of the club in 19:30. Jim Plant, also of the Long Islands, last Sunday set up the old figures. Scheffer yesterday defeated fourteen rivals, triumphing by more than a minute over Tim McLoughlin of the Knights of St. Anthony, who, in turn, led a clubmate, William Banfield, to the tape by 125 yards.

Walkers in 15-Mile Trip.

Thirty-two members of the Walkers' Club of America took part in a fifteen-mile trip yesterday from St. George, S. I., to the Elizabethport Ferry and return. Most of the participants were regulars, who were tuning up for the twenty-five-mile national indoor championship race to be held under the auspices of the Walkers' Club in the Twenty-second Regiment Armory on Nov. 14. Another distance walk will take place Sunday, starting from the Long Island Railroad Station at Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, to Coney Island and return.

O'Connor Wins in Fast Time.

James O'Connor of the New York A. C. yesterday captured the weekly four-and-a-quarter-mile road run of the West Harlem A. C. in the fast time of 22:14. J. Fitzgerald, the professional distance runner, faced the victor.

Bronxdales Hold Two Events.

The Bronxdale Athletic Club yesterday opened its road running season with a members' handicap and an open run. R. Higgins, with an allowance of four minutes, won the former contest, while J. O'Connor of the Pastime A. C. proved best in a big field in the open run. Both events were run over a four-mile course.

HOPES TO REGAIN LIGHTWEIGHT TITLE

The lightweight championship will be at stake tonight when Freddie Welsh, the title holder, meets Ad Wolgast in a ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden. The men have agreed to weigh in at 135 pounds at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Both are at the weight and have encountered little trouble making the mark, so that there will be no hitch in that respect. Billy Roche has been selected to referee the contest, which will start promptly at 10 o'clock P. M.

To win back his lost title Wolgast will be forced to score a knockout over Welsh. He is determined to fight his hardest, appreciating that it will probably be his last chance to get back the crown. If good condition will make it a good bout the fans are in store for a hummer. Both men are in their best possible fighting trim, and with the aggressive Wolgast tearing in from round to round and Welsh meeting him in the exchanges, as he says he will, there should be plenty of fireworks before the tenth round is reached, if it goes that far.

The boxing week in New York will be opened as usual by tonight's show at the Olympic A. C. Manager Paddy Donnelly says that he has arranged the best show of the season. Jimmy Capper, welterweight champion of the United States Navy, will box Ray Hatfield of Newark in the first ten-round bout. Willie Chandler of the Boys' Club will box Bushey Graham in the second ten-round contest, and in the final bout Frank Carbine of Texas will clash with Jack Dunn of Philadelphia. Charles Bradley, heavyweight champion of South America, who was recommended by the American Consul at Antwerp, Belgium, will meet the best heavyweight that can be secured.

A ten-round bout between Young Burns of the east side and Harry Pierce of Brooklyn will be staged at the Broadway Sporting Club, Brooklyn, tomorrow night. The semi-final will be between Billy Grupp of St. Louis and Tommy Madden, the Brooklyn middleweight. The opening bout will be between Josh Matthews of Brooklyn and Eddie Morrissey of Yorkville.

The six featherweight boxers who will appear in the featherweight tournament to be held at the Manhattan Sporting Club, 155th Street and Eighth Avenue, on Thursday night have posted a forfeit of $250 each with the McMahon Brothers as a guarantee for weight and appearance. Eddie Campi, the sensational California boxer, will box Frankie Fleming, the Canadian champion; Patsy Kline, the hard-hitting Newark featherweight, who Johnny Kilbane refuses to meet, will clash with the best featherweight that England has turned out since Jim Driscoll; Eddie Morgan, and Young Kansas of Buffalo, who Frank Erne says is the coming featherweight champion, will box the sensational Philadelphian, Bobby Reynolds.

Manhasset Bay Y. C. Shoot.

The trapshooting season for yachtsmen on the north shore of Long Island Sound began yesterday at the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club at Port Washington with a series of five matches, in which six of the members took part. H. L. Hoyt carried off the honors of the day by winning every match—two of them with full scores. In the twenty-five-"bird" handicap shoot Hoyt won with a full score on his handicap of 1. In the shoot for the monthly cup D. F. Smith tied Hoyt, with a score of 24, and in the shoot-off Hoyt won. Hoyt also won the leg for the yearly cup with 24 as his score. D. F. Smith being the runner up with 23. The other wins were the ten and fifteen "bird" scratch shoots, with 8 and 15, respectively.

Cyclists in Training for Long Grind.

With the annual six-day race at Madison Square Garden less than two weeks away, a score of the riders have started conditioning for the event, most of those on the ground engaging in workouts yesterday at the Newark Velodrome. Francesco Verri, the Italian sprint champion, who arrived last Friday from Italy to race Frank Kramer for the indoor sprint championship, engaged in several brushes with the other riders and held his own. He is stronger and has a finer turn of speed than when he was here last year. Verri and Oscar Egg, the Swiss champion, have teamed up for the big grind. The most sincere worker yesterday was Jimmy Moran, who is teamed with Reggie McNamara of Australia, the latter getting third money with Eddie Root in last year's race. Other riders who were out for trial spins were Grenda, Clarke, Egg, Cameron, Fogler, Kramer, Lawrence, McNamara, Lawson, and Kaiser.

Newark Basket Ball Team Wins.

In a well-played basket ball game at Garden City, L. I., on Saturday night the Red Star five of Newark defeated the Garden City quintet by a score of 38 to 14. The feature of the contest was the unerring aim of Skillman of the visitors, who out of fourteen attempts caged the ball twelve times for a total of twenty-four points.

Lieut. Dunn Wins Golf Title.

Lieut. W. K. Dunn, U. S. A., retained the championship title of the Oakland Golf Club yesterday when he defeated William V. Swords in the final, at 36 holes, by 5 up and 3 to play. The feature of the army officer's play was his consistently long driving. Finishing the morning round 3 up, Lieut. Dunn maintained his lead, and increased it to five, the match terminating at the thirty-third hole, which was won by Lieut. Dunn.

DIVIDE CYCLING HONORS.

Jensen and Welton Capture Races on Pelham Parkway.

The weekly point race of the New York Division, C. R. C. Association, was held yesterday over the Pelham Parkway course, the distance being five miles. "Silent Eddie" Jensen, the Inter-Club unpaced champion, jumped the field in the last half mile, and won easily. Second place went to J. Welton, while third and fourth places were annexed by A. Palmer and I. Taub, respectively.

After the point race, the one-hour unpaced record trials, in competition for the "Benjamin Boyes Trophy" were held, and here Jackie Welton came into his own, by setting the mark at 20 3-10 miles, thereby breaking the old record, held by Bert Baker, by 3-20 of a mile. Jensen, the Inter-Club unpaced champion, did not compete in this event, but will make an attempt to better this record, next Sunday. Summary:

Papesca Leads New England Cyclists

The New England Wheelmen resumed their races in the weekly "cork" series on the Eastern Boulevard yesterday, when J. Papesca triumphed over a field of ten in a five-mile event in the fast time of 17:36 4-5. This race was postponed from last week because of the Interclub Amateur Cycle Road Racing League championships. E. Auckelin, A. Desinore, and C. Baron were other point scorers.

Averaging sixteen miles an hour, L. A. Frayssé and William Lock of the New York Division yesterday won a four-hour team race, closed to members of the Century Road Club of America, held on the old Guttenberg (N. J.) race track. Frayssé and Lock traveled sixty-four miles. The other teams finished in the following order: A. L. Everitt and George Knopf, New Jersey; E. E. Frayssé and E. H. Gerard, New Jersey; J. Hall and T. Heisig, New York; J. G. Schmidt and A. J. Hubbard, New York, and E. T. Tarbortilli and J. Zabelisky, New Jersey.

Alfred O. Lake, with a total of 28 points, yesterday captured the championship of the Empire City Wheelmen in a series of five races contested at the Fordham Beach race track. Lake finished first in the half-mile, mile, and two-mile events, and second in the quarter-mile dash and five-mile race. Thomas Bolow, with 23 points, drew down second honors, while Frank Platt finished third, with 19 points.

To Play for Dewar Trophy.

The best amateur players in the city are entered in the English billiard tournament which begins tonight at Doyle's Forty-second Street Academy. The trophy for this event was presented by Sir Thomas Dewar of London, who is perhaps the most prominent patron of amateur sport in England. The emblem is a shield of solid silver, which stands five feet in height. Among the entries are Pye, Levy, Ridgeway, Milligan, Hayman, Greaves, Butler, Woods, Rainsley, Ackerman, and Kortland. Tonight's game will bring together Pye and Levy in a game of 200 points.

Lakewood's Open Golf Tourney.

The golf tournament of the Lakewood Country Club Nov. 5, 6, and 7 is open to all clubs belonging to the United States Golf Association. It was erroneously stated that the tournament would be an invitation affair. Many of the leading Metropolitan players are entered and, as the course is in good condition, low scores are expected.

Miss Nesmith Leads at Golf.

Miss Edith Nesmith won the women's golf championship of the Flushing Country Club yesterday, defeating Mrs. Paul Wise in the final by 2 up and 1 to play. The final was at eighteen holes, and on the greens, Miss Nesmith proved her superiority.

ORGANIZED BALL READY FOR PEACE

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—August Herrmann, Chairman of the National Commission, left here tonight for Cincinnati, and is said to have taken with him a plan for the amalgamation into Organized Baseball of the Federal League.

This afternoon he had a telephonic conversation with Charles Weeghman, President of the Chicago Federals, and later conferred with B. B. Johnson, President of the American League.

Except to admit that preliminary negotiations for ending the baseball war were discussed, Mr. Herrmann would say little.

"Before the subject of peace was broached in New York, we all swore ourselves to secrecy regarding the negotiations," said Herrmann. "It was agreed that publicity probably would wreck our plans, and we will say nothing until we have reached a decision."

The plan being considered is believed to include the absorption of the Federal League so as to leave but the American and National Leagues in the major class.

Representatives of the Brooklyn, Pittsburgh, and St. Louis Federal League Clubs conferred today with President James A. Gilmore, but none would discuss the conference.

Casino Club Squash Matches.

The handicap squash tournament of the Heights Casino Club of Brooklyn opened yesterday with a representative entry list. The tournament was divided into two classes and competition was keen. The play was somewhat restricted owing to the occupation of the courts by the matches in the National Squash Tennis Tournament in progress.

In spite of the severe handicap many of the best players came through successfully in the relay rounds. The big upset of the day was the defeat of Charles M. Bull, Jr., who was an easy victim for R. E. T. Riggs, while J. O. Low came through successfully in his contest with E. A. Freshman. The summary: Class A, First Round.—R. E. T. Riggs (minus 4 aces, 2 or no count) defeated Charles M. Bull, Jr., (minus 10 aces or no count,) 13—6, 15—8; F. M. Blodgett (1 plus 7 aces and half hand) defeated L. Platt, (plus 7 aces,) 17—16, 15—13; J. O. Low (minus 10 aces, 2 or no count) defeated E. A. Freshman, (plus 5 and half hand,) 15—12, 15—8. Class B, First Round.—L. H. Shepard (plus 8 aces) defeated R. L. Brown, (scratch,) 15—5, 15—11. Second Round.—C. Dunning (plus 8 aces) defeated E. G. Bechtel, (plus 2 aces,) 15—12, 15—1

IRVING IN SEMI-FINALS.

Harvard Player Shows Good Form in Squash Tournament.

The national squash tennis Fall tournament, now in progress at the Heights Casino Club, Brooklyn, was advanced yesterday to the semi-final round, with E. Du Pont Irving of the Harvard Club as the only player to advance in the competition. Irving defeated his clubmate, Hamilton Hadden, after an exciting contest by the score of 15—10, 15—18, 15—9. J. H. Williams, who replaced George Whitney of the Harvard Club, was no match for H. E. Bulkely of the Columbia Club, in the second round, although he gave a good account of himself and made the Columbia expert extend himself in at least two of the sets. A. J. Cordier of the Heights Casino, scored an easy victory over R. E. Wigham of the Harvard Club. The summaries:

Second Round.—A. J. Cordier, Heights Casino, defeated R. E. Wigham, Harvard Club, 15—8, 15—10; H. C. Bulkely, Columbia Club, defeated J. H. Williams, Heights Casino, 15—10, 14—17, 15—12.

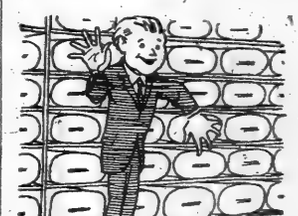
Zbyszko Challenges Gotch.

Wladek Zbyszko, the Polish wrestler, is out with a challenge to Frank Gotch, the present holder of the wrestling championship, through his manager, L. Kowalski. The challenger is willing to post a $1,000 forfeit to bind the match. Gotch, while he is the holder of the title, has not made his appearance on the mat in some time, and Zbyszko believes he should either defend his championship or retire.



"Made in Germany."

Movements to popularize goods of domestic manufacture are well enough, but as a rule people buy what suits them, regardless of where it comes from.

The idea has long prevailed that foreign made goods, especially woolens, were superior to domestic and that idea is responsible for much deception.

The truth is that excellent woolens are made in America and our own foreign purchases are made chiefly for originality of style and the desire to offer something different in texture and appearance than domestic mills supply.

Throughout the stocks garments made from "imported" fabrics are so marked. All others are "made in America," where of course all the garments are produced.

TO-MORROW'S ELECTION.

There are three things that make it extremely desirable that every citizen who has registered and is qualified should vote at the election tomorrow, and we believe that the best interests of the State and our city will be served by the largest vote possible for, and the election of, the Democratic State ticket and the Democratic candidate for United States Senator.

First—Gov. GLYNN has been a remarkably good Governor under very difficult and trying conditions. In his guarding of the finances, in his devotion to economy, and to efficiency as well; in the generally high average of his appointments and the very high character of the most important among them, in his conception of a basic and sound policy for the State Government, and in the courage and sagacity with which he has acted on that conception he has shown himself one of the best Executives we have had since TILDEN. There can be no doubt that the experience and training he has had will make a second term even more fruitful of results.

Second—The voters of the City of New York are especially and deeply interested in his election because he is pledged—and will keep his pledge—to the promotion of the reform principles of the present municipal administration and has the unqualified and confident support of its leaders, Mayor MITCHEL and President MCANENY. Under Gov. GLYNN we shall have not only a firm and sincere believer in home rule in the Governor's office, but one who is in hearty sympathy with the aims which the most intelligent friends of home rule are seeking through its application. Home rule can come to us only through State action, primarily on the revision of the charter. It is of the utmost importance that we should have a Governor who will effectively aid in getting the right kind of revision. Mr. GLYNN will do so.

Third—The City of New York is also especially and deeply interested in the election of a United States Senator who will give cordial support to the national Administration in the critical situation that faces it, and will face it for some time to come. The city further needs, as the business centre of the Republic, a Senator who will stand by the fiscal policy now adopted and who will take no part in agitation for return to the former policy of protection for favored interests. To a degree that we hardly had the right to expect the tariff has been taken out of politics and politics has been divorced from the tariff. As a business proposition it would be gross folly to invite renewal of the agitation, uncertainty, confusion, and depression that must follow an attempt again to upset the tariff. It is our judgment, therefore, that the election of the Democratic candidate for the Senate is by far the best for the interests of this city and for the State.

As to the Constitutional Convention, we can only, at this last moment, repeat our earnest advice to every voter to choose those he thinks the best candidates for delegates. As we have urged the support of Judge CULLEN, Democrat, and Mr. ROOT, Republican, so now we urge voters to come as near as they can in their respective districts to such men as these. Adding that, other things being equal, the State will be best served by delegates who support the general principle of concentrated power and responsibility—the short ballot.

INTERPRETATION OF WAR COSTS.

Those who are looking for prosperity as the result of the war might think of how much greater prosperity would be but for the war. It is estimated that the war is costing daily about $50,000,000, which is represented in an economic sense by nothing, not even the glory of the victors. But the expenditure of $50,000,000 in that manner means loss of the ability to employ 10,000 men. Under modern conditions it requires an investment of between $4,000 and $5,000 to keep a man at work. Taking the larger amount, as tending toward conservatism in the estimate, it follows that each day's war expenditure is a sentence to idleness of ten regiments. And the sentence will run until the wastes of war are made good by work and economy hereafter.

The "butchers' bill" must be added. It can be estimated only in hundreds of thousands, all men in the prime of life. The loss of these workers will annul the previous investment of a sum sufficient to keep the dead and wounded at work. To these awful totals it is necessary to add the actual damage in a material sense, which has been put at hundreds of millions, accuracy being impossible.

No doubt there will be profits here and there, made by the few who have on hand the goods instantly and peremptorily demanded without regard to cost. But that is only the exception which proves the rule. For a generation at least the world will be poorer as the result of this wickedest and costliest war within the experience of any living man.

QUICK RELIEF FOR BELGIUM.

In announcing the purpose of the Rockefeller Foundation to expend millions of dollars if necessary for the relief of the suffering non-combatants of the various countries involved in the European war, an announcement which follows upon active and efficient, though silent, preparations to give relief as quickly as possible, Mr. JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, Jr., emphasizes the fact that the labors of the commission he is sending abroad will not "render unnecessary the efforts of other agencies of relief," that the service of the Foundation will, in fact, "but supplement the public-spirited efforts of the Belgian Relief Committee, of which Mr. ROBERT W. DE FOREST is Chairman." This should be clearly understood. Millions of innocent human beings who have taken no part whatever in the hostilities are in danger of starving to death, and too much cannot be done for them. But while the most strenuous efforts were making to provide relief to the extent of hundreds of thousands of dollars this simple announcement that millions have been made available and are to be expended without delay, and in the most practical manner, must stimulate our national pride and tend to spur to new and stronger endeavors the good men and women who are already devoting their energies to this very work of relief than which there is none more urgent in the world in this hour.

Ambassador PAGE in his dispatch to Mr. ROCKEFELLER which is incorporated in the announcement of the Foundation's plan says that the great present need in Belgium in this hour is food. Money sent to any of the European agencies of distribution will be all but useless. The Foundation will dispatch on Tuesday a large neutral steamship laden with 4,000 tons of flour, rice, beans, and bacon, while the newly appointed commission of men trained in the administration of relief on a large scale who will hereafter superintend the ministrations of the Foundation will depart almost immediately. The work has already been auspiciously begun, however, with an expenditure of $275,000, a small beginning in view of the resources to be drawn upon, but eminently practical and timely.

All the purposes of the Foundation are set forth clearly this morning in the news columns of THE TIMES, and need not be enlarged upon here, but the practical wisdom and humanity which prompted the work, its promise of prompt and effective succor where until now, in view of existing conditions, the sacrifice of many lives seemed unavoidable, will cause gratification throughout the country. The heartiest co-operation of a thousand smaller agencies could not result so effectively. It is true that the actual needs of stricken Belgium are so great that complete relief might tax to the utmost the largest conceivable resources. But there is assurance now that actual starvation will be prevented by this splendid co-operation of the Rockefeller Foundation with the other admirable agencies, that there will be sufficient relief for large numbers, and that the shipping and distribution of supplies will be accomplished in the most expeditious and competent manner. The relief thus planned may, of course, be extended to sufferers in other countries than Belgium, but that is now the scene of the worst affliction, and the authentic reports of misery and destitution had already touched the heart of every humane American. Praise of Mr. ROCKEFELLER and his associates in this high enterprise is uncalled for, and printed words would be futile to express the sincere and widespread satisfaction that the announcement will cause. A neutral nation, when a terrible war is rending many other countries, can do no nobler work than this.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH.

Gov. GLYNN'S sound judgment and his standard of practical administration are clearly shown in his appointments to the State Department of Health, the work of which is remarkable and is recognized all over the country. Within the past two years the public health law has been thoroughly revised, and it is now looked upon, according to a very high authority, as "the best piece of public health legislation in any State," a judgment sustained by the fact that its essential features have been incorporated in the new law of Massachusetts, and it is the model for changes in the laws of New Jersey, Connecticut, Michigan, and several other States.

The revised law extends largely the powers and functions of the Department of Health. Obviously it gives to the Executive great opportunities for unusual public service in the careful selection of fit persons for appointment, and equally it gives rich opportunity for the use of these appointments as patronage, as rewards for political service in the past, or, worse, as incitements for the future. Gov. GLYNN ignored the latter view entirely and acted with singular sagacity as well as fidelity upon the former. Realizing that the law as revised opened up a field for the very best expert work, he sought and found men of high qualifications to carry it out.

Next in importance to the staff positions which have been so well filled are those of the State District Sanitary Inspectors. These have been placed under civil service regulations. An examination by experts named by the Public Health Council has been held by the State Commission and the men thus selected are the best qualified available in the State. The general work of the Department of Health has been organized in a thorough fashion, and marked results are already appearing, and in the future will be still greater.

A RULE OF REASON FOR THE RAILWAYS.

In another column will be found an open letter from Mr. CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS of Massachusetts to the President upon the railway problem. Every person interested in public affairs can and should read that letter. It can be read because it is not long and has not a dull sentence in it. Others who have dealt with the subject have drowned themselves in statistics, which obscured the subject and which can be made to argue according to the views of the arguer. Mr. ADAMS deals with principles only. He assumes the facts to be of general knowledge, as, indeed, they are, and argues from the facts to the conclusion in a manner compelling assent from the open-minded. It is not to be supposed that the hecklers of the railways will agree with an argument which condemns them, without once mentioning them or anything they have done or left undone. It is not to be supposed that those who find profit of whatever sort in the railways' troubles will approve a remedy for them from a practitioner of the old school and with a record of success in his cases perhaps without an equal and certainly without a superior. But the average man with both a conscience and a pocket nerve, who has been puzzled to know where the truth lay in the railway business, will find his bewilderment lessened or removed in an easier way by reading this letter than any other.

Mr. ADAMS begins by remarking that forty years ago he was the pioneer railway regulator. Since then railway regulation has developed in a manner which he did not foresee and which he regrets. He writes to the President merely as a member of the community, upon matters of common knowledge, professing no exact or especial information. He writes publicly because he sees that the dangers of the situation are not appreciated and that no intelligent or comprehensive effort is making to deal with it. Using the neighborhood of Boston as an example, he says that there is urgent need of the expenditure of $100,000,000 for the welfare of the community, not of the railways, and that at the same time the railways of that region are "financially crippled." They cannot remunerate existing investment, still less procure fresh capital. In that way it happens that "New England cannot maintain itself industrially." From a common-sense point of view this condition is "impossible." He states the fact, declining to argue it:

> Here is the largest investment and active business management in the country, and those managing it control neither outgo nor income. They are told what they must do and pay, and have no voice in what they are to charge. Such a situation is economically unheard of, absurd. It needs only to be stated. It is financially impossible of long continuance.

Who can dissent from that? Mr. ADAMS considers incidentally long-range remedies. He mentions only to condemn Government ownership and management, declining to discuss his reasons for his conclusions. He prefers to pass promptly to the urgent immediate remedy for the industrial strangulation which is imminent and which is superior to questions of either dividends or interest. He dismisses at once the suggestion that mismanagement is the cause of the trouble and that efficiency is the remedy. He does not deny the scandals and abuses, but considers them incidental to human imperfections. They exist in all businesses, public or private. They are regrettable, but the attempt to prevent them cannot wholly succeed. They are surface troubles, not constitutional difficulties, the symptom, not the disease. It is necessary to deal with the actual situation, making allowance for such incidents, past or future. A fresh start must be made, and made quickly, to provide an interval for dealing with those other matters. In its own self-interest the community must pay for what it orders and gets. Not a single word is said about any one of the State commissions and the Federal supercommission. They can do as they like about ordering facilities and reducing rates. The fact remains that the public must pay for fresh capital or the roads will deteriorate and eventually will stop. Why multiply words? Is it not so?

Mr. ADAMS treats with delicious contempt the suggestion that the public would like to be fooled in the matter:

> It may be, in this matter, the community will like to be cheated, or insist on somehow deceiving itself, meeting indirectly an outlay much larger than that from which it recoils when directly imposed. This, however, I submit, will be mere self-delusion, and the one party always most dangerous to deceive is one's self. Yet the inclination thereto is politically well-nigh both universal and irresistible.

That leads Mr. ADAMS to his conclusion that the public must pay, in one form or another. It may fool itself by paying a larger sum in the form of a tax bill and a freight bill than a smaller sum in the form of a single bill collected by the railways. The public may experiment with national or State regulation, with national or State incorporation, with national or State ownership or management. It all comes to the same thing in the end—the public must pay, and the public is underpaying. Mr. ADAMS is as clear on the one point as on the other. The railways are not receiving the cost of the service they render, and the services will not long continue to be rendered. Who can maintain the contrary? That is the A B C of the railway question, and likewise the X Y Z.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Comparison Brings Humiliation.

Among the reasons for the widespread, probably general, feeling of mingled apprehension and repugnance excited by the use of soldiers not "white" in settling the quarrels of nations with less deeply or differently pigmented skins, one, and not the least important, may be of the sort called subconscious. At any rate, it has not often been mentioned.

Even the peoples calling themselves most highly civilized give to physical courage and fighting ability sincere admiration, and though, for what may be described as conversational or argumentative purposes, we condition the admiration by the merits of the cause for which bravery and prowess are displayed, as a matter of fact, not often do we altogether withhold it from anybody who shows them—never, perhaps, when the fight is against odds. And since our appreciation for efficient pugnacity is so great, may it not be that we object to the utilization of more or less "savage" troops as auxiliaries in a white man's war simply because, when this is done, the "savages" show themselves practically equal to us in the very things for which we admire ourselves most?

At any rate, the comparison is not so much to our advantage as we would like to have it. As the present war has repeatedly illustrated, the men of color—the Senegalese and the East Indians—are not at all afraid to attack white troops, sometimes do it effectively, and manifest no incapacity for using our weapons or in executing the military operations worked out after profound study by our best experts. We can still believe that the dark folk need white instruction and leadership to make them "good" soldiers, but the great majority of white troops are also more or less nearly helpless when left to their own devices.

The often-demonstrated superiority of white armies to those black, red, or yellow seems to be more largely a matter of weapons than of courage or of natural military ability. As far as "atrocities" go, there is not so much to choose, if all stories are to be believed, and they all rest on about the same basis of unproven accusations.

Surprising in Two Particulars.

People who know, as many do, that there was nothing unusual in the employment of a convict by the Warden of Sing Sing for the performance outside of the prison walls of services more or less personal will be cynically amused by the severity of the storm which broke over the head of that astonished official. As has so often happened in these latter days, he has been punished for doing what many of his predecessors have done without exciting any criticism whatever, and appreciation of its utter wrongness is something quite novel. In other words, he is the victim of the new morality that has swept over politics and business, and he cuts a rather pathetic figure in his desolation, suffering what is for his kind the culminating penalty for a crime of which he, as a belated survivor of an age past but not remote, cannot see the enormity.

This view of him may be modified by subsequent revelations, but it will do for the moment. Meanwhile there is in the public mind not less wonder than delight as a result of the expeditious and common-sensical way in which, after a ludicrously futile attempt at "whitewashing," an "ex" was written before the Warden's title. For once we have had an official investigation that was conducted exactly as would be a like inquiry in a business house or private life. There has been no endless wandering through a maze of technicalities, all irrelevant to the question of guilt or innocence, of propriety or impropriety. The Commissioner in two days secured the facts necessary for determining whether the Warden should go or stay, made his report immediately, and the Governor as promptly issued the recommendation that was in effect an order for dismissal.

Such vertiginous speed has the shocking quality of the unfamiliar—in official proceedings—but the thrill is that of pleasure, not of pain, and we could all bear up bravely under the strain if many another executive and legislative commission were to show a like indifference to the joy of piling up mountains of fees, per diem and other.

Combining Fire and Hospitality.

When ex-Fire Chief CROKER calmly discussed conflagration statistics with a party of dinner guests in one room of his new house, while in another the brisk and well-fed fire he had set was left to do its significantly futile worst, he taught a needed lesson in a truly striking way.

It would have been more effective if he had taken pains to let the rest of us know, as presumably he did those invited to observe his demonstration, the cost of his obviously fireproof house in comparison with the tinder boxes of varying degrees of inflammability in which the inhabitants of the United States perilously pass so much of their time.

However, as Mr. CROKER is not ranked in the first or even the second flight of multi-millionaires, the chances are that his non-burning mansion is not so much more expensive than the common kind that hardly anybody else could think of building one like it. Probably, too, his excess of investment over that of his neighbors will not seem mad, or even over-cautious, to such of those neighbors as in the future have occasion to figure out the difference between loss and insurance after they have had a fire.

Dignified, but Not Defensive.

Apparently the members of the August Grand Jury do not like to be scolded by the Mayor, but one searches vainly through the sad and solemn periods of their rejoinder to his gentle castigation for any definite reasons to think it undeserved. He may have been a bit hasty in assuming that their testing of the food provided for the city's wards was a "junket," but his essential criticisms of their presentment remain unanswered.

Most of the evil conditions discovered by their investigation have been common knowledge for years, and the city itself, not the Commissioner of Charities, is responsible for their present existence, since it is not ready to pay for their abolition, and he cannot be expected to do it out of his own pocket.

Then they recommended a plan of management which has been proved by experience to be not best, ever, and often bad. For that they certainly deserved to be scolded.

PREJUDICE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Easy to create, it is hard to destroy. Sinister of wit, it is weak of wisdom. Its perceptions are false. It sees in darkness; it is blind in the light. It nurtures lies and rejects truth. Breeding hatred, it blasts sympathy. It rules those who give it life. It is a conjured Frankenstein, dominating millions of men. It sits beside the gates of life and takes toll of all that pass.

It is the conservator of all that reason would destroy—the destroyer of the works of justice. It is the hand-maiden of error, the nemesis of knowledge. It feeds fear and poisons hope. It lives by the law of the dead. It thrives upon the meat of yesterday. It sickens on the sustenance of today.

It is the anarchist of the heart. It smothers faith. It gives love to the torch. It bemeans benevolence and shuns communion. It stills the sound of music and palsies the hand of art. It betrays belief and sets suspicion on a throne. It rejoices in tears. Its mirth is in misery.

It is the monster of the mind. It pollutes thought, serves despair, and lavishes right. It offends against fact and is a stranger to logic. Its soothing is in sophistry. It divines the unreal and walks in the way of phantoms. It drains the potions brewed by witches of the brain. It is a thing of charms and amulets.

It is prejudice!

THE RELIGIOUS ISSUE

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Three weeks ago The Churchman printed a reference to Gov. Glynn, implying that he was not loyal to our public school system. In its next issue the editor kindly published a brief letter from me which barely transmitted a copy of Gov. Glynn's letter refuting the charge.

This morning I received from an anonymous source a copy of a scurrilous sheet, The American Citizen, upon which were written these words: "Read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest! You need to do so after your article in The Churchman. How do you expect to retain the respect of those who respect truth?" "My article as before observed being barely a transmission of Gov. Glynn's fine letter.

But I did read the vile sheet with the following result:

Referring to THE TIMES of Oct. 12 giving an account of Dr. O'Rourke's address on Columbus Day, it said: "The purpose of Columbus Day in the minds of Roman Catholics is that such flannel-mouths as this might have a clear field to curse Protestantism, denounce the public schools, and magnify the greatness of a Jewish pirate and slave trader."

Is not this a finely consolidated assault upon the Catholics, the Jews, the Italians, and the great discoverer whom the scholars of America and of the world for centuries have united to honor?

The paper contains much more of the same vile stuff and nothing except such stuff.

Now this might not be of importance except for the sheet's indication of its source and purpose.

Mr. Whitman has permitted himself to suggest that this religious issue might have been injected into the pending canvass by the supporters of Gov. Glynn! The paper affords an opportunity of indicating the underlying purpose and origin of this outrageous violation of decencies as being aid to the Republican canvass.

The lawyers say, "Nessitur e socits"; the writers of proverbs, "Tell me a man's friends and I'll tell you the man," and again, "A man is known by his supporters."

Now this sheet is purely and viciously the supporter of the Republican candidates in three States and of the other parties nowhere.

In New York it appeals for eighteen Republicans, five Progressives, and one Democrat (Judge Seabury); in New Jersey and Ohio it supports only Republicans and denounces Democrats. Incidentally it advertises a book alleged to show up Col. Roosevelt's Catholic sympathies.

The issue has been denounced patriotically by Col. Roosevelt, Mr. Straus, Mr. Hamlin, and Mr. Schiff.

I have seen no indignant repudiation, such as should have come, from any eminent Republican and only a slurring comment, (slurring the Democrats, not the bigots,) from Mr. Whitman.

How then can it be said that the Republicans are free from responsibility for the circulation of these vile attacks upon the American principles of fair play and freedom of conscience?

THE CONQUEST OF NEW YORK.

Not Even in German Dreams While the British Fleet Exists.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I desire to protest against the innuendo conveyed to the American public by Col. Roosevelt in his statement that he has personally seen the plans of one of the great powers for the capture of New York. It is utterly unfair to deduce from the fact that the General Staff in Berlin has in its possession a scheme for the invasion of America that Germany has any intention of ever attacking this country. As a matter of fact, the German General Staff has in its pigeonholes plans for the conquest of every country in the world; but no one with any knowledge of the subject can imagine for one moment that these plans have any more than a purely theoretical significance.

All doubts in this connection ought to be silenced by the frank renunciation by the German Ambassador in his recent communication to the State Department of the idea that his Government might ever dispute the Monroe Doctrine. Germany for many years has been fully conscious of the fact that since Great Britain unreservedly recognizes that doctrine it would be hopeless for her to attempt to violate it. She was naturally angry with Great Britain when that country through Lord Salisbury signified its formal adherence to the Monroe Doctrine at the time of the Venezuelan imbroglio, for the action of Britain made it abundantly clear that Germany could not attempt to realize her dream of establishing "a Greater Germany" in Brazil in a possibly hostile British fleet in her rear. Accordingly, she abandoned forever her dream of establishing an overseas empire in Brazil, and turned her thoughts to expansion elsewhere at the expense of Great Britain, who had thus balked her ambitions in the Western Hemisphere.

All Germans, I am sure, will agree with me in assuring Col. Roosevelt that as things are the General Staff in Berlin has not the remotest hope of ever attempting to carry into execution its "pigeon-hole" plan for the conquest of New York.

RUSSIA LESS DESPOTIC THAN PRUSSIA.

Mr. Chesterton's Reply to the Kaiser's Charge That England Has Allied Herself with a Barbaric Power.

By GILBERT K. CHESTERTON.

The German Emperor has reproached this country [England] with allying itself with "barbaric and semi-Oriental power." We have already considered in what sense we use the word barbaric; it is in the sense of one who is hostile to civilization, not one who is insufficient in it. But when we pass from the idea of the barbaric to the idea of the Oriental, the case is even more curious. There is nothing particularly Tartar in Russian affairs, except the fact that Russia expelled the Tartars. The Eastern invader occupied and crushed the country for many years; but that is equally true of Greece, of Spain, and even of Austria. If Russia has suffered from the East, she has suffered in order to resist it; and it is rather hard that the very miracle of her escape should make a mystery about her origin. Jonah may or may not have been three days inside a fish; but that does not make him a merman. And in all the other cases of European nations who escaped the monstrous captivity, we do admit the purity and continuity of the European type. We consider the old Eastern rule as a wound, but not as a stain. Copper-colored men out of Africa overruled for centuries the religion and patriotism of Spaniards. Yet I have never heard that "Don Quixote" was an African fable on the lines of "Uncle Remus." I have never heard that the heavy black in the pictures of Velasquez was due to a negro ancestry. In the case of Spain, which is close to us, we can recognize the resurrection of a Christian and cultured nation after its age of bondage. But Russia is rather remote; and those to whom nations are but names in newspapers can really fancy, like Mr. Baring's friend, that all Russian churches are "mosques." Yet the land of Turgenev is not a wilderness of fakirs; and even the fanatical Russian is as proud of being different from the Mongol as the fanatical Spaniard was proud of being different from the Moor.

The town of Reading, as it exists, offers few opportunities for piracy on the high seas; yet it was the camp of the pirates in Alfred's days. I should think it hard to call the people of Berkshire half Danish merely because they drove out the Danes. In short, some temporary submergence under the savage flood was the fate of many of the most civilized States of Christendom, and it is quite ridiculous to argue that Russia, which wrestled hardest, must have recovered least. Everywhere, doubtless, the East spread a sort of enamel over the conquered countries; but everywhere the enamel cracked. Actual history, in fact, is exactly opposite to the cheap proverb invented against the Muscovite. It is not true to say, "Scratch a Russian and you find a Tartar." In the darkest hour of the barbaric dominion it was truer to say, "Scratch a Tartar and you find a Russian." It was the civilization that survived under all the barbarism. This vital romance of Russia, this revolution against Asia, can be proved in pure fact; not only from the almost superhuman activity of Russia during the struggle, but also (which is much rarer as human history goes) by her quite consistent conduct since. She is the only great nation which has really expelled the Mongol from her country and continued to protest against the presence of the Mongol in her continent. Knowing what he had been in Russia, she knew what he would be in Europe. In this she pursued a logical line of thought, which was, if anything, too unsympathetic with the energies and religions of the East. Every other country, one may say, has been an ally of the Turk—that is, of the Mongol and the Moslem. The French played them as pieces against Austria; the English warmly supported them under the Palmerston régime; even the young Italians sent troops to the Crimea; and of Russia and her Austrian vassal it is nowadays needless to speak. For good or evil, it is the fact of history that Russia is the only power in Europe that has never supported the Crescent against the Cross.

That doubtless will appear an unimportant matter, but it may become important under certain peculiar conditions. Suppose, for the sake of argument, that there were a powerful prince in Europe who had gone ostentatiously out of his way to pay reverence to the remains of the Tartar, Mongol, and Moslem left as an outpost in Europe. Suppose there were a Christian Emperor who could not even go to the tomb of the crucified without pausing to congratulate the last and living crucifier. If there were an Emperor who gave guns and guides and maps and drill instructors to defend the remains of the Mongol in Christendom, what would we say to him? I think at least we might ask him what he meant by his impudence when he talked about supporting a semi-Oriental power. That we support a semi-Oriental power we deny. That he has supported an entirely Oriental power cannot be denied, no, not even by the man who did it.

But here is to be noted the essential difference between Russia and Prussia; especially by those who use the ordinary liberal arguments against the latter. Russia has a policy, which she pursues, if you will, through evil and good; but at least so as to produce good as well as evil. Let it be granted that the policy has made her oppressive to the Finns, the Poles—though the Russian Poles feel far less oppressed than do the Prussian Poles. But it is a mere historic fact, that if Russia has been a despot to some small nations, she has been a deliverer to others. She did, so far as in her lay, emancipate the Servians or the Montenegrins. But whom did Prussia ever emancipate—even by accident? It is, indeed, somewhat extraordinary that in the perpetual permutations of international politics the Hohenzollerns have never gone astray into the path of enlightenment. They have been in alliance with almost everybody off and on; with France, with England, with Austria, with Russia. Can any one candidly say that they have left on any one of these people the faintest impress of progress or liberation? Prussia was the enemy of the French monarchy, but a worse enemy of the French Revolution. Prussia had been an enemy of the Czar, but she was a worse enemy of the Duma. Prussia totally disregarded Austrian rights; but she is today quite ready to inflict Austrian wrongs. This is the strong particular difference between the one empire and the other. Russia is pursuing certain intelligible and sincere ends, which to her at least are ideals, and for which, therefore, she will make sacrifices and will protect the weak. But the North German soldier is a sort of abstract tyrant; everywhere and always on the side of materialistic tyranny. This Teuton in uniform has been found in strange places; shooting farmers before Saratoga and flogging soldiers in Surrey, hanging niggers in Africa and raping girls in Wicklow, but never, by some mysterious fatality, lending a hand to the freeing of a single city or the independence of one solitary flag. Wherever scorn and prosperous oppression are, there is the Prussian; unconsciously consistent, instinctively restrictive, innocently evil; "following darkness like a dream."

Suppose we heard of a person (gifted with some longevity) who had helped Alva to persecute Dutch Protestants, then helped Cromwell to persecute Irish Catholics, and then helped Claverhouse to persecute Scotch Puritans—we should find it rather easier to call him a persecutor than to call him a Protestant or a Catholic. Curiously enough, this is actually the position in which the Prussian stands in Europe. No arguments can alter the fact that in three converging and conclusive cases he has been on the side of three distinct rulers of different religions, who had nothing whatever in common except that they were ruling oppressively. In these three Governments, taken separately, one can see something excusable, or at least human. When the Kaiger encouraged the Russian rulers to crush the Revolution, the Russian rulers undoubtedly believed they were wrestling with an inferno of atheism and anarchy. A Socialist of the ordinary English kind cried out upon me when I spoke of Stolypin and said he was chiefly known by the halter called "Stolypin's Necktie." As a fact, there were many other things interesting about Stolypin besides his necktie—his policy of peasant proprietorship, his extraordinary personal courage, and certainly none more interesting than that movement in his death agony, when he made the sign of the cross toward the Czar, as the crown and captain of his Christianity. But the Kaiser does not regard the Czar as the captain of Christianity. Far from it. What he supported in Stolypin was the necktie, and nothing but the necktie; the gallows, and not the cross. The Russian ruler did believe that the Orthodox Church was orthodox. The Austrian Archduke did really desire to make the Catholic Church catholic. He did really believe that he was being pro-Catholic in being pro-Austrian. But the Kaiser cannot be pro-Catholic, and, therefore, cannot have been really pro-Austrian; he was simply and solely anti-Servian; nay, even in the cruel and sterile strength of Turkey, any one with imagination can see something of the tragedy, and, therefore, of the tenderness of true belief. The worst that can be said of the Moslems is, as the poet put it, they offered to man the choice of the Koran or the sword. The best that can be said for the German is that he does not care about the Koran, but is satisfied if he can have the sword. And for me, I confess, even the sins of these three other striving empires take on, in comparison, something that is sorrowful and dignified; and I feel they do not deserve that this little Lutheran lounger should patronize all that is evil in them, while ignoring all that is good. He is not Catholic; he is not Orthodox; he is not Mahometan. He is merely an old gentleman who wishes to share the crime, though he cannot share the creed. He desires to be a persecutor by the pang without the palm. So strongly do all the instincts of the Prussian drive against liberty that he would rather oppress other peoples' subjects than think of anybody going without the benefits of oppression. He is a sort of disinterested despot. He is as disinterested as the devil, who is ready to do any one's dirty work.

This would seem obviously fantastic were it not supported by solid facts which cannot be explained otherwise. Indeed it would be inconceivable if we were thinking of a whole people, consisting of free and varied individuals. But in Prussia the governing class is really a governing class, and a very few people are needed to think along these lines to make all the other people act along them. And the paradox of Prussia is this: That while its princes and nobles have no other aim on this earth but to destroy democracy wherever it shows itself, they have contrived to get themselves trusted, not as wardens of the past, but as forerunners of the future. Even they cannot believe that their theory is popular, but they do believe that it is progressive. Here again we find the spiritual chasm between the two monarchies in question. The Russian institutions are, in many cases, really left in the rear of the Russian people, and many of the Russian people know it. But the Prussian institutions are supposed to be in advance of the Prussian people, and most of the Prussian people believe it. It is thus much easier for the war lords to go everywhere and impose a hopeless slavery upon every one, for they have already imposed a sort of hopeful slavery on their own simple race.

And when men shall speak to us of the hoary iniquities of Russia and of how antiquated is the Russian system we shall answer, "Yes; that is the superiority of Russia." Their institutions are part of their history, whether as relics or fossils. Their abuses have really been uses; that is to say, they have been used up. If they have old engines of terror or torment, they may fall to pieces from mere rust, like an old coat of armor. But in the case of the Prussian tyranny, if it be tyranny at all, it is the whole point of its claim that it is not antiquated, but just going to begin, like the showman. Prussia has a whole thriving factory of thumbscrews, a whole humming workshop of wheels and racks, of the newest and neatest pattern, with which to win Europe back to Reaction . . . infandum renovare dolorem. And if we wish to test the truth of this, it can be done by the same method which showed us that Russia, if her race or religion could sometimes make her an invader and an oppressor, could also be made an emancipator and a knight errant. In the same way, if the Russian institutions are old-fashioned, they honestly exhibit the good as well as the bad that can be found in old-fashioned things. In their police system they have an inequality which is against our ideas of law. But in their commune system they have an equality that is older than law itself. Even when they flogged each other like barbarians, they called each other by their Christian names like children. At their worst, they retained all the best of a rude society. At their best, they are simply good, like good children or good nuns. But in Prussia, all that is best in the civilized machinery is put at the service of all that is worst in the barbaric mind. Here again the Prussian has no accidental merits, none of those lucky survivals, none of those late repentances, which make the patchwork glory of Russia. Here all is sharpened to a point and pointed to a purpose; and that purpose, if words and acts have any meaning at all, is the destruction of liberty throughout the world.

GOD'S INTERVENTION IN WAR IS EXPECTED

Dr. Remensnyder Says Needs of Our Age Bespeak Miraculous Interposition.

SERMONS ON REFORMATION

Lutheran Churches Throughout the World Celebrate 397th Anniversary.

The 143 Lutheran churches in Greater New York, in common with those of the entire world, yesterday celebrated the three hundred and ninety-seventh anniversary of the beginning of the Reformation, which is considered as dating from Luther's nailing of the ninety-five theses on the door of the Castle Church at Wittenberg on Oct. 31, 1517.

There were special sermons in many churches, typical among which was that of the Rev. Dr. Junius B. Remensnyder, at St. James's English Lutheran Church, at Madison Avenue and Seventy-third Street, the subject of which was "The Finger of God in the Reformation."

Dr. Remensnyder thought the workings of Divine Providence were manifest first of all in the preparations for Luther's act. The discovery of America, the invention and development of printing, the Renaissance, and the founding of the University of Wittenberg were pointed out as paving the way for the Reformation.

"The fact that Luther's sole arm of reformation was simply the Gospel in its purity and power," said Dr. Remensnyder, "is another indication that it was God's work. The progress, growth, and beneficent effects of this great movement prove it to have been divinely ordered. It aroused to consciousness the giant of democracy. It sounded the tocsin of the rights of man. It opened the doors of the modern age."

Dr. Remensnyder concluded:

"Clearly God intervened in the era and work of the Reformation. And as no other age needs this interposition more than does our modern, sorely beset one, so let the children of faith look for His sudden and marvelous appearance upon the stage again."

JUDSON CHURCH IN NEED.

Campaign for $110,000 to Begin After the Election.

At services yesterday in the Judson Memorial Baptist Church, Washington Square South, in memory of the late pastor, the Rev. Dr. Edward Judson, announcement was made that immediately after election steps would be taken to raise $110,000 to meet financial difficulties which are said to imperil the work of the church. The congregation was founded by Dr. Judson and his friends in memory of the Rev. Dr. Adoniram Judson, the first Baptist foreign missionary, whose activity in Burma 100 years ago brought American Baptists for the first time to concerted action. The cost of the church property was about $600,000. Dr. Edward Judson in his lifetime, secured many gifts which largely supported the work of the church, and with his death this source of income was cut off.

Of the money spent on the church property, about $350,000 was received on the annuity plan, and the cost of meeting the interest on the annuities absorbs most of the church's income—the larger part of which, some $12,000 a year, is derived from an apartment hotel. A year ago the property was transferred to the Baptist City Mission Society, which now seeks to raise $110,000, the interest on which is to be used to pay the annuitants. This will leave the income of the hotel free for use in keeping up the work of the church.

FRENCH SOLDIERS AND ACTORS

Mlle. Dorziat Will Forward Donations of Money and Clothing.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I hear that a great many women in America are at work knitting for the soldiers. In two weeks I am sending a large trunk of knitted things—belts, mufflers, &c. This will be sent direct to M. Alfred Capus, editor of Le Figaro, Paris, who will have it forwarded at once to the soldiers at the front. What I want very badly are knitted gloves and waistcoats, as well as the belts and mufflers.

The American people are so generous, and their hearts appear to have been so greatly touched by the suffering in Europe, that I hope, where it is convenient to do so, that they will send their things to me to the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, where I will take charge of all articles and have them forwarded to Paris.

I am also endeavoring to collect clothing, garments of all descriptions, for the poverty-stricken actors of France and Belgium. This will be a separate shipment, and will also be sent to M. Capus, who has undertaken the work of distributing the articles among the most needy members of our profession. I should be most grateful for any donations of clothing sent to me to the Ritz-Carlton, as well as contributions of money, for this worthy cause. The

"The Battle Cry," an anonymous stage version of a magazine story by Charles Neville Buck, was produced for the first time at the Lyric Theatre on Saturday evening. Its scene is laid in the primitive reaches of the Cumberland Mountains, and its story deals with the survival there of the old clan feud and the yielding before the inclosing movement of what the rest of the country calls civilization. But it is less the story of this play, which is told with two little skill to be engrossing, than its manner of construction that interests chiefly. "The Battle Cry" is drama à la cinema.

The stamp of the movie is visible not merely in the fact that of the eighteen scenes four are staged by the camera, but that there actually are eighteen scenes in the five acts. The author of the play, whoever he may be, skips from moment to moment in his story and leaps from crag to crag of the Kentucky mountains with something of the fine, carefree nonchalance of the motion-picture dramatist. The product of his pen, camera, and water-color brushes, conveys the decided impression not merely that "The Battle Cry" was rather under the influence of the cinema, but that it was actually fashioned by elaborating a photoplay scenario. This may not have been the process at all. That does not matter. What does matter is that there is nothing in "The Battle Cry" to indicate that it was not the process.

It is a curious fact that in addition to what is visualized for the audience, there is nothing conveyed by the spoken word on the Lyric stage that might not be condensed, without painful loss, to a few well-chosen sentences to be flashed from time to time on a screen in the explanatory movie fashion. This is one way of saying that there is just a long-limbed skeleton of a play. There is precious little tissue.

And it is interesting to note that while we clearly owe "The Battle Cry" to so entirely modern a thing as the cinematograph, the new play as a play represents a reversion to a theatrical fashion of fifty or seventy-five years ago. It represents a reversion to a habit of construction that has not merely been outgrown, but from which the modern dramatists have arduously and admirably worked themselves free to a greater simplicity and compactness and to that strength which comes from a concentration of forces. While "The Battle Cry" is strongly reminiscent of the entertainments offered at the Strand and the Vitagraph, it is also strongly reminiscent of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." And, without indulging in the luxury of space involved in a discussion of how far the photoplay may, should, and is likely to affect the form of our real plays, it may be said that as far as the whole story of "The Battle Cry" is concerned, it could have been more vividly and more dramatically told in three acts of one scene each.

No matter now it is told, the story of any aspect of the march of civilization has an epic quality. The frontier is essentially an epic theme, even if it be only a bit of frontier, invested by the forces of civilization as the forces of an army invest a fortress, which they return to take long after they have passed beyond it. The materials here employed, apparently by one who knows them sympathetically and well, have not been often used, but the method is the familiar one of the rough, heroic leader of the natives falling captive to a gentler civilization in the person of a girl, who, naturally enough, is in invariable a school teacher. It is the influence of an Eastern school teacher that brings peace to the warring feud folk in the region about Peril City and helps unite them against the exploiting invaders of their mountain kingdom.

Some of the separate scenes are well done, some of them are unusually clumsy. The language of the play is curiously uneven. It is sometimes unhappy in its effort to rise in poetic feeling to the tops of "these hyer maountins," but on the other hand there are a few moments when the emotional voice in finely simple, vigorous, and imaginative expression.

The acting is for the most part appropriate to the manner of the play and production and to the old incidental music that is heard whenever Sentiment has the stage. There is one notably fine performance in a minor rôle, that of a youngster whose inheritance is a tradition, a gun and a blood-debt. The picture is admirably done. The artist is Donald Gallagher.

The great thrill of the piece comes when the hero, riddled by bullets, crawls to the girl's cottage to die, and she, with the fire of the adopted clan flaming high in her, defends him gun in hand against the savages who storm her fortress-home. But this is just a brief episode, exciting in itself, but innocent of that accumulated strength which is the force of a good play and the meaning of tension. It is like a flash on the screen.

This inevitable comparison to the moving picture is not a protest. It is a description. And it may be said of "The Battle Cry" that it is as entertaining and as satisfying as a photoplay—just about.

THE NEW YORK SYMPHONY.

Mme. Olive Fremstad the Soloist at Its Second Concert.

Mr. Damrosch arranged a programme contrasting Handel and Bach with Wagner for the second concert of the New York Symphony Society, which took place yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall. The elder style was represented by two "concerti grossi," one of its most characteristic products, and by an orchestral arrangement (made by Dr. Leopold Damrosch) of that air from Handel's Italian opera of "Serse," that modern audiences know as "Handel's Largo." It would have been interesting to hear the air sung in the form in which Handel wrote it, with the words set down. All the eloquence of the swelling sonorities that have been incorporated into this orchestral arrangement would then be found to be drawn from the hero's apostrophe to a plane tree beneath which he is standing, proclaiming, and repeating the proclamation, that no tree ever cast a more agreeable shade; so much and no more.

The concerto grosso by Handel is for a "concertino" of two violins and violoncello, with a "concerto" of strings alone. The work is, in fine, splendidly muscular and vigorous movements, in Handel's copiously melodic vein, and was given in the arrangement of Gustav Kogel, who has done a little filling in and added a few suggestions for performance. The tone of the strings was notably solid and substantial; but there was not quite all the finish or certainty of ensemble that the orchestra has often shown, either in this or in the concerto grosso by Bach that followed it.

This was the first of the so-called Brandenburg concertos, in which, besides strings, there are oboes, horns, and a bassoon heard; music that has a less easy appeal than Handel's and a deeper poetry in the adagio, a quainter grace in the final polacca.

The soloist was Mme. Olive Fremstad, for years, but this season no longer, at the Metropolitan Opera House. She was left in no manner of doubt that her appearance was welcome through the long-continued applause that greeted her and that rewarded her singing. Her numbers were Elisabeth's air from the second act of "Tannhäuser," "Dich Theure Halle," and Kundry's narrative and Herzeleide's death, from the second act of "Parsifal." Both she sang with a truly dramatic potency of expression that was especially compelling by its pathos and poignancy in Kundry's song, well remembered on the Metropolitan's stage. This was likewise better adapted to her; for Elisabeth's song needs a more brilliant and soaring soprano voice that finds no stumbling block in the high notes. The orchestra completed the Wagnerian half of the programme with the preludes to "Meistersinger," and "Tristan und Isolde."

SCOTTI 25 YEARS A SINGER.

Baritone Celebrates Completion of a Quarter Century in Opera.

Antonio Scotti, the famous baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company, yesterday celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his début as a singer in opera. It was on Nov. 1, 1889, that the singer made his first appearance on the operatic stage, singing the rôle of Amonasro in "Aïda" at the Theatre Royal in Malta.

Mr. Scotti made his first appearance before an American audience in Chicago, and not, as is generally believed, at the Metropolitan Opera House. He was engaged by Maurice Grau in 1899 and joined the Metropolitan company at Chicago in the Fall of that year while it was on tour.

On December 27, 1899, he made his début at the Metropolitan Opera House in the title rôle of Mozart's "Don Giovanni," a part that has been associated with his name. He has been known to present New York opera audiences in the rôles of Scarpia in "Tosca," Dr. Malatesta in "Don Pasquale," Tonio in "Pagliacci," Sharpless in "Madame Butterfly," Marcel in "La Bohème," and Amonasro in "Aïda."

Two of the most famous parts are Falstaff in Verdi's opera of that name, and Iago in "Otello." These operas have not been sung at the Metropolitan during the last few seasons, but each season has revived talk about presenting the former, so that Scotti may be heard in it. It is said that some of the singer's friends and artistic associates are planning some form of recognition of his unusual length of service, to take place shortly.

Wagner Concert at Century.

A special Wagner programme drew a large audience to the Century Opera House for the concert last night. The numbers included the overture to "The Flying Dutchman," "Dich Theure Halle" from "Tannhäuser," Bettina Freeman; aria of Adriano from "Rienzi," Maude Santley; "Engel" and "Träume," Lois Ewell; Wotan's "Farewell and Fire Spell," Louis Kreidler; prayer from "Rienzi," Gustaf Bergman; Good Friday music from "Parsifal," Herda's song from "Rheingold," Augusta Lenska; "To the Evening Star" from "Tannhäuser," Graham Marr, and the overture to "Tannhäuser." Ernst Knoch conducted.

GEN. A. R. CHAFFEE DIES IN 73D YEAR

ROSE FROM THE RANKS

Led El Caney Assault, Took Peking Gate, and Cleaned Up Philippines —Forty-five Years a Soldier.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 1.—Lieut. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, former Chief of Staff of the United States Army, died at his home here today of typhoid pneumonia. His body will be taken to Washington, leaving Tuesday, for interment in Arlington National Cemetery.

After his retirement from the army, Gen. Chaffee was appointed head of the Los Angeles Water Board. Later he accepted the Presidency of an insurance company, but retired from business affairs a few months ago.

Mrs. Chaffee and her daughter, Mrs. John Hastings Howard, wife of an army officer, were at the bedside when the end came. Mrs. Howard had been summoned hastily from her husband's post at Douglas, Ariz., a few days ago. The two other children, Mrs. George French Hamilton, wife of an army Captain, and Lieut. Adna R. Chaffee, Jr., are in the Philippines.

When Adna Romanza Chaffee became Lieutenant General of the Army of the United States and took his post on Jan. 9, 1904, as Chief of Staff, the highest position to which an enlisted man can attain, he wrote, briefly, replying to a request for an outline of his policy:

"I am just a plain officer, striving to do my duty as each day reveals it. There is nothing sensational about me or my methods—nothing 'yellow,' as the newspapers term it."

Hundreds of officers can be imagined as making this same statement; none other, perhaps, could make it with equal truth, for from the time he enlisted as a private in Troop K, Sixth Cavalry, July 22, 1861, until he was retired at his own request on Feb. 1, 1906, Gen. Chaffee won each step of his promotion. Favoritism never once advanced him in his rating.

Gen. Chaffee was born in Orwell, Ohio, on April 14, 1842, and all the schooling of a regular sort which he ever got was in the public schools. Yet he was later regarded as one of the most highly educated men in the army, and even took a law course which won him the degree of LL. D. from Tufts College in 1905. He never had a spare minute, for when he wasn't busy at his trade of soldiering he was engaged as a tutor, with himself as a pupil.

Civil War Service.

He was little more than a boy when he began his service in the civil war and promotion came slow to him. It was two years before he even got his foot on the bottom rung of the ladder with a Second Lieutenancy in the Sixth Cavalry on March 13, 1863. At the end of the war he was only a First Lieutenant, and it was not until 1867 that he became a Captain. And then he waited twenty-one years before his uniform was adorned with the chevrons of a Major.

Meantime—in 1875—he married Annie Frances Rockwell of Junction City, Kan., and began that family of five, only which survives him, Adna R. Chaffee, Jr., an army man, and two daughters.

Gen. Chaffee's family got every bit of attention he could give it but he was pretty busy with the Indians and still promotion came slow. It was not until June 30, 1897, that he became Lieutenant Colonel in the Third Cavalry and then the Spanish war brought him his chance.

He was sent to Chickamauga where he received his first commission as a general officer, being made Brigadier General in May, 1898, but it became full with the volunteers. He went to Cuba in command of one of Shafter's brigades and led the assault on the stone fort at El Caney. Its capture was one of the most important moves in the war and for it Chaffee was made a Major General of Volunteers. He served as chief of staff to Gen. Brooke, the Military Governor of Cuba, and for a couple of years under Gen. Wood.

Then, to Gen. Chaffee's undoubted relief, trouble arose in China and he got the job of commanding the relief troops there. It was he and his men who captured the gate at Peking when the attempt of the combined armies of several foreign nations was made to raise the siege of the legations. Others reached the compounds before Chaffee on foot, but they had to admit that they had entered through the gate which Chaffee had taken, and that only the treachery of a guide had prevented the American from taking this extra honor to himself.

"Cleaned Up" the Philippines.

Gen. Chaffee, having now fought Indians, Spaniards, and Chinamen, was made Military Governor of the "unpacified portions" of the Philippines in 1901 and proceeded to "clean them up" with his accustomed energy. He captured Lukban and Malvar, two notorious brigands, and at the two blows completely "pacified" Samar and Luzon. In less than eighteen months he had the Philippines in such a state that the authorities at Washington felt safe in recalling him to take command of the Department of the East, which post he held until shortly before his final promotion to the highest office the army possesses.

It had taken Chaffee forty-three years to bridge the chasm between private and Chief of Staff in the Army of the United States, the widest space and the most difficult task which an army man can attempt, and in two years he was ready to retire. He was 64 years old, and forty-five of his years had been spent in uniform.

Since his retirement little has been heard publicly about the famous soldier. He was never one to talk much except on the field, where, it is said, the frequently published word portraits describing him as cool, calm, almost serene, were daily given the lie by his actions. A man who served under him in many battles declared that the General's face flushed scarlet in action, his voice was loud and his flow of language painful to any who, in his opinion, blundered.

"Listen to him go," declared the "doughboys." "Blistering the Colonel, roasting the Marine Corps, and frying the staff. That's the time!"

So, his battles over, Gen. Chaffee retired to his home in Los Angeles, Cal., and did his best to become as inconspicuous as he had formerly been famous.

MORE FREE CONCERTS.

Tercentenary Music Festival to Extend Over This Week.

As a result of the great success of the free concerts given in conjunction with the tercentenary celebration, Prof. Henry T. Fleck of Hunter College, Chairman of the Music Festival Committee, announced last night that additional concerts would be offered to the public this week. This was decided at a meeting of the committee held during the evening at the Automobile Club of America.

Tonight a concert will be given in the Municipal Theatre of the College of the City of New York, and on Friday night a music feast will be held in the large auditorium of the Morris High School. Concerts will also take place tomorrow night in Brooklyn at the Manual Training High School, and on Wednesday night in the Eastern District High School.

At each of these concerts there will be an orchestra of sixty pieces, conducted by Leo Schitzek and Prof. Fleck.

TEACHER-MOTHER APPEALS.

Mrs. Peixotto Asks Dr. Finley to Reinstate Her.

Mrs. Bridget C. Peixotto, who was dismissed as a public school teacher after eighteen years of service because she absented herself from duty to become a mother, has appealed through her counsel, Alfred J. Talley, to the State Commissioner of Education for reinstatement. Mrs. Peixotto was dismissed by the Board of Education on Oct. 8, 1913, and suit was begun to force the board to rescind its action. A copy of her appeal has been served upon the board.

In November of last year Justice Seabury in the Supreme Court declared the action of the board to be illegal on the ground that if Mrs. Peixotto could not be removed because of her marriage she could not be removed because of an act that was a natural incident of the marriage. The Appellate Division reversed Justice Seabury and the Court of Appeals sustained the reversal.

Dr. John H. Finley, State Commissioner of Education, has the power to reinstate Mrs. Peixotto, and the appeal to him is the last resource. He is asked to set aside the dismissal and to give to Mrs. Peixotto such other relief as may be just. This is an indirect way of asking that if she is restored her salary, at the rate of $2,400 a year, be paid to her for the time she was ousted.

A copy of the petition was sent to the Board of Education. A hearing on the petition probably will be arranged for in Albany.

WOMEN OPPOSE DEMOCRATS

Congressional Union Pushes Its War on Wilson Men in Congress.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—In the States where women vote the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage is making a spirited campaign against Democratic candidates for the Senate and the House of Representatives on the ground that the record of the Wilson Administration and the present Democratic Congress show that the party is opposed to votes for women. The Congressional Union is not affiliated with the National Women Suffrage Association, that organization having repudiated the methods of the union.

The Congressional Union, in a statement tonight announcing that Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont of New York would be in Washington for consultation this week, said: "Mrs. Belmont has done more than any other woman to make financial possible the election campaign which the Congressional Union is waging in the nine States where women vote against the Democratic candidates for Congress, the reason for this campaign being the opposition to the suffrage amendment in Congress by the National Democratic Party."

The union announced also that Mrs. Abigail Scott Duniway, Honorary President of the National Council of Women Voters and President of the Oregon Women Suffrage Association, who had protested against the union's campaign to defeat Democratic candidates, has been entirely won over to the union's policy, and had decided to throw her influence with the campaign.

TO CURB TUBERCULOSIS.

Why Women Want Nassau Voters to Approve $100,000 Hospital.

The committee of women of the Nassau County Association, headed by Mrs. Charles B. Davenport, Mrs. Charles C. Rumsey, and Mrs. J. Sargeant Cram, in a statement issued yesterday gave these reasons why the voters of Nassau County at tomorrow's election should vote for the establishment of a $100,000 tuberculosis hospital:

Three hundred and ninety-five persons have died of tuberculosis in Nassau County in the last four years. More than 500 persons in the county now know they have tuberculosis, and the new hospital will be filled as soon as it is ready.

Out of 177 consecutive cases examined, all belonged to the wage earning class. Fifty per cent. of the needs met by the county's annual expenditure of $75,000 on its poor is due to tuberculosis.

On the basis of the present assessed valuation the hospital would be paid for in twenty years and would cost taxpayers only about 4½ cents on each $1,000 assessed valuation.

The economic value of 100 wage earners returned to the ranks of labor and earning even $500 a year would contribute $50,000 a year to the wealth of the country.

The Jamaica Hospital has not adequate equipment for the many tuberculosis sufferers in Nassau County. Patients sent there would first have to declare themselves paupers, a class to which they do not belong, and some sent there heretofore have refused to stay.

The women hope to bring out a heavy vote for the hospital.

"WIFE'S HOME" TO COURT.

Mrs. Jules Bache Will Appeal on Ground That She Lives Abroad.

The question of the residence of married women, under the tariff law, will come up for determination in the United States Supreme Court if that tribunal grants a writ of certiorari, to be sought this week by attorneys representing Mrs. Florence S. Bache, wife of Jules S. Bache, the banker, of 42 Broadway.

Mrs. Bache has been contesting for several years the action of the local customs officials and the Federal courts in holding her to be an American resident, whose personal effects in excess of the $100 exemption allowed by law are dutiable when she returns from abroad.

Mrs. Bache's decision to bring her case before the Supreme Court followed a study of the case of Mrs. Griswold Thompson, formerly May Van Alen, daughter of James J. Van Alen and granddaughter of the late William Astor. In her case the court held that Mrs. Thompson was a "non-resident" within the meaning of the Tariff act and not liable to pay duty on her personal belongings when arriving in this country from England.

The petition to the Supreme Court recites that Mrs. Bache since 1900 has lived abroad the greater part of each year with her children, with the intention of establishing a residence with the expectation that her husband would eventually live there with her and their children.

Notwithstanding the facts set forth above, the Customs Court held that because Mr. Bache was a resident of New York, it was legally impossible for Mrs. Bache to be a non-resident.

Miss Helen Dennelly a Bride.

Miss Helen Dennelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Dennelly of Lakeville, L. I., and John V. Hughes were married yesterday afternoon at St. Aloysius Roman Catholic Church, Great Neck, L. I., the pastor, the Rev. John Malloy, officiating. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Grace Dennelly, as maid of honor, and Miss Agnes Eileen Dennelly, another sister, was bridesmaid. Edward Hughes was his brother's best man.

Miss Anna Cady Smith Weds.

Miss Anna Cady Smith, daughter of Gerardus Smith, owner of The Schenectady Gazette, and John Edmund Norris Hume, formerly of Washington, D. C., were married on Saturday at Schenectady by the Rev. B. W. R. Taylor at St. George's Church.

Josephine Kelsey Engaged.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Nov. 1.—Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Kelsey of Valley Road have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Josephine Kelsey, to Joseph Tims Roffy of Pittsburgh.

Orphan Band Plays for Immigrants.

The band of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, consisting of fifty pieces under the leadership of Solomon Moses, went to Ellis Island yesterday afternoon to play for the aliens who were detained there over the week-end. Many persons crossed on the 2 o'clock boat with the band to hear the music. Immigration Commissioner F. C. Howe, who started the Sunday concerts, said that he wished New Yorkers to go to Ellis Island on Sunday for recreation.

SEEKS OIL AUDITOR'S ESTATE

Mrs. Adams Wed on Condition of Getting All Husband's Property.

Mrs. Lulu B. F. Adams, who asserts that she married the late Albert A. Adams, a traveling auditor for the Standard Oil Company, on condition that he should leave her all his property, has obtained an order from Supreme Court Justice Pendleton, authorizing a commission in Phoenix, Ariz., to take testimony in her suit.

Mrs. Adams was before her marriage Miss Lulu B. Fowks, a school teacher of Denver, Colo. She married the auditor in 1909, and traveled with him constantly. The will of which she was beneficiary was drawn in the offices of the Standard Oil Company, at Memphis, Tenn., and was filed in Phoenix. When her husband died on Nov. 13, 1913, another will, dated Aug. 12, 1911, in which he left all his property to his sister, was filed in the same county, having been made in Evansville, Ind. Mrs. Adams has obtained an injunction against the probate of the other will. Mr. Adams's estate is valued at $20,000.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION IN AMERICA AND EUROPE

While preparations were going forward last week for the formal opening of the Federal Reserve Banks on Nov. 16, and while work was continued on the formation of the proposed cotton pool and in the conferences under the auspices of the Treasury Department, which are considering the international exchange situation, progress of a very real sort was being made in the security and money markets. This progress was all the more real in that it represented the favorable working of natural forces in the financial and commercial world. The further development of these forces will do away largely, if not entirely, with the need of special relief measures such as the gold pool already formed and the cotton pool, which still remains to be formed.

So important to our financial comfort is the development of our trade abroad on lines sufficiently broad to provide cover for the obligations for the payment of which we would otherwise have to draw further on our gold reserves, that first place may well be given to the continued growth of our exports as a factor in the improvement which is now seen to be under way. The exchange market recently reflected by a sharp decline the turning tide of trade, and even after making allowance for exaggerations which creep into current reports, there is enough evidence of an expanding export trade to give reasonable assurance of a continuance of the exchanges in our favor. Already they are under the gold point as measured by the unusual conditions now prevailing in the use of gold in the settlement of international balances, and that in itself is a change much to our advantage. The formal declaration by Great Britain that cotton will not be considered contraband should facilitate shipments of this staple, which already are increasing sufficiently to belie the more gloomy views which were taken at the outset of the war regarding the probable proportions of this year's foreign demand for the staple which in the past has contributed more than any other crop to our export trade.

It is now coming to be recognized more generally that there is very little need of any further formal measures for the settlement of our obligations to Europe, and it may similarly be said of the cotton situation that it now offers much greater promise of settling itself. Ginning of the staple has proceeded at record rate and marketing is apparently less of a problem than it seemed a few weeks ago. It would not be surprising, particularly after the Federal Reserve Banks get into operation, if relatively little resort were had to the special credit facilities which it is proposed to provide through the cotton pool. Not much remains to be done to reopen the Cotton Exchange, and with that agency of distribution at the command of the trade it might well be that the cotton situation would speedily resume normal atmosphere. That, of course, is not equivalent to saying that old prices for the staple would be restored, but both the marketing and the financing of the crop would probably be facilitated.

We cannot reasonably depend indefinitely upon artificial conditions in trade or finance, and the mere substitution of natural for artificial conditions is a gain. A market controlled by natural conditions attracts buyers; one controlled by artificial conditions repels buyers. That is as true in trade as in finance, and as true of the cotton market as of the security market. Very few buyers are being found for stocks arbitrarily held at the closing prices of three months ago, but many buyers are being found for bonds which have been practically freed of price restrictions and in which prices are now rising after the decline which represented the first cost of a return to natural market conditions.

This improvement in the price of bonds was sufficiently marked to be one of the really noteworthy incidents of last week's financial developments. Concessions in prices had the natural effect of bringing new buyers into the market upon whose appearance selling orders were pressed less urgently, and later many offerings were withdrawn. The market thus passed through natural stages with the result that a healthier condition prevails in the bond market than at any time since the outbreak of the war. This change was much to be desired, and there are many reasons for hoping that the Stock Exchange which has succeeded so well in cooperation with dealers in bonds in lifting restrictions in bond trading will see its way clear to establish comparable conditions in the stock market. The mere fact that the problem there is somewhat larger than it was in the bond market is no reason why an attempt at solving it should be postponed indefinitely. It would seem possible to solve it piecemeal if not at one stroke, and a beginning should be made as soon as possible.

An event which would stand out more clearly than it did in last week's record had the Stock Exchange been open was the reduction in the dividend on United States Steel common from 5 per cent. a year to 2 per cent. a year. The reduction really caused no surprise for it had been plain for some time that only a decided improvement in the steel trade could prevent a lowering of this dividend. That improvement has not taken place partly as a result of the war, but also in large part as a result of the continued restriction of railroad buying which is intimately associated with the financial situation of the railroads for which they are seeking relief through their renewed appeal for a 5 per cent. increase in rates. But if the decline in earnings made this dividend reduction at this time a strong probability if not a certainty it must be noted that despite the handicaps under which the steel trade has labored the Steel Corporation's earnings for the third quarter of the year, although not up to anything like a normal standard, were actually better than the earnings of either of the two preceding quarters. That is a hopeful sign and of equally hopeful import is the excellent record which the Steel Corporation has made in the past in the matter of re-establishing its dividend position after periods of slackened earnings due to trade depression. Linked as the present position of the steel trade is with the position of the railroads it is interesting to note that argument in the railroads' appeal for an increase in rates and the argument in the Government's suit for the dissolution of the Steel Corporation were concluded on succeeding days last week. Both of these cases now lie in the hands of the tribunals which will decide them, but neither decision is likely to be final. In the Steel case appeal will lie to the Supreme Court, and in the rate case appeal will lie from the Commerce Commission to the public at large should it be found that the regulation of the railways is carried to the point of too seriously impairing their usefulness.

The money market is taking its natural course after a period of strain and after a period of heavy issue of banknotes. Cash in all forms is flowing back into the banks and signs are unmistakable that the issuance of notes under the Aldrich-Vreeland act has brought about a redundancy of currency which needs to be corrected at the first available moment. The importance of correcting it is all the greater in view of the impending release, through the establishment of the Federal Reserve Banks in connection with which reserve requirements of the national banks will be reduced, of a large amount of cash which might be made the basis of further credit expansion. The present excessive banknote circulation should be reduced and the greatest care taken in the handling of the new banking system to prevent inflation which would lead inevitably to costly consequences. It is well under the circumstances that the Federal Reserve Board has as much power as it has, and it is fortunate that there are reasons for hoping that that power will be used discreetly with a view to preventing that inflation which would be the chief danger involved in passing from the present to the new banking system. Naturally, the banks of New York continue to gain cash. Last week the members of the Clearing House added another $6,000,000 to their surplus reserve, bringing this up close to $15,000,000.

ASK FRENCH BANK'S HELP.

Moratorium Modification Sends Paris Banker to Central Institution.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—The most recent extension of the moratorium authorizes the tribunals after Dec. 1 to prosecute defaulting drawers. As a result, bankers who have misgivings about meeting their acceptances are endeavoring to obtain assistance privately from the Bank of France on old financial acceptances without having resort to a special law the publication of which might damage their credit.

Representatives of the bankers are also claiming the help of the Bank of France in the shape of liberal advances to facilitate overdue liquidation on the Bourse. The Minister of Finance will decide the matter as between the bankers and the Governor of the Bank of France, who is most reluctant to inflate the currency, fearing adverse effect upon the exchanges.

Now that rubles have risen 20 per cent. in a week, the credit of the Triple Entente countries is in most satisfactory shape. Marks lie 10 points and Austrian kronen 18 points below parity. The extraordinary recovery in Russian exchange is said to be due to gold shipments from Petrograd to London. New York cables are strong at 5.18.

LONDON SEES IMPROVEMENT.

Russia Sends Large Shipments of Gold—Idleness Decreases.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Improvement in sentiment is the best that can be chronicled. An announcement in regard to Stock Exchange loans was expected all last week, but has not yet appeared. Speaking broadly, it would seem that the joint stock banks can face their loans on stocks without assistance, while some other lenders need to have their money and could expect help if a State guarantee were given.

There are other instances, too, in which hardship has been caused by the operation of the Courts Emergency Powers act, which allows debtors to plead the war as a reason for nonpayment.

Developments in South Africa and in Turkey created no alarm. Both had been expected here ever since the outbreak of the war. The foreign exchange position is improving. In addition to the money which Russia obtained here by the sale of Treasury bills, the Russian Government has already shipped £3,500,000 gold to London, and more is to follow. Petrograd exchange is therefore expected to work more freely.

A further issue of £15,000,000 British Treasury bills was announced yesterday, making a total of £90,000,000 put out since the outbreak of the war. The cotton trade is more hopeful. Increased orders are coming from China and India. Unemployment continues to decrease. The City looks upon the war news as very favorable. Parliament will reopen on Nov. 11, when the Government's policy for financing the war will be declared.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Commonwealth Power, Railway and Light Company reports income of $2,490,636 from stocks owned in subsidiary concerns in the year ended Sept. 30, as compared with $1,716,853 in 1913. Revenue from other sources brought the total up to $3,004,751. After meeting interest charges and expenses a net income for the year of $2,222,998 was left, against $1,604,868.

The Bankers' Trust Company, as successor trustee under the mortgage of the Metropolitan Telephone and Telegraph Company, dated May 24, 1893, is calling for surrender of bonds to be made before Dec. 31 at prices not in excess of 110 to exhaust a fund of $18,403.

CITY BANK SEES PROSPERITY AHEAD

Nations Will Adjust Themselves to War and Resume Normal Activities, It Thinks.

RESERVE SYSTEM WILL AID

It Will Release a Large Sum Which Will Contribute to Country's Financial Ease.

The National City Bank finds that while trade in this country is light, business affairs are, nevertheless, moving toward recovery. In its monthly letter sent out today the bank predicts that the war of the Allies against Germany, Austria, and Turkey will last for a long time. In the letter the bank says:

"The progress of the war does not point to an early termination. The idea that the effectiveness of modern weapons and the costly scale of operations would force an early peace has been generally abandoned. The experience of the last two months indicates that the defense behind intrenchments is so much stronger than the attack that forces of approximately equal strength can make little headway against each other. Limiting our view to the present area of most active warfare, if any army upon the defensive is able to hold its ground the prospect is for a war to exhaustion. Exhaustion is a long way off for any of the combatants.

"The first effect of the war was a profound shock to industry and credit. But a shock wears off and people soon accept even a state of war as a matter of course and adjust their affairs accordingly. Within the warring countries there must be a new distribution of labor to allow for men in the army and the new conditions of trade and consumption, and there must be a similar readjustment of trade between other countries. In the long run imports and exports practically offset each other, so that even a great country may be cut out of the world's trade, and when the other countries are connected up and their industries reorganized in relation to each other trade will go on in balance as before.

"This is not to minimize the difficulty and cost of reorganization or to intimate that the whole world is not loser when the best energies of several great nations are turned from science and industry to war. It is evident that progress toward a new state of order is being made. The British moratorium will end on Nov. 4, the French moratorium has been modified, and moratoria elsewhere have either expired or will expire soon. International trade is increasing, with indications that even Germany is exporting and importing considerable quantities of goods through neutral ports. War insurance rates remain high, and are in themselves a heavy tax upon trade. The United States war insurance bureau has taken risks amounting to between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 at rates varying from ½ per cent. to 5 per cent., according to routes traveled; the danger from mines being the most important factor. Seventy-five ships of about 300,000 tons capacity have been transferred to the American flag under the new registry law.

"Affairs in this country are moving in an orderly manner toward recovery. The banks in the central cities have restored their legal reserves, money is easier, fears of a financial crisis have disappeared, the foreign trade situation is better, a pool to lend money on cotton has been agreed upon, and the new banking system is nearer to doing business. These are all important gains over the situation of two and three months ago.

"Trade is light, and judging by the bank clearings, still declining, and the increasing ease in the financial situation is largely due to the relaxation of the demand for credit. There is a general suspension of new undertakings, which in a growing country like the United States are a great factor in the business situation. The crops move, and there is the usual buying for consumption, but constructive work requiring capital is not taken up. Naturally there will not be much capital for new enterprises while old, well-known securities can be bought at present prices. The industries dependent upon constructive work, such as steel, lumber, cement, &c., are very slack, and, of course, there is a great deal of unemployment.

"The grain and meat-producing sections are experiencing great prosperity, and the purchases of horses, mules, automobiles, and other war equipment and supplies by foreign Governments are assuming large proportions.

"The Federal reserve banking system, when in operation, will release a large sum in bank reserves, which should contribute to financial ease, and thus aid in handling the cotton crop and in the efforts at trade extension in other countries. It is not to be expected that bankers will feel free at once to use these new reserves to the limit. They have been accustomed to regard these reserves as necessary to conservative banking and may want to become familiar with the workings of the new system before relying upon it for prompt support."

FEDERAL RESERVE BY-LAWS

Provide for Conduct of Bank by an Executive Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The first installment of the by-laws of the Federal Reserve Bank has been drafted and will go into effect at once with the approval of the Federal Reserve Board. These by-laws relate only to legal matters and procedure and are the work of a special committee appointed at the recent conference at the Treasury Department of the Directors of the various reserve banks.

The by-laws provide that a majority of the Directors shall constitute a quorum. The board has power to appoint the officers and fix their salaries. Provision is made for an Executive Committee, consisting of the Governor, the Federal Reserve Agent, and one or more Directors chosen from Class A or B. This committee is empowered to pass upon all commercial paper submitted for discount, to initiate and conduct open-market transactions, to recommend to the Board of Directors from time to time changes in the discount rate, to buy and sell securities in general to conduct the business of the bank subject to the supervision and control of the Board of Directors.

The board is required to appoint a Governor, a Deputy Governor, a Secretary, and a Cashier, and it is provided that the duties of Deputy Governor, Secretary, and Cashier may be held by one person in the discretion of the board. The Federal Reserve Agent, as Chairman of the Board of Directors, is required to preside at meetings of the board.

EXPLAINS B. & O. DIVIDEND.

Sums Carried to Surplus Enabled Road to Maintain 6 Per Cents Rate.

In the annual report of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, President Willard explains the Directors' reasons for maintaining the dividend at 6 per cent. last year, although a surplus sufficient to pay that amount was not earned. In this connection Mr. Willard says:

"Largely because of the extraordinary food expenditures of more than $2,000,000, which were charged to operating expenses in the year, together with the recession in business, the net operating income fell short of the full amount required for the 6 per cent. dividend, which has been paid upon the common stock for the last seven years. The company has earned and carried to surplus in the last ten years more than $38,000,000, and the profit and loss account this year, after necessary adjustment, showed a balance of $41,922,000. In view of these circumstances the board felt justified in continuing the established dividend on the basis of 6 per cent.

"In reaching this conclusion consideration was given to the application for an increase in freight rates then pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission, as a result of which it is hoped the company may be permitted so to adjust its charges as to offset, in part at least, the increased expenses of a permanent nature, such as higher rates of pay and increased taxes, and thereby be enabled to earn a fair return upon the property investment. In this connection it was shown in the rate hearing that the expenses and charges of this company for the year 1913 were $4,712,000 greater than they would have been had the rates of wages and taxes alone remained the same as in the year 1910, an amount equal to more than 3 per cent. upon the entire common stock."

The Baltimore & Ohio figures, previously made public, showed a decrease of $4,297,000 in operating revenue and a loss of $2,340,000, or 9 per cent. in net.

Astor Trust Company

"Voluntary Trusts"

Such trusts established during your lifetime for the benefit of yourself, or others, have many definite advantages over trusts which you might establish by Will. The income can be made payable to yourself, while you live, and the principal or the income, or both, to individuals or institutions named by you in the deed of trust. You can make the deed revocable and cancel it at any time, and you will be able to see during your lifetime how your estate is managed. You can thus test the great advantage of having a corporate trustee before you commit your estate irrevocably to the executor of your Will. Moreover, the disbursement of the trust fund, both principal and income, as provided in the deed of trust, is not delayed at your death by the settlement of your estate under your Will. This may be of vital importance to your heirs.

The Astor Trust Company makes a specialty of these voluntary trusts. Our Trust Department will be glad to give full details.

PLAN IN RESERVE TO PAY BRITONS

Will Be Invoked if Trade Balance Fails to Swing in Our Favor Soon.

EXPORTS RAPIDLY GAINING

Treasury Statement Shows Excess of $33,622,370 Over Imports at Twelve Ports from Oct. 5 to 31.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—While exportations from the United States to the British Isles have been so stimulated that the British and American financial experts, who have been conferring over the matter of adjusting America's heavy indebtedness to Great Britain, have concluded that within a comparatively short time the balance of trade will be in favor of the United States, the representatives of the British Treasury believe it would be wise to arrange a tentative programme of settlement should their expectations fail to materialize.

This proposal has been accepted by the American representatives, and the provisional agreement for settling American indebtedness will be announced by the Secretary of the Treasury on his return from New York next Wednesday.

No official announcement has been made of the result of the conference yesterday between American Treasury Department officials and Sir George Paish and Mr. Blackett, the representatives of the British Treasury.

The marked improvement in the export trade was emphasized in this statement issued by the Treasury Department tonight:

"Material improvement in the foreign commerce of the United States and a substantial trade balance in favor of this country for the month of October are indicated by telegraphic reports to Secretary McAdoo of imports and exports at the principal customs ports for the month just closed. Figures from Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Galveston, Norfolk, Newport News, New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Seattle, and Tacoma show that the value of total imports at these ports from Oct. 5 to Oct. 31 was $106,341,261, and exports for the same period $139,963,631, or an excess of $33,622,370 in the value of exports over imports. The imports and exports at these ports represent about 87 per cent. and 72 per cent., respectively, of the total for the whole country.

"Reports to the Secretary indicate that grain is moving with increasing freedom, and that the cotton export trade is opening measurably. For the week ending Oct. 28 a total of 112,053 bales of cotton were exported to various ports of the world; on Oct. 29 alone 43,903 bales were exported.

The value of total exports and imports at the ports named from Oct. 5 to 31 was as follows:

Port.	Imports.	Exports.
Baltimore	$2,965,800	$6,523,397
Boston	8,745,088	9,813,833
Chicago	3,256,700	1,725,580
Galveston	744,690	17,023,690
Norfolk and Newport News	353,398	1,344,331
New Orleans	5,275,727	9,063,382
New York	69,155,971	77,790,980
Philadelphia	*4,857,534	*5,543,904
San Francisco	7,432,205	7,162,741
Seattle	4,041,388	1,760,463
Tacoma	412,757	1,802,800
Total	$106,341,261	$139,963,631

SEEK TO REDUCE LITIGATION

Bar Association Asks Suggestions for Avoiding Disputes.

At the last meeting of the Bar Association a committee was named to recommend means to discourage unnecessary litigation. The committee, made up of Daniel S. Ramsen, Julien T. Davies, John Brooks Leavitt, Willis E. Heaton, and Warnick J. Kernan has sent out a circular letter asking suggestions and giving a list of fifty subjects of litigation from Abbott's New York Digest.

Litigations concerning wills and executors and administrators, it is shown, outranks all others, and the committee asks particularly how disputes concerning wills and contracts can be prevented.

REBATE CASE ARGUMENTS.

Briefs Filed by Government and Importers in Tariff Issue.

Briefs in behalf of the Government and importers will be filed today in the test case brought in the United States Court of Customs Appeals to determine whether the provision in the new tariff law granting a rebate of 5 per cent. on foreign merchandise imported in vessels flying the American flag shall be made operative or disregarded altogether.

Secretary McAdoo directed customs officers to ignore the discount clause on representations made by twenty-nine foreign countries that the tariff's provision violates the commercial treaties now in effect by discriminating against the products of the countries concerned.

The Board of General Appraisers decided that the tariff law contemplates a discount in favor of goods brought here in American ships, but denied the right of foreign-made goods to share in the rebate. The board, furthermore, held that Section 4, Paragraph J, Subsection 7, giving the discount to merchandise entered in vessels under our registry must be made effective.

CAPITAL'S LOSS IN WAR.

Yves Guyot, French Economist, Figures It at $16,000,000,000 Annually

A Paris letter in today's ANNALIST presents the estimate of former Minister Yves Guyot, the noted French economist, on the cost of the European conflict and its effect on savings. Mr. Guyot thinks that at the end of six months the number of men engaged will be:

Three million Germans, 2,000,000 Austrians, or 5,000,000 in the camp of France's enemies.

Three million Frenchmen and 4,000,000 Russians will oppose them, being 7,000,000 in all, without reckoning England, and not counting the smaller units in the Balkans.

On this basis, and at an estimated cost of 12.50 francs ($2.50) per day per head, every fighting day destroys at least $30,000,000, and six months' outlay would reach $5,400,000,000.

The annual capacity for saving of the various nations involved is placed at $800,000,000 for France, $1,200,000,000 for Germany, and $1,600,000,000 for England, a total of $3,600,000,000, equal to the cost of four months' warfare. But fighting nations do not only cease from saving; they also stop paying their way, and Mr. Guyot places the losses through curtailment of productive power at $8,800,000,000. The damage done to human machinery he estimates at $3,600,000,000, making a total loss to capital account of $16,000,000,000 a year.

New Capital Can't Be Won to Keep Them Up—Eastern New England Needs $100,000,000.

FAVORS NATIONAL CHARTERS

Public Not Awake to Stupendous Crisis at Hand—Deems Government Ownership Puerile.

A letter on the railroad situation in the United States generally, but particularly in New England, has been sent to the President by Charles Francis Adams of Massachusetts. Mr. Adams from 1877 to 1890 was a Government Director of the Union Pacific Railway, and from 1884 to 1890 was the road's President. For ten years he was a member of the Board of Railroad Commissioners of Massachusetts, and for seven years was its Chairman.

South Lincoln, Mass., Oct. 24, 1914.

My Dear Mr. President—You will excuse my troubling you with a somewhat lengthy screed; but the topic I have in mind to deal with is important, and, for reasons which will at once suggest themselves, I feel something in the nature of a "call" to express myself thereon. You need give to what I write such amount of consideration only as it may seem to you to deserve, either consigning it to the files, or referring it to the Interstate Commerce Commission. For personal reasons, unnecessary to dwell on, I do not care to appear in person before that body; and so doing would necessarily involve on my part a responsibility for statements made, implying perhaps on my part an amount of investigation for which I have not time. I see also no compensating advantages, public or private, likely to ensue therefore. I cannot afford to get myself involved in either an inquiry or a controversy.

As I believe you are aware, in earlier life I devoted myself for twenty years to matters connected with railroad development and management. I did service, both as public official and as the head of a great railroad company. Although this experience terminated in 1890, and I have given little or no study to what has since taken place in railroad development, yet, as a member of the community, I now feel so impressed with the extremely critical condition of affairs and the significance, so far as public interests are concerned, of what is now going on in my immediate field of observation, that, as I have said, I feel moved to submit certain conclusions.

In doing so, I wish to premise I do not propose to go into details, to use exact figures, or to fortify what I have to submit by statistics or an attempt at argument. I shall deal only with generalities and conclusions, perhaps merely impressions; and that tersely.

A Danger Little Realised.

Forty years ago I had much to do with the origin and early development of the Railroad Commission. A pioneer, I am free now to say I had little realizing sense of what was finally to result from the movement then initiated; nor has the course of development altogether commended itself to my judgment. In connection with our form of government I still question in many respects its wisdom or its practical results.

However, what now leads to the writing of this letter is the conviction I am under that the present situation is not fully appreciated, and the elements of danger involved in it are far more considerable than is commonly supposed. As that problem presents itself to my mind, I see, moreover, no effort, at once intelligent and comprehensive, made to deal with it.

Confining myself to the situation as it comes under my daily personal observation in Eastern Massachusetts—though I am satisfied the conditions prevailing here are general—I am unable to escape the conclusion that so far as our transportation machinery is concerned we are rapidly falling behindhand, and getting also into a well-nigh inextricable snarl. The situation, too, while most portentous—for it is basic so far as prosperity is concerned—does not admit of solution except through treatment both drastic and comprehensive.

Let me come at once to the point: I am satisfied that here within, we will say, fifty miles of Boston, there is an immediate call for a capitalized railroad expenditure, fresh money outlay, of at least $100,000,000. Nor, comparatively speaking, is this outlay excessive; for in New York City alone within the last ten years, two railroad companies have spent, or are now spending, in the neighborhood of $300,000,000. This outlay was, moreover, required; nor is there any allegation that it has been wastefully made. Had it not been made, it would not now, under existing conditions, be possible; fortunately, it has been made, and is secure. That we have Financially Crippled.

In Eastern New England it is not, therefore, a question of dividends or interest on existing investment, or of a restoration of credit in this respect. It far exceeds those limitations; for to bring our railroad system up to the proper standard, including a renewal and replacement of rolling stock, the reconstruction of permanent ways and bridges, the separation of grades, and the development of proper terminal facilities, and connections necessary to modern competitive conditions would, on a rough estimate, unquestionably call for the amount of fresh money above named—$100,000,000. Moreover, unless that investment is made Eastern New England cannot maintain itself industrially. Is the fact generally appreciated that the case thus involves not merely rehabilitation but a costly development essential to continued prosperity?

Meanwhile, from causes unnecessary to enter upon, the corporations owning and managing the railroads in Eastern Massachusetts cannot remunerate the capital already invested, much less secure fresh money. They are financially crippled. This is a matter of common knowledge.

Such a state of affairs calls indisputably for prompt remedial action. The existing position is also from a common sense, business point of view impossible of long continuance. I have not time to argue the matter or to enter into details. I will merely state the fact. Here is the largest investment and active business management of the country, and those managing it control neither outgo nor income. They are told what they must do and pay, and have to vote for what they are to charge. Such a situation is economically unheard of, absurd. It needs only to be stated. It is financially impossible of long continuance.

I next find myself further forced to the conclusion that the railroad system generally has outgrown local lines, and that it is futile to expect any adequate remedial action through State legislation or control, partial or complete. The State machinery is, as respects large-scale transportation, antiquated. To indulge then even in an expectation that the problem can or will be dealt with in any comprehensive and constructive spirit through local legislation is, I submit, futile—so futile, indeed, as to be

J. A. SULLIVAN FOUND DEAD.

Wealthy Passaic Lawyer Victim of Heart Attack in His Office.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 1.—With his walking cane clutched tightly in his right hand, and leaning against a bookcase, James A. Sullivan, a prominent lawyer of this city, was found dead in his office, 241 Main Avenue, this morning by one of his law clerks who had an appointment to meet him there at 9 o'clock. Physicians say that heart disease caused his death.

He left his home early last evening, and when he did not return, members of the family believed that he was staying over night at the home of his brother and law partner, A. D. Sullivan.

James A. Sullivan was born at Saratoga, N. Y., fifty-three years ago. He was admitted to the Ohio bar in 1888. Several years ago he came to this city and joined his brother in the law business. He made a specialty of real estate law, and became very wealthy.

After the closing of the polls, at 5 P. M. next Tuesday, the counting of the vote will start immediately throughout the State. As soon as enough returns have been received to make the results of the complete count reasonably certain, the verdict of the voters will be instantly communicated to everybody for miles around through the use of the great searchlight on the tall tower of The Times Building. The signals will be as follows:

GERARD ELECTED SENATOR.—White shaft of light pointing west.
WADSWORTH ELECTED SENATOR.—White shaft of light pointing east.
REPUBLICAN CONGRESS.—White shaft of light north, swinging east and west.

Detailed election returns will be thrown by a stereopticon on a large screen on The Times Building, Broadway and Forty-second Street.

3 DEAD; LIQUOR BLAMED.

Druggist Accused of Selling the Libations Held Pending Investigation.

BRISTOL, Vt., Nov. 1.—The sudden deaths today of three men and the illness of three others led to the arrest tonight of D. A. Bisbee, proprietor of a drug store. According to the officials, the deaths were due to the effects of liquor obtained at the store.

The dead men are Fred O'Bryan and Samuel King of Bristol and Edward Wakefield of Warren. An autopsy was held tonight under the direction of Dr. B. H. Stone of Burlington, Director of the State Laboratory of Hygiene, assisted by local physicians. A quantity of liquor seized at the drug store was turned over to Dr. Stone, and will be analyzed at the State Laboratory. It is expected that Bisbee will be arraigned tomorrow after the report of the autopsy is submitted.

FLOATED OFF CULEBRA SLIDE

Freighter Arizonian Not Damaged by Grounding in Panama Canal.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Nov. 1.—The American-Hawaiian freighter Arizonian, which went aground on the slide in Culebra Cut in the Panama Canal yesterday morning, has been refloated, and the tie-up of navigation as a result of the accident will be of short duration.

The Arizonian struck on a ridge of dirt 175 feet long by 30 feet wide, which had been forced up in the middle of the channel, due to the enormous weight of the mass of débris near the bank. She suffered no damage.

M. G. SCOTT SWORN IN.

New Head of Typographical Union Guest at Good Luck Dinner.

Marsden G. Scott, formerly President of Typographical Union No. 6, yesterday took the oath of office as President of the International Typographical Union at a "good luck dinner" given at Shanley's. About 400 guests were present, including many friends of Mr. Scott outside of the union.

Samuel B. Donnelly was toastmaster, and introduced as speakers Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor; State Commissioner of Labor James M. Lynch, State Compensation Commissioner John Mitchell, James M. Duncan, retiring President of the International Typographical Union; John W. Hays, Secretary of the union; Don C. Seitz, business manager of The New York World, and James J. Freel, President of the International Stereotypers' Union.

Mr. Gompers spoke of the labor legislation enacted by the Congress which has just adjourned, praising it highly. Mr. Lynch also discussed State and national legislation. After the other speakers Mr. Scott spoke briefly, outlining his policy as President of the union and declaring his intention to maintain its present principles. A number of entertainers had places on the programme.

Among these present were State Efficiency Commissioner John H. Delaney, Coroner Jerome F. Healy, Charles J. Dumas, James J. Murphy, Patrick J. Tracey, Hugh McAtamney and James Tole.

Editor Dies in Elevated Train.

Elias W. Jacobson, editor of The Carpet and Upholsterers' Review, dropped dead of apoplexy in a Fulton Street elevated train in Brooklyn as it neared the Grand Avenue station last night. Mr. Jacobson was 60 years old and lived at 142 Putnam Avenue.

SHOT IMPERILS MANY LIVES.

Bullet Passes Through Brooklyn Crowd, Then Hits Woman.

As Detective Thomas Downs led Catherine Dougherty of 524 State Street, Brooklyn, toward the Bergen Street Police Station last night, after he had arrested her for loitering, the girl saw two youths at Atlantic and Fourth Avenues and called out:

"Oh, Bob! Oh, Bob! Help me!"

The streets were crowded. Atlantic, Flatbush, and Fourth Avenues converge in an open plaza, where hundreds of persons were waiting for trolley cars, yet the youths stepped forward and one of them fired a revolver at Downs. The bullet passed between the policeman's right arm and his side, tearing the sleeve and the side of his coat, but not hitting him. It sped through the waiting throngs and through the open doorway of the Long Island Railroad Station in Flatbush Avenue, where, almost spent, it struck Miss Mary S. Van Wagner, sister of Police Capt. Jacob Van Wagner.

While people in the station gathered about the screaming woman, Downs, dragging the girl, set out after the young men. James Creighton, an attendant in Mayor Mitchel's office, blew a police whistle, and some one rushed from a doorway and tried to hit him with a blackjack. Policemen Charles Stuckle and Charles Witscher caught two men in an areaway near Nevins Street.

They said they were Peter Ricco of 60 Front Street and Joseph Emmis of 34 Front Street. Both were charged with violation of the Sullivan law, for they had revolvers, and an additional charge of assault was made against Ricco, who, the police said, fired.

Miss Van Wagner was taken to her home, 877 Union Street, in an automobile after Dr. Brown, from Brooklyn Hospital, had dressed what proved to be only a flesh wound in the back.

SUFFRAGE SHOP OPEN TODAY

President Marcus M. Marks the First Speaker at Opening Session.

At noon today the suffrage shop, which Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse is to conduct for the Woman's Political Union at 663 Fifth Avenue, will open. The programme arranged by the Chairwoman favors men as speakers, for at each session a voter will have precedence over the non-voting orator. It is planned to have two sessions daily for the next two months, with speeches by prominent men and women.

A number of young women have been gathered together by Mrs. Leonard M. Thomas to act as ushers. Those promising to be on hand today are Gretchen Damrosch, Edith Mortimer, Mary Schieffelin, Barbara Rutherford, and Maud Coster.

Marcus M. Marks, President of the Borough of Manhattan, heads the list of speakers for this week. He will be heard today at 12, and will be followed by Miss Lillian D. Wald of the Henry Street Settlement. The afternoon meetings take place at 4:30 o'clock and will last until 6. Norman Hapgood is announced for this afternoon, to be followed by Dr. Katharine Bement Davis, Commissioner of Correction.

Tomorrow the speakers will be John A. Hennessy, and Controller William H. Prendergast, Mlle. Dorziat, the actress; Mrs. Vladimir Simkhovitch, and Mrs. Charles Beard.

At the noon meeting on Wednesday Gilbert E. Roe and Miss Fola La Follette will be heard, and in the afternoon City Chamberlain Henry Bruere and Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch.

SHIPLOAD OF TOYS IN.

Dutch Cargo Vessels Will Load Grain Here for Rotterdam.

Danger of a Christmas toy famine, feared in the early days of the war, was further relieved yesterday when the Holland-America freighter Soestdyk arrived with a cargo of toys and crockery from Switzerland and Germany. She is is the first vessel of a fleet of twenty Dutch cargo steamships chartered by The Netherlands Government to carry grain to Rotterdam.

Capt. Fillippi said that the bulk of the toys came from the Black Forest, where the chief industry is wood carving.

Other vessels to arrive this week with cargoes and that will load grain for Rotterdam will be the Oosterdyk, Marken, and Sorland.

SAYS SULLIVAN PAID FOR AUTO REPAIRS

Cropsey Has a Bill for Sing Sing Motor Which the Bank Wrecker Settled.

PARDON BOARD INVOLVED

Governor Will Be Asked to Investigate Story That It Took Convict Away on Auto Rides.

With Dr. J. Ellis Rohrer, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Union Bank Depositors' Association, preparing to ask Gov. Glynn to investigate the conduct of the State Board of Pardons in connection with the Sullivan-McCormick-Sing Sing scandal, District Attorney Cropsey of Brooklyn announced yesterday that he planned today to show that the bank President-convict at least paid the repair bills for the Sing Sing automobile if he didn't indeed buy the car outright. Mr. Cropsey said he had a copy of a bill paid by David A. Sullivan and had subpoenaed before the Grand Jury tomorrow automobile men who would present the original of this bill.

Such testimony would disprove McCormick's assertion that the car was State-owned and State-maintained, though bought originally by him with borrowed money, and would at least change the light in which a Governor's commission might view the acts of the State Board of Pardons, should Dr. Rohrer's committee sustain its charges that the members of the board once rode to Harmon, N. Y., with Sullivan in the car, and on another occasion made a trip to this city with the convict while he was doing secretarial work for it.

District Attorney Cropsey has all this information, and is working also on a report that McCormick once took Sullivan out of the State for a week-end trip with several friends. Even in the time of Warden James M. Clancy the information which has reached Mr. Cropsey indicates that Sullivan had unusual privileges, for he is supposed to have been allowed to visit his wife in Brooklyn in August, 1913. Mr. Clancy telephoned Mr. Cropsey last night denying that Sullivan, to his knowledge, had ever been out of the prison.

The Parole Board, against whom the inquiry seems likely now to be directed, consists of State Superintendent of Prisons John B. Riley, Henry J. McCann of Albany, and William Townsend of Utica.

Ex-Warden McCormick is among those subpoenaed to appear before the Grand Jury today. Others include Michael Lally, Yonkers hotel keeper, who says he lent McCormick the $2,000 with which the car was bought; Mayor Joseph T. Lennon of Yonkers, County Clerk Daniel J. Cashin of Westchester, Coroner James B. Dunn of Yonkers, City Attorney Thomas Curran of Yonkers, Frederick Snyder, William J. Walsh, who was secretary to Warden McCormick; Deputy State Controller Michael J. Walsh, who has a commission over the prison accounts, Thomas J. Hickey, who is a civilian stenographer at the prison, and George S. [illegible], a representative of the State Controller at Sing Sing.

Process servers tried yesterday to reach Mrs. [illegible] D. Burkhardt, Sullivan's stenographer and secretary, who is supposed to know much about Sullivan's business transactions while he was in Sing Sing, but they could not find her.

Fall from Window Kills Woman.

Mrs. Mary Rose, 48 years old, of 317 West Seventeenth Street, was killed yesterday by falling from a fifth-story window. She was seated at a window with her husband, Albert, and her son, Albert, when she heard music in an apartment on the fourth floor. She leaned out of the window and lost her balance.

WIRE ON BOMB PUT OUT FUSE

Test Shows High Explosive Was Put at Door After Threats.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, Nov. 1.—Mrs. D'Alto, wife of Policeman Tony D'Alto, who keeps a store and lives upstairs in First Street, smelled smoke late last night and went to her bedroom window. The odor grew fainter, and she went back to bed.

This morning a jar, wrapped in brown paper and tightly bound with yards of fine wire, was found at the front door of the store. A fuse had burned down to the wire and had died out, evidently choked by the wrapping.

Policeman D'Alto took the jar to Headquarters, where four ounces of high explosive were found inside. Testing the substance by touching a match to a speck of it, D'Alto's arm was severely burned by the flash. D'Alto said his life had been threatened.

Civil Service Eligibles Meet.

An organization to be known as the Civil Service Eligibles Association was formed on Saturday by about 400 persons who are on civil service lists. At the meeting President Henry Moskowitz of the Municipal Civil Service Commission and Commissioner of Charities Kingsbury were criticised for alleged ignoring of eligible lists. The State Civil Service Commission was praised. H. Sibley Elgot was elected President and W. E. Fraser Treasurer of the new organization.

POLL DOORS AJAR AS CAMPAIGN ENDS

Glynn in Manhattan, Whitman in the Bronx Appeal for Votes to the Last.

EACH SPEAKS AT MIDNIGHT

Republican Money Appears and Puts the Betting Odds at 10 to 8 on Whitman.

LITTLE CASH FOR WORKERS

Party Managers Stop Giving Figures, but All Sides Express Confidence in the Result.

With the leaders of both the Democratic and Republican parties confident of victory the State campaign was brought to a close early this morning. Gov. Glynn remained on the stump until well after midnight, when he made the last of more than thirty speeches.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt made the last plea for votes for the Progressive Party at Oyster Bay.

The fact that the candidates of the Democratic and Republican Parties kept up the fight for votes until the doors of the polling booths were yawning was one of the remarkable features of the campaign.

No new forecasts were given out. Charles F. Murphy, leader at Tammany Hall, refused to make any statement. The candidates all expressed themselves as absolutely confident.

The betting odds changed yesterday to 10 to 8 on Whitman, so much Republican money appeared. At the Breslin and the Waldorf last night a considerable amount of money was offered on Whitman at these odds, with very few takers. There was talk at the Waldorf o fa bet of $50,000 to $24,000 on Whitman between two well-known uptown men, but it was said that this was the only wager of any size.

Fred Schumm at his Brooklyn café said last night that about $10,000 had been put up during the day at 10 to 8 on Whitman, and that $50,000 was in his hands representing exclusively wagers on the Gubernatorial campaign. It was estimated in the Wall Street district that a corresponding amount had been placed by brokerage houses for customers, a small total in comparison with other years.

The managers of the various parties announced that less money was distributed among the district Captains than at any election for years. The Progressive Party said it would spend no money getting out the vote.

GLYNN MAKES A RECORD.

Governor Ends Campaign with Big Meetings in Manhattan.

With more than thirty speeches in one day as a record for electioneering, Gov. Glynn closed his campaign late last night with many open-air mass meetings in Manhattan. During the day he spoke at twenty-one towns stretched from one end of Long Island to the other, and last night he addressed one meeting in Brooklyn and an even dozen in Manhattan When he uttered his last appeal for votes Election Day had arrived.

After the Governor had completed the hardest day's work of his unusually hard three weeks' campaigning, he was asked how he felt regarding the election, and, still full of life and energy, he said:

"It has been a hard battle, but a splendid one. The last day has been the best one of a great campaign in which we have won the confidence and support of the people. At no time have the Democratic candidates descended to a campaign of personalities. We have been more than fair to every man. I have discussed in detail the business, administrative, financial, and legislative problems, which are the only questions of importance to the people of the State. Mr. Whitman has evaded all of the issues of the campaign, and has refused to tell the people where he stands.

"I have challenged him to take a position for or against direct primaries, workmen's compensation, co-operative markets for farmers, the State Employment Bureau, the financial policy which makes the State live within its income, and the land bank law. Mr. Whitman did declare that he was against the land bank, but before he had had time to take a stand against the other reforms for which I am responsible, he felt the effect of his declaration. Thereafter he confined his campaign to abuse of two unimportant clerks in minor State departments, who, it is now discovered, made mistakes long ago which they are trying to live down.

"These discoveries and an attempt to take advantage of a bigotry which all good citizens are ashamed to admit exists even to an insignificant degree in this State are Mr. Whitman's sole issues. There can be but one result of such a campaign."

Glynn Buglers Woke the Echoes.

The Governor's final whirl around Brooklyn and Manhattan was spectacular. Arriving in East New York after 8 o'clock on the special train on which he had toured Long Island, he went directly to the Hopkinson Mansion, Hopkinson and Pitkin Avenues, for his first speech of the night. An escort of forty-seven automobiles, all gayly decorated and carrying committees of the various Glynn clubs and organizations in the city, met him at the Mansion, and from there, in a long, fast flying line, accompanied him through Manhattan.

The automobiles were led by six motor cycle policemen, and on the front seats of the leading cars buglers sounded

JUDGE SEEKS SOLDIERS TO CURB STRIKERS

Federal Court in Arkansas, Defied, Calls on President for Troops to Enforce Its Mandate.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—President Wilson, Attorney General Gregory, and Secretary Garrison of the War Department discussed at a conference at the White House tonight the advisability of sending Federal troops to the strike district at Hartford Valley, Ark., to assist Frank Youmans, United States District Judge, in enforcing the orders of his court.

No decision was reached, and the announcement was made that no troops would be ordered out tonight at any rate. It was said, however, that the request of the Federal Judge was under consideration, and the matter would be held in abeyance until tomorrow pending advices from the Judge as to the ability of his Marshals to cope with the situation.

Dispatches to officials here told about bloodshed and rioting and an almost uncontrollable situation.

This is the first request of the kind that has come to the Federal Government from a court in many years, but it is fully covered by Federal statutes giving the Department of Justice power to call on the military branch of the Government for assistance in enforcing the laws of the United States.

Judge Youmans, according to reports which have reached officials here, has been unable to rely upon some of his Deputy Marshals to preserve order. He could make no appeal to the State authorities, as following recent labor troubles the iron mine properties were placed in the hands of a receiver in the Federal Court of the Western District of Arkansas, over which Judge Youmans presides. Several Deputy Marshals have been injured in the past few weeks.

Should the President act on the recommendation of the Federal Judge, a proclamation will be issued warning all citizens in the affected district to give up their arms and obey the law. Secretary Garrison declined to say tonight whether any orders would be issued tomorrow for Federal troops, awaiting word from the White House. Troops probably would be sent from Fort Logan H. Root, Arkansas, if ordered.

KAISER'S HAIR NOW WHITE?

SARGENT PAINTS AMID WAR.

Work of Artist in Austrian Tyrol Not Interfered With.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—John S. Sargent was painting in the Austrial Tyrol when the war broke out, and, according to The Manchester Guardian, there was some anxiety among his friends, despite his American citizenship.

That anxiety now has been relieved by news that Mr. Sargent's work has not been interrupted in any way, and that he purposes to return to London next month.

VESUVIUS ACTIVE AGAIN.

Inhabitants Greatly Alarmed, Fearing Repetition of 1906 Disaster.

NAPLES, Nov. 2.—Mount Vesuvius is again in eruption and the inhabitants in its vicinity have become greatly alarmed. On Sunday special prayers were made and processions of people went to favored shrines, as a repetition of the disaster of 1906 is feared.

The activity of the volcano first manifested itself by deep detonations and rumblings. This was followed by gigantic columns of smoke and soon thereafter an abundant eruption of lava began.

The last serious eruption of Mount Vesuvius occurred in the Spring of 1906. Several villages were destroyed and the property loss was estimated at $20,000,000. About 500 persons were killed and 50,000 made homeless. Many nations, especially the United States, sent aid to the sufferers. There have been several minor eruptions since.

ANOTHER SLIDE AT PANAMA.

Canal Closed, but Col. Goethals Hopes to Have It Open Wednesday.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The Panama Canal has been closed to navigation by another landslide. Col. Goethals cabled the Canal Commission late today:

"Rapid movement of slide material in the break north of Gold Hill, locked the channel Saturday. Hope to open channel by Wednesday."

As understood at the canal offices, this slide is only an aftermath of the big slide of Oct. 14, when nearly three-quarters of a million yards of earth and rock slipped from the hillside down into the canal prism.

WILL CUT STEEL WAGES.

Big Corporation Decides on Retrenchment to Take Effect Jan. 1.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 2.—From an official source it was learned today that the United States Steel Corporation on Jan. 1 would reduce the wages of its army of employes in different plants throughout the country. As a prelude to this action the dividend on the common stock was reduced a few days ago. Independent mills, it was said, probably would follow the example of the Steel Corporation and reduce the pay of all employes who were not protected by working agreements extending beyond Jan. 1.

While this action has been expected in iron and steel circles, officials of the Carnegie Steel Company, which first posted in its mills the notice of the expiration on Jan. 1 of the wage agreement, have denied that any decision had been reached, contending that they were merely taking advantage of the expiring agreement, which had been in force for thirteen years, to notify their employes that the question of wages and salaries would be up for settlement at the end of the present year.

The percentage of the reduction determined upon was not made public today, and it is not known whether the salaries of officials will be cut.

Grand Jurors Charge Conspiracy by Directors, of Whom Five Still Serve.

MELLEN ENJOYS IMMUNITY

GOES BACK TO JULY 2, 1890

Government Case Is Independent of Recent Agreement to Dissolve —Demurrers Expected.

Twenty-one Directors, past and present, of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company were indicted yesterday by the Federal Grand Jury for conspiracy to monopolize interstate commerce by acquiring the control of practically all the transportation facilities of New England. This is the result of the Government investigation of New Haven affairs which has progressed for more than a year and which, as regards the civil aspect of the case, was settled by a decree to which both sides agreed before it was presented for Judge Mayer's signature two weeks ago.

Charles S. Mellen, who was the chief witness before the Grand Jury and thus gained immunity, was not indicted. The defendants named in the true bill were William Rockefeller, George Macculloch Miller, Charles F. Brooker, William Skinner, D. Newton Barney, Robert W. Taft, James S. Elton, James S. Hemingway, Lewis Cass Ledyard, Charles M. Pratt, A. Heaton Robertson, Frederick F. Brewster, Henry K. McHarg, Edward D. Robbins, Alexander Cochrane, John L. Billard, George F. Baker, Thomas De Witt Cuyler, Theodore N. Vail, Edward Milligan, and Francis T. Maxwell

Directors or ex-Directors.

All these defendants have been or are on the board. Some of them were the leaders in New Haven affairs before the road was reorganized, including Mr. Rockefeller, Mr. Baker, Mr. Ledyard, and Mr. Billard. Mr. Brewster, Mr. McHarg, Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Milligan, and Mr. Maxwell are still members of the board. Mr. Robbins has been general counsel of the road.

Nearly fifty men, some of whom are now dead, were mentioned in the indictment as having conspired with the twenty-one, although they were not indicted. Most prominent among them was the late J. P. Morgan, and some of the others were Chauncey M. Depew, Lucius Tuttle, John M. Hall, Richard A. McCurdy, and Alexander J. Cassatt.

The punishment for the alleged crime is one year in prison, a fine of $5,000, or both.

The indictment was handed up in the morning to Judge Foster of Louisiana, who was sitting temporarily in the Federal District Court. Assistant Attorney General Frank M. Swacker, R. L. Betts, and James W. Osborne were present for the Government, and Mr. Osborne asked that bench warrants might issue immediately for the defendants. This was ordered by the court, and the Federal officials immediately began to notify the defendants who were in the city.

George F. Baker and Charles M. Pratt, who had with them John D. Lindsay as their attorney, and Lewis Cass Ledyard, who was represented by John G. Milburn, presented themselves before Judge Foster at 2 o'clock.

"George F. Baker to the bar," called Clerk Leary, and the defendants at once stepped forward to offer pleas of not guilty. Assistant District Attorney Robert Stephenson suggested that ten days be allowed to the defendants in which to withdraw their pleas or to demur, but the Judge considered that three weeks would be a more reasonable period.

Bail Fixed at $5,000.

Mr. Lindsay suggested that, considering the standing of the defendants, there really was no reason why they should be required to give bail.

"A man doesn't like to say he's out on bail," Mr. Baker was heard to remark to Mr. Milburn, who stood beside him, but Judge Foster thought bail should be given.

"It would be more regular, I think," he remarked. "I'll make it $5,000. There can be no hardship in furnishing it in this case."

There was a general laugh, and the defendants withdrew with their counsel to give bail before Commissioner Houghton. This was furnished for them by the American Surety Company.

Hoffman Miller, son of George Macculloch, another of the defendants, represented that his father was 82 years old and in very poor health, and that it would be a great hardship if he were forced to appear to plead. Mr. Miller, Sr., is now in Morristown, N. J., and, of course, will plead not guilty. The court agreed to leave him for the present in the custody of his son as his counsel and not to demand that he put in a formal appearance.

Outside the courtroom Hoffman Miller was energetic in his denunciations of the action of the Government in indicting his father and in having the Grand Jury return the indictments on the day before election day.

"It's an outrage," he exclaimed, "bringing in these indictments at this period of the year. It is all done for political effect. They could have been returned any time this year. They were found on Monday last week, and the Grand Jury at that time shook hands with Mr. Osborne and almost kissed him.

Assails Grand Jury Action.

"I represented to the Judge that my father is a very old man, 82 years old. He very kindly consented that I should appear as his counsel and enter his plea.

THUNDER OF SEA FIGHT IS HEARD IN ENGLAND

Firing Off Dover Indicates Battle Between British Ships and German Submarine.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Heavy firing was heard off the Foreland at Dover this afternoon. Twelve live shells were fired in rapid succession. The concussion rattled windows at Deal.

A British torpedo boat destroyer could be seen outside Goodwin Sands, and it was surmised that the British ship had attacked a German submarine which was known to be in the Channel.

TESTS FOR ARMOR ON ZEPPELINS FAIL

Germans Unsuccessful in Making Their Big Air Fighters Bomb-Proof.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LAKE CONSTANCE, Switzerland, Nov. 2, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The statement that the new Zeppelins, said to have been designed for a raid on London, have aluminum covers as a protection for the envelope against bombs and shells is incorrect.

In regard to two airships now completing at Friedrichshafen, I learn that several experiments have been made with various substances, but so far these efforts to make the Zeppelins bombproof have been unsuccessful.

TEN MORE ARMY CORPS WILL JOIN GERMANS

Six Will Serve in Belgium and Northern France—Four Will Attack Verdun.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 1, (Dispatch to The London Standard.)—Information reaching here shows that the new German army has a total strength of 580,000 men, and is made up principally by calling out the recruits of 1915. The remainder are volunteers of all ages.

The army is divided into twelve corps and will be used as follows: Six corps for service in Belgium and France, two to form a reserve force and be stationed around Strassburg, and the other four to be employed in special effort to take Verdun.

ATTACKED ON SEA, BY AIR AND UNDER SEA

French Cruiser's Exciting Battle With Aeroplane, Torpedo Boat and Submarines.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 2.—The Petit Parisien publishes a letter from a sailor on the Waldeck Rousseau giving details of the attack Oct. 10 by Austrians on that cruiser from air, sea, and under sea simultaneously.

"On approaching the Cattaro coast toward 8 o'clock in the morning," he says, "an aeroplane appears which apparently intends to attack us. Clear decks for action is sounded, the quick-firers are aimed. The airman drops three bombs. One bursts fifteen yards from the ship's side opposite my gun. Our quick-firers prevent further attacks and the aeroplane retires, apparently unhurt.

"At the same moment a periscope is seen 600 yards away. Our guns demolish it. We advance at full speed, twenty-four knots. A second periscope sighted in the rear sends us two torpedoes, which we avoid by dodging. It also is demolished by our fire. We see a swirl in the water as if the submarine is sinking, nothing else.

"A moment later a torpedo boat comes to starboard obviously trying to draw us over a mine field. We don't follow, but our big guns inflict damage. Flames rise from the enemy's stern. However, he escapes and the battle ends."

DUNFERMLINE PELTS CARNEGIE'S STATUE

Citizens of His Birthplace Believe Their Benefactor Is Pro-German.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A dispatch to a news agency from Dunfermline, Scotland, says that local sentiment against Andrew Carnegie because of his alleged pro-German attitude is so strong that the statue which was erected in his honor by the citizens of his native town last June has been pelted by a crowd.

Carnegie films which have been exhibited at moving-picture houses have been withdrawn, the correspondent says.

The only utterances of Mr. Carnegie published in America which might be construed as being pro-German were contained in an interview which he gave on arriving in New York from abroad on Sept. 25 and an article by him in The Independent of Oct. 17 entitled "A League of Peace—Not 'Preparation for War.'"

In the former he said, according to THE TIMES reporter:

"Now I will tell you how the war started. The Kaiser was on a holiday on his yacht in the North Sea. While he was away he received a telegram asking him to return to Berlin. When he returned the mischief already had been done. The Kaiser himself is a marvelous man, possessed of wonderful ingenuity."

In The Independent article Mr. Carnegie said that the foundation for a world peace court had been laid when, on Sept. 5, Great Britain, France, and Russia had mutually agreed not to make peace separately and added:

"After the present belligerents agree upon peaceful settlement Germany and Austria should be the first invited by the Allies to join in forming a league of peace."

When Britain declared war on Germany on Aug. 4, Mr. Carnegie was reported to have said that Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, could have done nothing less, since Belgian neutrality, guaranteed by both Great Britain and Germany, had been violated by the latter.

ELECT GUTIERREZ TO RULE MEXICO

HIS TERM ONLY 20 DAYS

Made Short Because Zapata Delegates Had No Votes—Carranza Threatens War.

WARNED BY UNITED STATES

Vera Cruz Won't Be Evacuated Until Guarantees Demanded Are Given by Mexico.

MEXICO, Nov. 2.—A dispatch received here from Aguascalientes says that Gen. Eulalio Gutierrez was elected Provisional President of Mexico this morning shortly after midnight. The election is for twenty days only. The convention voted to meet in Mexico City later.

Gen. Gutierrez has been prominently identified with the revolutionary movement that resulted in the expulsion of Gen. Huerta from the republic. He is a close friend of Gen. Carranza and rose with Carranza against Huerta in Carranza's native State of Coahuila. He defeated a force of Federals near Saltillo last January. In April he expelled the Spanish residents from the City of San Luis Potosi. One of his greatest victories against the Federals was won at Vanegas in June.

Commenting today on the action of the Aguascalientes Convention, Foreign Minister Fabela said:

"The high officers of this Government believe that this convention had no right to name a successor to Gen. Carranza. If Gen. Villa and Gen. Zapata refuse to leave the country with Carranza we will have war. The only way to guarantee peace is for these three chieftains to leave the field. Gen. Gutierrez is a brave and honorable soldier, but the convention must live up to Gen. Carranza's demands?"

Preparatory to the election of a provisional President, the Aguascalientes Convention last night accepted the resignation of Gen. Carranza as First Chief of the Constitutionalist Party. The resignation was accepted unconditionally. Gen. Villa resigned at the same time from the command of the Northern Division of the army.

EL PASO, Nov. 2.—Gen. Carranza, from Mexico City today, issued a further demand for an explanation from the convention. Indications tonight pointed to a possible conflict between the Carranza and Villa factions. It was reported that both sides had begun moving troops.

The term of office, twenty days, accorded to Gutierrez, was made short out of consideration for the delegates of Gen. Zapata, the Southern chieftain. These delegates had no vote in the convention for lack of authorization from their chief. Within the twenty days allotted it was expected that Zapata could arrange to allow his agents to vote for him.

A message from the Central Bureau of Information at Mexico City was given out by the Consulate General's office here tonight as follows:

"As soon as the First Chief was informed of the action of the Aguascalientes convention he stated to the convention delegates that he was disposed to do as he had promised and give up his command and executive power as soon as the convention had fixed the form of provisional government and arranged for Zapata and Villa to give up command of their forces. Also he asks that an explanation be made to him of the motives which had impelled the convention to decide to accept his resignation and the motives from which it had considered expedient his resignation from power."

In the convention last night Gutierrez received eighty-eight votes for Provisional President. His nearest competitor was Gen. Juan Cabral, the Sonora commander, for whom thirty of the delegates voted.

Gutierrez comes of the lower middle class. Before he became a revolutionist he was a grocer. He was appointed Provisional Governor of the State of San Luis Potosi by Carranza at the beginning of the Constitutionalist revolution. He is regarded, however, to be a sympathizer with Villa in the present controversy.

Gutierrez is known throughout the Constitutionalist Army as "the Tiger of Conception del Oro," from the little town between Saltillo and San Luis Potosi, where he made his home. When Gutierrez allied himself with Carranza he succeeded in raising several hundred men from among his neighbors, but was unable to arm more than a handful of them. In spite of this he is credited with inflicting severe damage to the Federal troops sent to defend Monterey and Saltillo. He succeeded in seizing a quantity of dynamite from mining companies operating south of Saltillo. With this as his only weapon it is said he destroyed dozens of Federal troop and supply trains. From these trains he armed and equipped the force with which he inflicted a decisive defeat on the Federal command at Vanega last June.

The naming of Gutierrez as head of the convention of chiefs and acting chief executive of the nation came as a surprise. He had not been mentioned as a possibility for the office.

Carranza Not Satisfied.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 2.—Gen. Carranza, speaking from the balcony of the City Hall in Puebla tonight, said that if the Aguascalientes convention designated as Provisional President a man of worth and patriotism he would retire in

ALLIES REJECT APOLOGY BY TURKEY; ENGLAND ORDERS NORTH SEA CLOSED; GAINS BY THE ALLIES IN BELGIUM

Summary of War News.

The Grand Vizier of Turkey has made an apology to the allied powers, the terms of which, although not disclosed, are not acceptable to the Allies, according to an official statement from the French Government. The Allies insist on reparation to Russia for the damage done by the Turkish bombardment; the immediate dismissal of the German officers from the cruisers Goeben and Breslau, and the internment of the two vessels until the end of the war. This demand, it is believed, will not be sanctioned by the Young Turks.

The British Admiralty announces that the entire North Sea has been closed to commerce, and vessels entering this area will be exposed to the gravest danger from the mines which it has been necessary to lay. This action has been taken, it is explained, as a reply to the laying of mines by the Germans in the waters near the Irish coast.

Attacks by the Germans against the positions of the Allies were less violent yesterday, according to the French War Office, which reports some progress south of Dixmude.

The Germans report the capture of Messines, south of Ypres, which has been taken and retaken four times since Saturday. Further gaining of ground in the vicinity of the Ypres Canal and advances in the Argonnes, with severe losses to the Allies, are also reported.

The Russians announce that they have repulsed the German attacks in East Prussia, and continue their offensive movement beyond the Vistula River without opposition. Fierce fighting is taking place with the Austrians on the San River, in Galicia.

The German report states that the Russian attacks against the Austro-German positions in Russian Poland have been repulsed and several detachments routed. The bombardment of Czernowitz is reported.

KAISER'S ARMY IS REINFORCED

Fresh Troops Reach Bruges—Six New Corps to Join Northern Forces.

MESSINES WON FROM ALLIES

But Paris Reports Gains at Several Points in the Slow Advance Toward Ostend.

Kaiser Waits to See the Capture of Ypres

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

A TOWN IN NORTHERN FRANCE, Nov. 2, (Dispatch to The London Times.)—The German Emperor has ordered his troops to take Ypres at all costs. He came in person to the firing line to see them do it.

The Germans opened the attack on the allied lines yesterday with a furious artillery fire. Infantry came into action, and for one of the few times during this campaign charged the Allies' trenches with the bayonet.

All day the battle has raged. The fighting has been desperate and the losses very heavy.

What is the outcome or whether the battle has yet had a definite result is not yet known, but this I have good reason to believe: Last night the Allies still held Ypres.

PARIS, Nov. 2, 11:15 P. M.—This official bulletin was issued by the War Office this evening:

Between the North Sea and the Oise the attacks made today by the Germans have been less violent than those of yesterday.

In Belgium we have progressed at the south of Dixmude and at the south of Ghelavet, and we have maintained all our other positions.

In the region of the Aisne a violent German offensive between Braye-en-Lannois and Vailly has completely failed.

The afternoon bulletin said:

On our left wing the German offensive continued yesterday with the same violence in Belgium and in the north of France, particularly between Dixmude and the Lys. In this region, in spite of attacks and counter-attacks on the part of the Germans, we made slight progress on almost the entire front, excepting at the village of Messines, a part of which was again lost by the allied troops.

The enemy undertook an important movement against the suburbs of Arras. This resulted in failure, as did other movements against Lihens and Le Quesnoy-en-Santerre.

On the centre, in the region of the Aisne, we made slight progress in the direction of Tracy-le-Val, to the north of the Forest of Ailgue, as well as at certain points on the right bank of the Aisne, between this forest and Soissons.

At Amont-de-Vailly an attack directed against those of our troops who are in possession of the heights on the right bank of the Aisne also resulted in failure. The same outcome attended several night attacks delivered in the heights of the Highway des Dames.

In the region of Rheims, between the Argonne and the Meuse, and on the heights of the Meuse there was noticed yesterday a recrudescence of activity on the part of the enemy's heavy artillery. The bombardment of these pieces, however, did not show any appreciable result.

On our right wing an offensive movement of reconnoissance by the enemy on Nomeny was repulsed.

In the Vosges, in addition to the fact that we have recaptured the heights which dominate Mount Ste. Marie, we have made progress in the region of the Ban de Sapt, where we occupy the positions from which the artillery of the enemy has been bombarding the town of St. Dié.

More Progress Near Souain.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Foreign Office dispatches to the French Ambassador here supplemented today's official bulletin with this reference to offensive movements in the region of Souain:

We have continued to make progress in the region of Souain, where our attacks have carried us almost within contact of the barbed wire en-

NORTH SEA CLOSED BY BRITISH ORDER

German Mine Laying Moves Admiralty to Declare It a Military Area.

WARNS MERCHANT SHIPS

Decree Asserts That Some of the Mines Undoubtedly Were Laid Under Neutral Flags.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The entire North Sea has been declared a military area and merchant vessels entering it will be exposed to the gravest danger from the mines which it has been necessary to lay and from the warships which are searching vigilantly by night and day for suspicious craft.

This action has been taken by the British Admiralty as a reply to the laying of mines by the Germans in the waters north of Ireland.

The Secretary of the Admiralty tonight made the following announcement of the virtual closing of the North Sea to traffic:

"During the last week the Germans have scattered mines indiscriminately in the open sea on the main trade route from America to Liverpool via the north of Ireland.

"Peaceful merchant ships have already been blown up with loss of life by this agency.

"The White Star liner Olympic escaped disaster by pure good luck, and but for warnings given by British cruisers other British and neutral merchant and passenger vessels would have been destroyed.

"These mines cannot have been laid by any German ship of war. They have been laid by some merchant vessel flying a neutral flag which has come along the trade route as if for purposes of peaceful commerce, and, while profiting to the full by the immunity enjoyed by neutral merchant ships, has wantonly and recklessly endangered the lives of all who travel on the sea.

"In these circumstances, having regard to the great interests intrusted to the British Navy, to the safety of peaceful commerce on the high seas, and to the maintenance within the limits of international law of trade between neutral countries, the Admiralty feel it necessary to adopt exceptional measures, appropriate to the novel conditions under which this war is being waged.

"They therefore give notice that the whole of the North Sea must be considered a military area. Within this area merchant shipping of all kinds, traders of all countries, fishing craft, and all other vessels will be exposed to the gravest dangers from mines which it has been necessary to lay and from warships searching vigilantly by night and by day for suspicious craft.

"All merchant and fishing vessels of every description are hereby warned of the dangers they encounter by entering this area, except in strict accordance with Admiralty directions. Every effort will be made to convey this warning to neutral countries and to vessels on the sea, but from Nov. 5 onward the Admiralty announce that all ships passing a line drawn from the northern point of the Hebrides through the Farne Islands to Iceland do so at their own peril.

"Ships of all countries wishing to trade to and from Norway, the Baltic, Denmark, and Holland are advised to come, if inward bound, by the English Channel and the Straits of Dover. There they will be given sailing directions which will pass them safely, so far as Great Britain is concerned, up the east coast of England to the Farne Island, whence a safe route will, if possible, be given to Lindesnas Lighthouse.

"From this point they should turn north to Isouth, according to their destination, keeping as near the coast as possible. The converse applies to vessels outward bound.

"By strict adherence to these routes the commerce of all countries will be able to reach its destination in safety

Russian and Turkish Troops Are Already in Battle

VIENNA, Nov. 2, (via Amsterdam to London, Nov. 3.)—The following official announcement was made public here today:

"On the Russian-Turkish frontier near Trebizond (Asiatic Turkey) battles have begun between Russian and Turkish troops."

Fighting Between Turks and Russians Begun Near Trebizond.

APOLOGY TOO LATE—RUSSIA

German Officers of Cruisers Blamed for Attacks on Ports and Ships.

VIZIER PLEADS INNOCENCE

France Convinced of Loyalty of Her African Colonies—Indian Mohammedans for Britain.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The Grand Vizier of Turkey has apologized on behalf of his Government for the warlike operations of the Turkish fleet under German commanders in the Black Sea, but it is stated authoritatively here that the Porte will have to go very much further than this before the powers of the Triple Entente will agree to resume friendly relations with the Ottoman Government.

A Reuter dispatch from Petrograd says:

"In reply to a telegram from the Turkish Grand Vizier expressing regret at the rupture of the good relations existing between Turkey and Russia 'owing to an attack by the Russian fleet,' Sergius Sazonoff, Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, denied that the Russian fleet was the first to fire, and said he feared it was too late to enter into pourparlers of any kind with Turkey."

It was disclosed in a statement issued by the French Government this evening that Turkey, in reply to a note presented by Russia, France, and England last Friday, agreed to recall her fleet from the Black Sea, but refused to dismiss the German officers from her ships, and that, as it was believed she could not maintain a passive attitude without doing this, the Ambassadors of the Entente powers demanded their passports and left Turkey.

There is every reason to believe that, despite the apology of the Grand Vizier, which, it is understood, comes from the Peace Party in the Turkish Cabinet and may not be adhered to by Enver Pasha, the Minister of War, and his Young Turk followers, France, Russia, and Great Britain not only will demand reparation for the warlike operations of the Turkish fleet in the Black Sea, but will insist that Turkey's entire fleet, or at any rate the cruisers Goeben, Breslau, and Hamidieh, be put out of commission until after the war, Turkey's security being guaranteed in the meantime.

It is suggested also that the demobilization of the Turkish Army would be demanded, which would mean that those troops which have crossed the Egyptian frontier must be withdrawn.

Apology Made in London.

However, as the terms of Turkey's apology, which was apparently made in London, have not been published and must be considered by the Entente powers before the apology is formally accepted or refused, there seems to be a long way to go before diplomatic relations between the Ottoman Government and the Allies can be resumed.

In the meantime a report comes from Constantinople of the seizure of another Russian steamer, and it is also stated that Bulgaria, which had been asked to choose the side on which she would fight, has commenced to mobilize her second line troops.

The following dispatch has been received by Reuter's Telegram Company from Constantinople by way of Sofia:

"The Russian Ambassador, after the receipt of the news of the Turkish attack on Odessa, immediately sought an interview with the Grand Vizier for the purpose of asking for his passports. The Ambassador was informed, however, that the Grand Vizier was too ill to be seen.

Vizier Greatly Distressed.

"Sir Louis Mallet, the British Ambassador, succeeded in seeing the Grand Vizier on the following afternoon, and found him greatly distressed over the Black Sea incident, concerning which he protested his innocence. It is understood that he expressed the hope that the powers of the Triple Entente would pause before taking an irremediable decision.

"The opinion is prevalent in political circles in Constantinople that an adjustment might be reached through a complete apology by Turkey, payment of an indemnity, the repatriation of the German officers and crews, the disarmament of the cruisers Goeben and Breslau, and the demobilization of the Turkish Army.

"In diplomatic quarters, however, the opinion is expressed that such a settlement would be sure to be rejected by the Turkish chauvinists. War is regarded as inevitable.

"A striking evidence of the extent to which Germany is backing Turkey was afforded by the receipt a few days ago by the Constantinople branch of the Deutsche Bank of £1,000,000 ($5,000,000) gold. Further supplies are expected shortly."

A dispatch received here from Bordeaux by the Central News says:

"The French Government has issued a statement saying that the Turkish Government, in reply to a note of the Triple Entente powers, confined itself to proposing the recall of Turkish warships into the Dardanelles and expressed a desire to remain at peace with Russia, France, and Great Britain.

"But, in default of the dismissal of German officers in the Ottoman service, the Governments of the Triple Entente could not hope that Turkey would be able to maintain the passive attitude which she offered to adopt.

"The Ottoman Government, not having thought it its duty to give, by dismissing the German officers, the mark of sincerity to its intentions which was requested, the Ambassadors of France, Russia, and Great Britain, in conformity with the instructions of their Governments, demanded their passports from the Grand Visier and left Turkey.

"From the impressions received from Northern Africa, it appears that the Mussulman world intends in no degree to throw in its lot with the Turks."

The Ambassadors' Departure.

Passports were handed today to the Turkish Ambassador to Great Britain, Tewfik Pasha. A telegram from Bordeaux says the Russian Ambassador was the first of the diplomatic representatives of the Entente powers to leave Constantinople. He was followed by the French and British Ambassadors. Passports have been handed to the Turkish Ambassador in Petrograd.

The Amsterdam correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company sends the following dispatch:

"A telegram received from Salonika by way of Berlin states that the French and British Ambassadors to Turkey arrived with their staffs on special trains today at Salonika. From Salonika they are proceeding to Italy on a British warship."

A telegram sent from Constantinople today says: "The Servian Minister will leave Constantinople tonight or tomorrow."

A Reuter dispatch from Petrograd says the Prefect of Police has issued an order expelling from the country within a week all Turkish subjects.

ASKED IF APOLOGY WOULD DO.

Minister Appealed to a Neutral Diplomat in Constantinople.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Turkey's apology for the recent events in the Black Sea through the Grand Vizier, announced in London, was a sequel to events which Ambassador Morgenthau reported today in confidential cipher messages to the State Department. It was accepted here as clearly indicating a purpose on the part of the conservative members of the Ottoman Cabinet to avert war with the Triple Entente.

Mr. Morgenthau cabled at 5 P. M. Saturday that, shortly after the Russian Ambassador demanded his passports, the Turkish Minister of Agriculture called on a certain neutral diplomat and asked him to go to the Russian envoy to ascertain if an apology by Turkey for the bombardment of Russian ports in the Black Sea would be accepted and would pacify Russia. The neutral diplomat saw the Russian Ambassador, who said that his instructions to leave Constantinople were absolute, but that when all German sailors, soldiers, and officers were dismissed summarily from the Turkish Army and Navy and when he had been advised of their departure from Turkey, he would return and resume diplomatic relations with the Ottoman Empire.

Later in the day the Turkish Minister of Agriculture called on the same neutral diplomat to learn if an apology would be accepted by the Russian Government. The same reply was made to him, and the Russian, French, and British Ambassadors departed on a special train at 7 P. M. Saturday, arranged for through the efforts of the American Ambassador.

Although details of the Turkish apology reported from London had not reached here, officials and diplomats conversant with the situation did not believe the Triple Entente would be satisfied with a written apology unless it were accompanied by the dismissal of the German officers and sailors and soldiers and, perhaps, by the dismantling of the Goeben and Breslau, the former German cruisers now menacing commerce and ports on the Black Sea. The transfer of these vessels to Turkey has never been explained to the satisfaction of the Entente.

The efforts of the Minister of Agriculture to avert war are in line with previous indications that the Ottoman Government was seriously split on the issue of war or neutrality. The Ministers of Finance, the Interior, and Agriculture are endeavoring to keep Turkey at peace with Europe, while the Ministers of War and the Navy are said to have been strongly in favor of striking for Germany.

The American Ambassador is making arrangements for panic-stricken Americans to leave Turkey by special train for Greece. The Italian Ambassador is active in trying to obtain safe conduct for Russian subjects, who also are anxious to leave the Ottoman Empire.

As a result of the reports dispatched by Mr. Morgenthau before the cable communication with Constantinople was cut late on Saturday night, and owing to the Turkish apology forwarded to London, hope that Turkey will take into account her already demoralized economic condition and maintain her neutrality has been received in official circles.

The State Department today received word from a cable company in London that a routine message dated yesterday, addressed to the American Embassy at Constantinople, had been held up, as there was no communication with Turkey. Officials here directed that it be sent via The Hague, Berlin, Vienna, Sofia, and Athens.

No Americans were injured in the bombardment of Odessa, and the damage to American property was insignificant, according to a report today from the American Consul at that port.

The Consul added that the local authorities at Odessa declared that the Turkish gunboats which conducted the bombardment were commanded by German officers.

FRANCE WILLING TO FORGIVE.

Lays Blame on Germans—Sure of Loyalty of North Africans.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 2.—The Temps devotes a good deal of attention to the Turkish crisis, which, it says, "shows that the Turkish Government was unable to control its German officers, who were nominally in Turkey's service, but in effect her masters."

The Temps considers that if Turkey goes to war Italy may be brought to realize that she has accounts to settle with the Ottomans apart from those affecting Tripoli.

"Calculation," concludes the article, "Berlin cannot hope to draw material assistance from Turkey, but Germany would probably be glad to find some one else to aid in paying the penalty for the war. We say with the Novoe Vremya, 'the conclusion of the war will be the destruction of Prussian Germany and the final solution of the Eastern question.'"

By The Associated Press.

BORDEAUX, Nov. 2.—The French Government has issued the following note concerning the attitude of Turkey:

The French Government has noted on several occasions regrettable breaches of neutrality by Turkey, chiefly in the conduct of the military and naval authorities in connection with Germany. An ever increasing number of positions has been allotted to German officers. The receipt of arms and munitions from Germany and the welcome given to the cruisers Breslau and Goeben justly alarmed the French Government. Added to this, Turks, without provocation, committed acts of war in Russian ports.

The Government, therefore, in concert with Great Britain and Russia, desirous of believing that these acts were imputable to German officers endeavoring to usurp the authority of Ottoman commanders, proposed to the Sublime Porte to separate its policy from that of Berlin by dismissing the German officers.

Turkey has not dismissed these officers, and its attitude presented the same inconveniences as though a state of war existed, because it obliged the Allies to detach a portion of their forces as a safeguard against aggressions.

As a result the French, British, and Russian Ambassadors demanded their passports and left Turkey. French interests in Turkey were left in charge of the American Ambassador, while those in Palestine were taken over by Spain.

Dispatches from Algeria, Tunis, and Morocco show that the Mussulmans there well understand Turkey's error in handing over her sovereignty and independence to German hands. Germany wishes to lead an important section of Islamism into a struggle which can only be disastrous, and North Africa certainly will not in any way join with the Turks in compromising the Mussulman cause.

CRUISER GOEBEN DAMAGED.

Russian Forts' Fire Effective—A British Vessel Scuttled.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 2.—A dispatch from Sevastopol says that the bombardment by the former German cruiser Goeben of that Black Sea fortress yesterday was put an end to by the Constantinowskawa batteries, which forced the warship to withdraw.

The shore station subsequently intercepted a wireless message from the Goeben which said: "Damaged; will return to Constantinople for repairs."

Newspaper reports of the bombardment say that the cruisers Goeben and Breslau and four Turkish torpedo boats bombarded the shore near Sevastopol yesterday morning, shelling the railroad and docks. The Russian shore batteries replied. The warships disappeared along the Crimean shore to the eastward after inflicting trivial damage.

Theodosia, on the Crimean coast, 100 miles northeast of Sevastopol, also suffered a bombardment on Saturday, when a Turkish cruiser sailed close enough to throw thirty shells into the city.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A dispatch to The Times from Petrograd, dated yesterday, says that a British vessel, the Fredcrick, was set on fire and scuttled in the course of the bombardment of Novorossyek.

The Turks also wantonly bombarded Anapa, a Russian seaport of the Black Sea at the western extremity of the Caucasus range.

"According to a Constantinople telegram reaching here way of Berlin," says Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent, "the Russian steamer Koraljevo Olga was seized at Constantinpole last night. A Turkish crew was put on board the vessel the Turkish flag was hoisted."

CAUCASUS MOSLEMS LOYAL.

Members of Tiflis City Council Join in Cheers for the Czar.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 2.—A dispatch from Tiflis, capital of the Government of Caucasia, says:

"The City Council met in an extraordinary sitting on the occasion of the beginning of the war with Turkey in Caucasia. The Russian, Georgian, Armenian, and Moslem Councilors asserted unanimously the solidarity of the various nationalities constituting the Caucasian population in the desire to repulse the enemy of their common fatherland.

"The sitting terminated with cheers from all present. The Councilors decided to ask the Governor of Caucasia to tender to the Emperor an expression of their respect and loyalty."

MISSIONARIES BELIEVED SAFE.

Very Few of the English Stationed in Palestine Are Now There.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Inquiries in missionary circles in London today showed little apprehension that there have been anti-Christian disturbances in Turkey, or that English and American missionaries there have, up to now at least, suffered anything except great difficulty in receiving remittances forwarded to them.

For this reason, ever since the European war began, English missionaries have been withdrawn from the Turkish Empire, especially from Palestine, where most of the English missionary work in the Mussulman dominions is done. Out of a normal European missionary force in Palestine of more than 125 there are today only about 10. The others are either at home on extended Summer furloughs, not being allowed to go back, or have made their way to Egypt.

As early as Sept. 1 the Church Missionary Society authorized a Cook's agent to proceed from Cairo to Jerusalem in order to gather together English missionaries and make arrangements for their return.

For the past three days telegraphic communication with Turkey has been interrupted, and for a longer period than that letters have been getting through irregularly. For these reasons it is not known here just how American missionaries in Palestine and other parts of Asiatic Turkey are prepared to meet the present crisis, but from the latest indirect information American missionaries working in the districts from Beirut to Antioch were in no danger and experiencing no exceptional inconveniences.

BLEW UP HIS GUNBOAT.

Turkish Commander Also Sank a Steamer to Prevent Capture.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 2.—A dispatch received here from Constantinople by way of Vienna says:

"According to reliable news an Anglo-French fleet yesterday entered Tchesme Bay, Asia Minor, about forty miles west of Smyrna, where the small Turkish gunboat Berak Reis and the Turkish steamer Kanili-Adda were anchored.

"The commander of the Turkish gunboat sank the steamer, and blew up his own vessel in order to prevent their capture by the allied fleet."

MINES ON TURKISH COAST.

Announcement of New Peril to Shipping Made by Germany.

The danger which is confronting shipping in the west is thus extended to the east.

TELLS MOHAMMEDAN INDIANS TO BE LOYAL

Influential Native's Paper Says It Is Their Duty to Fight Britain's Foes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 2, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The best test of the attitude of the younger school of Moslems in India is the opinion of Mohammed Ali's Delhi organ, The Comrade:

"If any cause can be ours," it says, "it is the British, and if Germany counts on us she is mistaken. It would be bad business also for Turkey to lavish on Germany the lives, energies, and resources she needs for her own quarrels, since Germany never spared any for her when she was beset by still greater perils.

"We do not wish to be cynical, but self-preservation is the first law of nature, and nature is inexorable and ruthless in punishing disobedience to its Decalogue.

"Germany has done nothing as yet for the Turks to deserve the sacrifice of a single anadol, much less a street riot in a single town or village by Moslem sympathizers of Turkey with a view to embarrass their own Government.

"We do not in the least mean to insult the intelligence of Turkey, and to convince her of it we frankly confess that, whether her choice is peace or war, the consequence will be hers, not ours. Hence she must exercise her own judgment and surrender it to none.

"What shall be our attitude toward the Government is a simple question and presents no difficulty. We have, of free will and as masters of our destinies, chosen to remain in this country as subjects of our King and Emperor and fellow-citizens of our neighbors. We have done this because the benefits of his rule exceed whatever discomforts we may have felt at any time or may be likely to feel in future. When we entered the field we must have known all the rules of the game, and, whatever the fortunes of the game, we must abide by the rules and take both defeat and victory in the manner of sportsmen.

"Sir Syed Ahmad's clean-cut logic must come to the rescue of every man who finds the situation distressing. He said, 'Our attitude toward the Government established in this country must be governed only by one consideration, namely, the attitude of that Government toward ourselves.'

"Every other consideration is foreign to this subject, and, whether we fight Turks or Russians, our services we must place at the disposal of our Government, and our souls we must commend to God."

VIENNESE CHEER TURKEY.

Diplomat Addresses Crowd, Which Calls for Egypt's Liberation.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A dispatch to the Reuter Telegram Company from Vienna, coming by way of Amsterdam, says there were demonstrations of sympathy for Turkey at Vienna today. Thousands bearing Turkish, German, and Austrian flags assembled in the vicinity of the Turkish Embassy and cheered.

The Secretary of the Embassy, speaking in German, addressed the crowd from a window, after which the manifestants again cheered, calling for the liberation of Egypt.

BULGARIA CALLS RESERVES.

Orders the Mobilization of Her Second Line of Troops.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Rome says:

"A message received here from Sofia says that Bulgaria has ordered the mobilization of her second line of troops. The first line troops have already been mobilized."

A dispatch from Amsterdam quotes the Berlin Lokalanzeiger to the effect that Rumania will not modify her attitude of neutrality provided the other Balkan States remain out of the conflict.

MARTIAL LAW IN EGYPT.

Proclaimed by Britain — Turkish Gunboats Off the Gulf of Suez.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Martial law was proclaimed today by Great Britain throughout Egypt. An official notification by the British Chargé d'Affaires at Cairo was delivered to American diplomatic agents there.

The British Chargé d'Affaires also informed the American Consul General that the British Commander in Chief had orders to take vigorous measures to repress any outbursts in Egypt as well as to defend British rule there.

Should there be a campaign in Egypt, Earl Kitchener's experience will be invaluable to Great Britain, for no man alive has a better knowledge of the country. If the reports that the Turkish invasion of Egypt is well under way are true, picturesque forces mounted on camels and horseback have probably already crossed the frontier.

Turkey, it is argued in London, will endeavor to accomplish three things—the invasion of Egypt, the blockading of the Suez Canal, and the stirring up of a holy war among the 70,000,000 Mohammedans in India as well as among their co-religionists in Egypt.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A Rome dispatch to the Central News asserts that Turkish gunboats are reported at the entrance to the Gulf of Suez.

Numerous detachments of Turkish cavalry, according to the same dispatch, have reached Akabah, a fortified village of Arabia, on the gulf of the same name on the Red Sea.

A decree has been issued prohibiting the cultivation of cotton in the upper Egyptian basins in 1915, according to Reuter's Cairo correspondent.

BURSTING GUN'S WIDE RUIN.

Houses Leveled by Explosion—Flying Shells Kill Men Far Away.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MADRID, Nov. 1, (Dispatch to The London Standard.)—The Imparcial states that when one of the forty-two-centimeter guns employed on the German right wing (near Ostend) exploded the other day, it caused awful havoc among the gunners, and a squad of men, 250 in all, who were standing close by. All were blown to pieces and fragments of their limbs were picked up afterward five miles away.

Shells intended for use in the gun blew up in all directions, killing men as far off as ten kilometers, (six miles.)

Some farm houses a little to the rear of the scene of the catastrophe crumbled to pieces from the shock of the explosion, which tore a chasm in the ground that swallowed up all that was left of the gun and its platform.

9 BRITISH OFFICERS KILLED.

Casualty List of Oct. 28 Contains the Names of 14 Wounded.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A casualty list received from headquarters today, under date of Oct. 28, gives the names of nine officers killed and fourteen wounded. Among those wounded is Lieut. Col. H. L. Richardson of the Forty-seventh Sikhs, an Indian regiment.

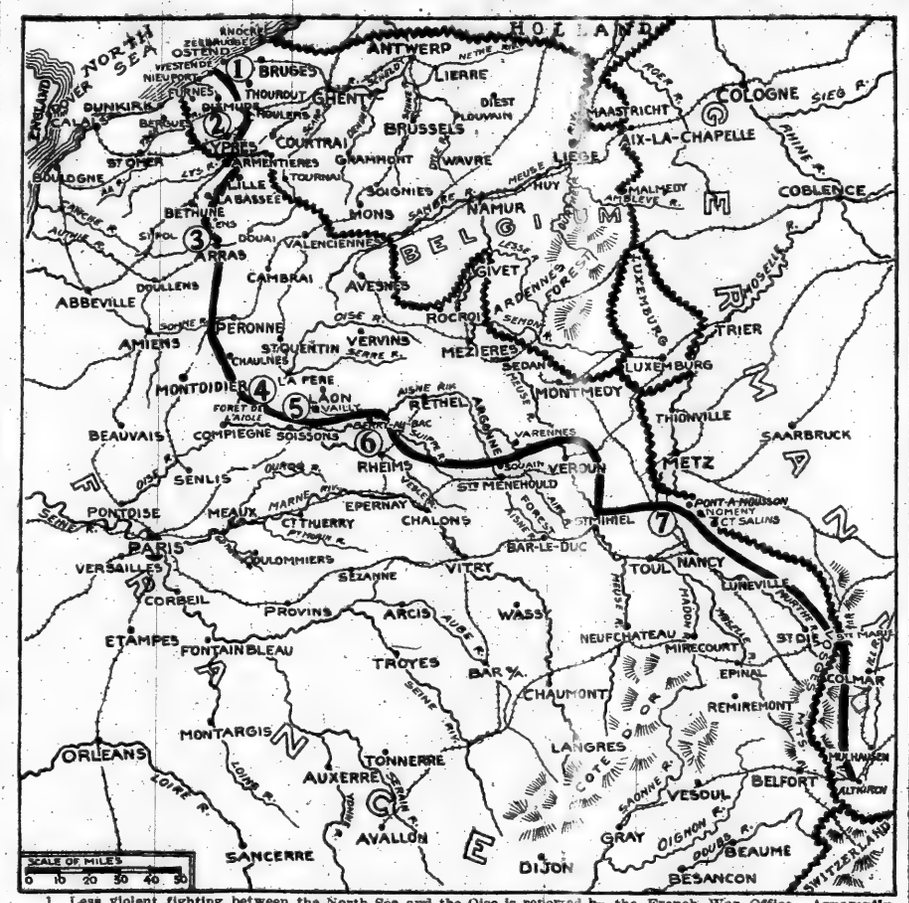
PUT BIG GUNS ON BORKUM.

Germans Have Placed 42-Centimeter Weapons on North Sea Island.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A Central News dispatch from Amsterdam says that German 42-centimeter guns have been placed on Borkum Island, in the North Sea.

Borkum is a small island belonging to Prussia, at the mouth of the Ems. It is sixty miles southwest of Heligoland.

Important Points on the Western Battle Front.



1. Less violent fighting between the North Sea and the Oise is reported by the French War Office. Apparently the Allies have gained ground toward Ostend, but the Germans still hold that port.
2. South of Dixmude the conflict has been sanguinary. The Allies have advanced at many points, according to the French War Office report, but have lost part of Messines. Berlin reports the German success at the latter town and says further ground has been gained in that region.
3. An attack of the Germans on the suburbs of Arras is reported repulsed.
4. Fresh activity is being shown on both sides along the Aisne. West of Soissons, the French War Office says, the Allies have made progress.
5. Around Vailly there has been some serious fighting and Paris reports that Germans, attacking the Allies intrenched on the heights, were beaten back.
6. The Kaiser's heavy artillery is being brought into play in the Rheims district as well as to the westward. Berlin chronicles some successes in the Argonne region.
7. Germans advancing on Nomeny have been repulsed, according to Paris.

tangiements of the enemy's trenches. There has been similar progress in the woods of Le Prêtre—to the west of Pont-a-Mousson.

Berlin Reports Further Gains.

BERLIN, Nov. 2, (via London.)—Army Headquarters issued the following this forenoon:

In our attacks on Ypres further ground has been gained and Messines has been occupied by us.

In the fighting in the Argonnes some successful forward movements have been made and the enemy suffered severe losses.

ALLIES' LINE HOLDS FAST.

Dutch Correspondent Says Germans Have Gained Nothing Along Coast.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 2, (via London.)—The Handelsblad correspondent at Sluis telegraphs:

"All German attempts to break through the line of the allied forces between Nieuport and Dixmude have failed. In spite of the greatest sacrifices, the Germans have not succeeded in gaining ground on the other bank of the canal.

"Communication with Ostend is almost completely interrupted. Permits to leave Bruges are no longer given, but tramcars are still running and the German marine band gives daily concerts in the market place.

"German soldiers, tired of the war, continue to cross the frontier near Sluis in large numbers. They declare that it is no longer a question of battles, but of butchering.

HAVRE, Nov. 2, (via London.)—A Belgian official report issued this afternoon said in part:

The arrival of the German Emperor, which, it is announced, is expected shortly in South Flanders, shows that the principal effort of the enemy is being directed between Ypres and the River Lys. The allied troops yesterday and today broke the efforts of their assailants.

German troops appear largely to have evacuated the left bank of the Yser. Trenches, situated some 200 or 300 yards from our lines, have been found empty. This morning a strong column marched from Mannekensvere toward St. Pierre Capelle, where large forces already are assembled. The flooding of the country proceeds, but the bridges and pontoons, carried across the Yser by the enemy, are still in position.

GERMANS STICK TO OSTEND.

Fresh Troops with Big Guns Are Going to the Front.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 2, (via London.)—A dispatch to The Telegraaf from Sluis says that Ostend and Routers are still in the hands of the Germans.

"It is reported," the dispatch adds, "that the Allies yesterday occupied Leffinghe, on the Ostend-Nieuport Canal, which, if true, means that the Germans suffered a heavy defeat.

"A strong detachment of German troops, with heavy Austrian guns and much war material, arrived at Bruges yesterday from Ghent. Fresh troops are going uninterruptedly to the front."

GERMANS STILL POUNDING.

Messines, South of Ypres, Changes Hands Four Times in Two Days.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The Germans continue to strike hard blows at the Allies' lines in their endeavor to get through to French ports.

As the floods, the Belgian Army and the British fleet have barred their way along the coast, the Germans are now striking on a line stretching from Ypres, in Belgium, to La Bassée, in France.

The stubbornness of the fighting along this line is seen from the fact that Messines, which the Germans now occupy, has been taken and retaken no less than four times since Saturday, each time with huge losses in killed or wounded.

The belief is growing here, and has been expressed by persons returning from Belgium, that the Germans are making a last effort to get through to the English Channel, and that if this fails they will fall back to positions which they have prepared in Central Belgium.

A Times correspondent in Northern France telegraphs that the Allies are daily creeping toward Ostend. The number of Germans holding the place is so negligible, he says, that if the Allies achieve a definite victory in the fight for the river, Ostend will fall into their hands.

The correspondent also says that the Allies have penetrated north and east of Lille, which, he says, "certainly has been evacuated by the Germans and there is good reason to believe that it has been occupied by the Allies."

ROTTERDAM, Nov. 2.—Advices from Belgian coast towns say the exchange of artillery fire between the Germans and the warships has wrecked most of these towns. Westende, Westkerke, and Middelkerke are all in ruins.

TAKE VILLAGE WITH BAYONET.

Allies' Capture of Ramscapelle Vital—How Germans Are Massed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 3.—A dispatch to The Morning Post from a town in Belgium dated Saturday says:

"Today was a cheering one for the allied cause along the front from Nieuport to Dixmude. After a fortnight of ebb and flow the tide seemed to turn definitely in the Allies' favor with early dawn.

"The village of Ramscapelle, southeast from Nieuport, was taken with a fierce bayonet charge of Belgian and French infantry. The advantage was pushed home and the allied line of battle was securely set on the railway line from Nieuport to Dixmude.

"Two days ago the Allies were shelling on that line because the Germans were there. They had then established ten or eleven divisions of infantry across the Yser, and one division was ahead of the railway line. This evening they can hardly be said to have any position safely established across the Yser, as the allied troops hold the full stretch of the railway embankment, which on the average is less than two miles southwest of the river.

The firm establishment of the Germans at Ramscapelle, on the main road from Ostend to Dunkirk, might have ultimately made necessary the falling back of the allied line. The field after the battle this morning was a sight of horror. Probably at least 5,000 were killed and wounded altogether, and the killed were more numerous than the wounded.

The German troops on the Belgian front are now in numbers and disposition somewhat like this: On the coast there are four divisions of Ersatz reserves; next to them, coming along the line to the southeast, are ranged the Second Army Corps, the Twenty-second Army Corps, the Twenty-third Army Corps, and the Twenty-sixth Army Corps. At Roulers are some Ersatz and Landwehr troops. In reserve are four divisions of cavalry and the Nineteenth Army Corps, and around Lille are the Eighteenth, Thirteenth, and Fourteenth Army Corps, with a great force of cavalry.

If these observations are correct, there are about 600,000 German troops between Ostend and Lille.

AMERICANS AMONG WOUNDED.

Several from Boston Found Who Were Serving in British Army.

PARIS, Nov. 2.—The Rev. Mr. Savage, a Catholic priest, formerly of Washington, who is serving as a chaplain in the French Army, says that he has found several Americans from Boston among the British wounded whom he attended.

Sergt. Godson, a well-known football player, has been decorated on the field of battle with the emblem of the Legion of Honor as a reward for taking command of several batteries of artillery after all the other officers were killed or wounded and silencing a German battery. The General congratulated him before the entire army.

CATCH FOE'S MESSAGE AND AVERT DISASTER

British Learn of Impending Attack on Ypres and Take Precautions Against It.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 3.—The Daily Mail correspondent at Calais, describing the desperate engagements in which the British troops bore the brunt of the fighting at Ypres, says:

"In some measure we have to thank the tapping of a wireless message for the fact that whole sections of the British expeditionary force are still intact. Two German messages were tapped. The first ran, 'Take Ypres by Nov. 1.' The second read, 'More men now, and we have them.'

The latter placed the British Army on guard, and, though suffering very severely, they repulsed repeated assaults.

The correspondent says that the British are believed to have opposed to them at this point twelve German Army Corps, or, roughly, 550,000 men.

The correspondent also states that the Germans are now firing shells at British airmen, which on exploding give off poisonous gases. Two airmen have fallen to the ground dead from no apparent reason, and others come down complaining of dizziness and sickness. The gases from these shells produce a curious rainbow effect when viewed from the ground.

300,000 BRITISH FIGHTING.

500,000 on Firing Line by December —1,000,000 More by Spring.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—No fewer than 300,000 British soldiers are under the orders of Field Marshal Sir John French on the firing lines at this time, (Oct. 20.) Besides, there are many auxiliary troops on duty at the transport and supply base. This army acts as a complete unit in conjunction with their French comrades under the command of Gen. Joffre.

The British base is near a port on the British Channel, and the field of action of the British troops is near the Belgian frontier in France and in Belgium. Virtually all the British soldiers in the field have seen considerable service, many of them having had from ten to twelve years' training and having participated in Great Britain's "little wars" in various parts of the world. The gaps in their ranks are filled by re-enlisted men, who have hastened back to the army at Lord Kitchener's call.

By Dec. 1, when, it is expected, large bodies of British Territorials who have volunteered for foreign service will have been trained sufficiently to take the field, it is estimated that the force at Sir John French's disposal will have reached 500,000. This will include the British and native troops from India and portions of the garrisons at Malta and Gibraltar. By that time, also, many of the Australians, Canadians, and New Zealand detachments will have joined the forces on the Continent.

The bulk of Lord Kitchener's new army of 1,000,000 men, now coming into being, will not, according to an expert military view, be ready for service in the field until next Spring. Owing to the superior class of men who have responded to the call, their training is progressing rapidly. Among them are nearly 200,000 men who have served in the British regular army for periods ranging from seven to twelve years, and these form an admirable stiffening for the recruits from civil life, whom they assist in training. To these must be added many men who have served short periods in the volunteer forces of the militia.

IMPOSSIBLE TO CIRCLE BRITAIN WITH MINES

Would Require 2,000,000, and Germany Hasn't a Tenth That, American Expert Says.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Commenting on the rumors from Berlin that Germany intends encircling the British Isles with a chain of submarine mines, an American naval officer who is an authority on mines said today that such a feat was utterly impossible. It would require more than 2,000,000 mines, he said, and Germany did not possess a tenth of that number and could not manufacture 500,000 if she wanted to. Submarines are practically valueless in mine-laying, it appears, for the reason that they cannot carry enough mines to make so perilous a trip worth while.

The American officer questioned does not believe that there are more than 300 mines off the Irish coast, which should be easily guarded against. In his opinion these mines must have been laid by some ship flying a neutral flag which brought them from some Scandinavian port. It is not likely, he thinks, that more than one ship could sneak past the cordon of British cruisers, and one vessel couldn't carry more than 300 mines. The officer also remarked that he deemed it impossible that any floating mines had been used by either side, as these are worthless except under circumstances that have not yet arisen in this war.

AID GERMAN CRUISERS.

Coal and Information Furnished by Merchantmen, London Hears.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—German merchantmen regularly provide German cruisers in the Pacific with coal and provisions from Chilean ports and furnish wireless information to the warships, according to The Times correspondent at Santiago, Chile.

The correspondent says the merchantmen obtain "leave to depart from the ports by making false declarations regarding their destination to the Chilean authorities."

CHILDREN SUFFER MOST.

Red Cross Nurses Tell of Hardships Little Ones Undergo in Belgium.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—"Amid all the horrors of this war, there is none that compares with the suffering of little children." This is the opinion expressed by two Red Cross nurses, Mrs. Patton Bethune, the wife of an English officer, and Dr. Ethel Ormiston, a New Zealander, who have just returned to London after varied experiences in Flanders and along the Dutch frontier.

They both worked close to the firing line and ministered to the British, French, Belgian, and German wounded. Their services were accepted by the Germans at a time when the German casualties were so heavy that the German medical service was inadequate to cope with the wounded brought back from the front. They were brought in direct contact with most of the many-sided horrors of war, but among them all that which left the deepest impression upon them is the indescribable misery which was inflicted upon the babes and sucklings.

"At Sluis," said Mrs. Bethune, "just over the Dutch frontier, we saw hundreds of little innocents of ages varying from one month to ten years, who were suffering from scarcity of both food and clothing. One poor little kid, between two and three months old, had a strip of linen for the sole covering of his poor little body, which was like an icicle. The Dutch were doing everything possible, but the relief organization there, as everywhere, seemed totally inadequate.

"In Flanders we saw many heart-breaking cases of childish suffering. There were boys and girls of from 7 to 10 years of age who were trudging along with their mothers, carrying bundles of their poor household effects, fleeing from they knew not what terrors. We could sympathize with the women who had been stricken down in their health and vigor, and our hearts went out to the women who had fled from their homes in panic, but the suffering we witnessed that curdled the blood in our veins was that of the little children."

CREDITED TO LORD FISHER.

Closing of the North Sea Believed to Have Been Directed by Him.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 3.—The supremely important announcement issued by the Admiralty last night with reference to the North Sea came too late for editorial comment in most of the morning papers. It is regarded as the direct outcome of Lord Fisher's appearance as First Sea Lord on the Admiralty Board. Lord Fisher always has been known as an advocate of strong measures, and the half-hearted consideration which the Admiralty hitherto has given to this question has speedily been transformed into action by his interposition.

The plan announced by the Admiralty puts a new aspect on North Sea naval strategy. Besides curtailing the possibilities of German vessels under cover of neutral flags laying mines outside the limits of what the English now refuse to call the German Ocean, it reduces the chances of any German fast cruiser slipping out for purposes of commerce raiding. This is a contingency which had been particularly apprehended since the exploits of the Emden and the Karlsruhe have shown what could be done in this way.

JOFFRE'S GREAT AIM IS TO WEAR DOWN FOE

French Commander Careful of His Men Because the Conflict Will Be a Long One.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—Persons attached to the French War Office estimate that the Germans have in Belgium and France and along the German frontier to Switzerland about 1,750,000 men. The French and English have undoubtedly a numerical superiority, with possibly 2,225,000 men on or near the fighting lines.

The reason the Allies do not turn the Germans out of France and Belgium is partly because the power of the defense is greater, with modern weapons and intrenchments, than the power of offense. There is probably no position on the line that either army could not take if it was determined to do so. It is simply a question of concentrating sufficient forces on that point and suffering the inevitable losses.

A position is taken at a loss greater than has been inflicted, and the winners, upon advancing, find themselves facing another position, which also may be taken. If this operation is repeated often enough, the numerical superiority of the attack will become an inferiority as the weeks go on, and the war will be lost.

Gen. Joffre and Field Marshal French are careful of the lives of their men. They seek to accomplish large results by letting the Germans attack under unfavorable circumstances, when they will do so. The allied commanders appear to think the Germans may be engaged to greater advantage in France and in Belgium than in Germany. Their effort is to dispose of the allied troops upon this or that part of the vast front so that important fractions of the invaders may be destroyed or captured.

For the Allies to drive the Germans before them (if that should be possible) would be to drive them back on their bases with armies intact. The problem of beating the Germans on this frontier would be more difficult every mile they were driven back.

The conviction exists at the headquarters in the field and the Ministry of War that the war is to be a long one; that the victory is to be won solely by attrition, and that this process of attrition can be applied as well in northern France and in Belgium as on the Rhine. The care of the military organization is therefore not to be extravagant with the unreplaceable human material.

France probably has 1,500,000 of men, most of them under arms, who have never been to the front. There are the very young men and the reserves of the older classes, who are being trained to take their places on the battle lines. France, therefore, can lose 1,500,000 men and yet maintain her fighting forces at the same strength they are now.

The same thing is probably true of Germany, and so military observers here look upon the immense operations which have taken place as only the beginning of a conflict which may not reach its greatest violence until Spring.

FRENCH PRESS OPTIMISTIC.

They Regard German Assaults as Efforts to Get Free.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 2.—The French press are confident that a few days will produce a marked change in the military situation in Northwest France and Belgium. They regard the German attacks as final efforts to win some success irrespective of its strategic value. The Temps comments:

"The Germans are trying to disengage themselves from our grasp, not to seize the coast line, where the situation is that both opponents are attacking each other instead of Germans attacking and the Allies defending. If their effort ceases for a moment, our counter strokes will immediately sweep them before it. They realize this, and consequently are making furious plunges against our line as the only means left of defending their own."

The Intransigeant, commenting on the report that orders found on a captured German indicated that their movement against Calais was intended to be decisive, says:

"A decisive effort which produces no result has clearly failed. It is now certain that the Allies have won a victory in Flanders."

ITALIAN PUBLIC FOR WAR.

Even Socialists Believe the Nation Must Join the Allies.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 2, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—I recently had an opportunity of obtaining a comprehensive idea of the general opinions held in Northern Italy as to the probability or advisability of that country taking an active part in the war. The first point which strikes one is that there is nothing whatever in the shape of war fever, though possibly the southern provinces might be more inclined than the north to see the country committed without due consideration and caution.

Italy knows by recent experience the strain and cost of war, and has no desire to enter on a fresh campaign unless it is absolutely

4,000 of Garrison Reported to Have Been Captured—Austrian Victory East of Fortress.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 2.—The following report from the General Staff of the Russian Commander in Chief was made public here tonight:

On the front in Eastern Prussia our troops have repulsed German attacks directed against Vladislavoff, driven the enemy from the eastern edge of the Rominten forest, and advanced to the north of Lake Raigorod.

Beyond the Vistula our troops continue the offensive without being opposed. Only in the region of Opatow the Austrians attempted to resist us with considerable forces. They were repulsed. Beyond the Opatow River the Austrians hold fortified positions.

In Galicia, on the San River our troops entered the village of Lisko, where fierce fighting took place.

On the rest of the front the situation is virtually unchanged.

The military correspondent of the Novoe Vremya, explaining the changing dispositions of the enemy's forces, says:

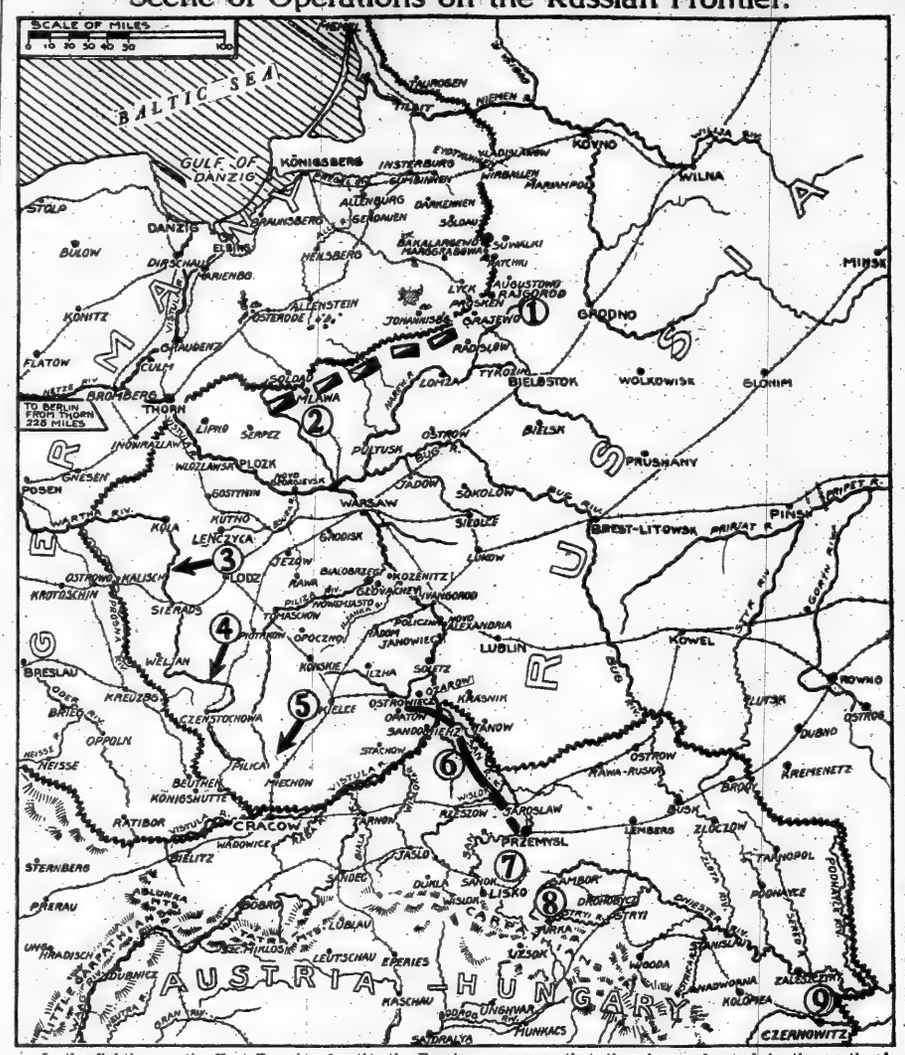
"The Austrians are moving south and southwest toward the west Galician frontier and Cracow, while the Germans, retreating from Warsaw, are falling back west and southwest toward the Silesian frontier.

"As the Russian troops from Warsaw and Novoe Georgievsk follow the Germans, the Russian East Prussian corps is moving in force on the regions northwest of Warsaw, covering Warsaw from the direction of Mlawa and occupying both banks of the Vistula below Warsaw.

"German officers captured near Warsaw state that on account of the impassable condition of the roads the Germans are following the double-tracked railroad from Warsaw to Czenstochowa through Skierniewice and Piotrkow.

"The southern divisions are following the railway lines from Kielce toward Cracow, while the German extreme left, not in actual contact with the centre, but keeping in communication with it by 'flying' cavalry squadrons, is moving west toward Kalisz. This wing constantly is drawing reinforcements from Thorn and Mlawa."

Scene of Operations on the Russian Frontier.



In the fighting on the East Prussian frontier the Russians announce that they have advanced to the north of Lake Raigorod, (1.) The Russian Army operating on this frontier, and indicated by black and white blocks, is also covering Warsaw from the direction of Mlawa. (2.)

Troops from Warsaw and the fortress of Novo Georgievsk are pursuing the left wing of the main German Army, indicated by an arrow marked 3, which is reported to be headed for Kalisz. The centre, (arrow 4,) because of the impassable condition of the roads, is following the railroad from Piotrkow to Czenstochowa, which has been that army's headquarters. The right, or southern, wing of the main army (arrow 5) is retreating down the railroad from Kielce toward Cracow, its base having been Miechow.

In Galicia the Austrian line, indicated by black blocks, (6,) is held in check all along the San River. While the Russians announce that they have captured the village of Lisco, (7,) the Austrians report an important victory in the district between Sambor and Turka, (8.) They also announce that the Russians are bombarding Czenowitz, (9,) the capital of Bukowina, from which they were recently driven.

MAY CUT AUSTRIANS OFF.

Russians in Swift Pursuit of Army —Przemysl Sortie Disastrous.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 3.—The Petrograd correspondent of The Morning Post sends the following:

"According to official news, the Russians are advancing with success along the whole Vistula front. Details are confined to information about that part out of which the Austrians are retreating. The Russians have secured Piotrkow and other places in such positions as to suggest that the Austrian armies run the risk of being cut off from Cracow, their ultimate goal of retreat. A rear-guard defense was attempted at Opatow, but without success, and the Russians took several hundred prisoners and six Maxims with a supply train.

"On the San River, where the fighting has been severe for a fortnight, the Russians adopted the method of deliberately sapping their opponents' trenches, precisely as a besieging force saps its way toward a fortress. This proved an admirable success. When the Russian sap burst into Austrian trenches the men in them were seized with panic and fled precipitately. The Russians, taking advantage of the panic, rushed the fortifications in the neighborhood and took them, capturing five officers, 500 men and all the Maxims.

"An Austrian column which had descended the north slope of the Carpathians in the direction of Nadvorna, where it had intrenched itself, has been attacked and driven back. This operation is removed by more than a hundred miles from the nearest point of the great struggle, and shows that the Austrians, confident of victory under German leaders, sent forces across the Carpathians to catch the Russians in the rear when the proper moment came. Unfortunately the moment failed to arrive, and the local Russian forces, enjoying the entire support of the native inhabitants, seem to find no difficulty in dealing with successive isolated attempts of the considerable Hungarian reserve bodies sent across the Carpathians at various points.

"Persistent rumors still prevail about Przemysl having been taken, but they should be disregarded. What really has happened is that the Russians have captured 4,000 of the garrison, with all their arms and equipment. I am still uninformed on points and detail, but the garrison attempting a sortie in force, the Russians allowed it to proceed until they could cut in behind, when the force was surrounded, and when it found it was impossible to cut a way through either forward or backward it capitulated.

"Whether this force, whose captured remnants after a desperate attempt to cut a way out still numbered 4,000, were Germans or Austrians; whether they were the only sound men left in the fortress, where cholera and typhus are reported to be raging, or whether the attempt was merely a part of the routine of the beleaguered stronghold, it is impossible to affirm.

"The Russian advance into East Prussia appears to be on a thirty-mile line running from Vladislavoff to the great forest of Rominten, which is a day's march away from the scene of the severe fighting already reported as having been in progress for a week. Whether the Russians are advancing on the whole front of thirty miles or, as is more probable, only at some point in that distance not yet clear, what is perfectly plain is that the Germans in East Prussia have had no better fortune than elsewhere and the moment has evidently arrived for the Russians to advance in force into their enemy's country."

GERMANS DRIVEN BACK.

Lose Heavily at Bakalargewo, but Resume Attack.

By PERCEVAL GIBBON.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 2, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—Fighting along the East Prussian front, which began on Oct. 25, developed into an attack of great force by the Germans on the Russian positions west of Suwalki, centring on the big village of Bakalargewo.

The Russians seized the opportunity of German inaction to establish themselves very strongly in Bakalargewo, situated at the southern end of a long, narrow lake in a country dotted with patches of fir wood. The eastern bank of the lake rises steeply, and here the Russian position commands a considerable stretch of country. Behind the frontier is the town of Margrabowo on the railway.

For days past the Germans have been concentrating troops and guns of the largest calibre. The former include many divisions of reserves and a large number of regiments from the Konigsberg garrison.

A feint toward Lyck on the south, where the Russians have taken the German strategic railway, was beaten off with ease. The Germans were under the impression that the Russians were weakened here because of reinforcements they sent to Poland, and their object was to thrust the Russians back from certain points and so enable them to attack the railway line near Margrabowa and cut the Russian line between Sukalki and Augustow.

From Oct. 26 to 30 there continued a tremendous artillery fire across the lake and over the low ground south of the village. The Russian forces on this front include men who were with Gen. Rennenkampff in his advance on and retreat from Insterburg. They are a strong leaven of hardy men, expert in the art of using ground. Their dispositions in a labyrinth of wooded hills and valleys made it impossible for the Germans to ascertain the effect of their own fire.

Many times following observation signals of aeroplanes the direction of their fire was seen to change and ground was often heavily shelled on which there were no Russian troops at all. The Russian aviators explain this by saying that the difficulty was caused by the wet and misty weather, which made it next to impossible to distinguish from a safe altitude between a patch of wood and a body of troops.

Seventy shells from 32-centimetre Krupps fell at a spot over a mile from the nearest Russian battery. Some of them which failed to burst have been sent to Grodno and Vilna and placed on exhibition.

"On Oct. 30 the Germans began to move up and endeavored to assault the Russian positions to the south of the village, but only on Saturday did the attack prove to be of any weight. Snow fell that day, and the cold was intense. The Germans endeavored desperately to reach the Russian trenches, sacrificing men beyond the possibility of counting. Line after line pushed forward in face of a murderous rifle and machine gun fire which often annihilated the whole German attack and left the dead not in heaps, but in long mound like breastworks, which at one point actually impeded the fire from the trenches. The slaughter was indeed colossal. To the west of Bakalargewo alone there were more than 4,000 German dead on the ground. At no point was the Russian line broken.

To the west of the lake the Germans succeeded in intrenching despite the shell fire from across the water. On Saturday afternoon Siberian battalions moved forward from the village to dislodge them. One thing at which the Russians excel is co-operation between the infantry and artillery. This engagement was a magnificent example of the sheer scientific co-ordination of both arms. A storm of shrapnel raked the German trenches for an hour, and when it was seen that the enemy was shaken the Siberians rolled in and drove the Germans back after three terrific bayonet charges.

At this point the German defeat was complete and utter. Many were simply paralyzed with the cold, so that their rifle firing was noticeably feeble. The Siberian losses were slight. The Germans are bringing up reinforcements and the battle continues.

GOT 153,000 IN MAZUR TRAP.

Germans Have 300,000 Prisoners, American Newspaper Man Says.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—David R. McKee, a well-known newspaper man, who for many years was head of the Associated Press Bureau in this city, has just returned from Germany and Austria greatly impressed by the economic strength of Germany, and the ability of the more powerful of the two empires to carry on the war without imposing unusual privations upon the non-combatant population.

"Nowhere in Germany have I, or any of my friends, either seen or heard of any pecuniary privation or distress caused by the war thus far," said he. "Another subject of general observation and comment on the part of Americans in Germany," said Mr. McKee, has been the failure of the public in the United States and Great Britain (owing manifestly to the English news-censorship) to obtain any adequate knowledge of various German victories, especially that of von Hindenberg in East Prussia. It is known in Germany, from official reports, that he captured 93,000 prisoners, and that the Russians lost in addition not fewer than 60,000 men, killed, wounded, and drowned in the Mazur Lakes and swamps.

"At the present time there are not fewer than 300,000 Russians, French, Belgian, and English prisoners confined in prison camps within the boundaries of Germany. One of these camps, containing about 11,000 Russian and 5,000 French prisoners, is only ten or twelve miles from Dresden; and, from a friend of mine connected with the Red Cross work who visited it recently, I learned the following rather interesting bit of information:

"Although the Russian soldiers are required to submit to being bathed twice a week—against which requirement, as an unheard of atrocious cruelty, they protest vociferously—their French brothers in arms have petitioned for and obtained permission to erect an impassable wire barrier between themselves and the Russians, so as to keep the latter at the utmost possible distance—for reasons which need not be more particularly indicated."

READY FOR ANOTHER BATTLE.

Austro-German Armies in Poland to Make Another Stand.

BERLIN, Nov. 2, (by Wireless Telegraph to Sayville, L. I.)—The battle in progress between the Germans and Russians in the Suwalki and Augustowa regions, according to an official announcement issued here today, continues undecided.

"The renewal of the great battle in Poland seems to be impending. It would appear that the Austro-German forces have completed their retirement to new positions. The Russian troops which followed them already are in touch with these new positions, and there have been several encounters in which the Russians were driven back.

"The new dispositions given to the Austro-German forces in Poland evidently have not been followed by the retirement of the Austrian flank in Galicia. Vienna reports a decisive success in Galicia on the extreme southern flank, between Turka and Stari-Sambor. Russians numbering two divisions and a rifle brigade have been driven from a series of fortified positions."

Major Moraht, military correspondent of the Tageblatt, writes as follows:

"Our army in the northeast, in a battle of several days' duration, has maintained its ground. We may hope that it will continue to be able to protect the East Prussian frontier. That is its immediate task; it will have another later."

VIENNA, Nov. 2, (via Amsterdam to London, Nov. 3, 12:15 A. M.)—The following official announcement was made public here tonight:

"The battles in Russian Poland continue. On the River San the Russians have suffered heavy losses, especially near Rosjadow. We captured 400 prisoners and three machine guns.

"South of the Stari-Sambor line we also captured 400 prisoners. We have progressed here and northeast of Turka."

RUSSIAN AMBASSADOR HURT.

Envoy in Auto Smashup While on Way to Pimlico Races.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 2.—The Russian Ambassador at Washington, George Bakhmeteff, was slightly injured here today, while bound for the races at Pimlico, when a taxicab in which he was riding collided with a motor car. The Ambassador was cut about the face by flying glass.

One of the occupants of the other machine was more severely hurt and was taken to a hospital.

(An Associate Editor of The Army and Navy Journal.)

The confidence of the Allies in the strength of their position along the Yser River in Belgium is shown by the length of time that they opposed the Germans along this stream before they turned its waters into the districts prepared for inundation. This use of the river had been planned for years as a method of defense for Belgium against troops invading the country from the west; now it is used for the opposite purpose. If the Allies had feared the German attacks in this district they would have turned loose this flood when they first took up their position along the Yser two weeks ago. Instead of taking this course the Allies reserved this weapon for the time when its use would produce the greatest effects.

The German crossing of the Yser accordingly turned out to be a trap. When the Kaiser's troops had established their hold on the west bank, in spite of great losses in the attack, the Allies turned loose the flood behind them and cut off their retreat. At the same time the Allies' artillery fire operpowered the German forces that were thus isolated and inflicted heavy losses.

The fighting in this field has been a costly one for the Germans. It seems beyond question that their losses must be double those of the Allies. They have pressed their attacks under particularly unfavorable conditions, while their early repulse lost the chance to even the score, that could only come through inflicting a decisive defeat.

The reports of German attacks all along the line in France indicate that they are feeling their way in preparation for a resumption of a strong aggressive move. It is unlikely that they can attempt this with hope of success unless they are able to send to their armies in France reinforcements of at least ten army corps. If they are making such a movement it should be shown not only by increased activities in France, but also by a further retreat of the German and Austrian armies in Poland.

The renewal of the attacks along the centre of the line in France is coincident with the delivery of desperate attacks on the Russian lines on the East Prussian border. The German troops in this region seem to be under orders to make 'every sacrifice' in an effort to decrease the pressure that is being exerted by the Russians in Western Poland.

Along a front of 100 miles on the East Prussian border the Germans are making vigorous efforts to break down the Russian defense. The flat country in which the fighting is taking place is, however, a serious disadvantage for the attacking troops. Their movements are difficult to conceal, and they have trouble in finding shelter from the enemy's fire after they have left their intrenchments. The Germans also are at a disadvantage in that their East Prussian army is largely made up of reserve forces, armed with less efficient rifles and field guns than those of the Russians. The latter in this field are mostly first-line troops, who have rifles and field guns equal to any in the world.

The efforts of the Germans to hold their positions on the East Prussian border are placing their army in this field in a dangerous position. The defeat of their army in Poland has forced it to retreat seventy miles, so that the two portions of the German forces are separated by a hundred miles.

The Russians will undoubtedly keep on pressing their advantage in Poland as long as they can continue to force the Germans back. If this movement should be stopped short of the German border it is probable that the Russians will move a force north in the effort to surround the Germans in East Prussia or force their retreat. A rapid movement to the rear could be made by the Germans under such circumstances only at the expense of large losses in stragglers and with the risk of greater disaster.

The advent of Winter is bringing added hardships upon the troops in this field, and is also introducing a new factor in the fighting in the Eastern theatre. Both East Prussia and Poland are fertile plains, so nearly level that large portions are swampy. The cultivated areas become almost impassable to vehicles after a few rains. The early Winter is now freezing the mud and the swamps so that troops and wagons can travel more readily in all directions. The first effect of freezing weather will then be to facilitate military operations through removing the most serious obstacle with which the transport service has to contend.

Yesterday's news from the battle in Poland shows a further retreat by the Austro-German forces. Their left flank is holding fast on a line running due north from Lodz. To the south, though, they have been driven back to Piotrkow and Opatow. This rapid retreat of the Austrians and Germans has saved them from a decisive defeat, but they are still exposed to a serious reverse, if their plan should miscarry at any point and afford an opening through which the Russians can force their way.

The Czar's forces are now concentrating their main attack northeast of Kielce in an effort to repeat the tactics by which they won important victories over the Austrians in the first days of the war. If the Russians can break through at this point they will be able to turn southward against the rear of the Austrian army in Galicia just as they did two months ago after the great battle at Rawa-Russka.

The fighting in Galicia is, like that of the last two weeks, without important advantage for either side. At Lesaisk, on the San River, and at Turka, on the Stryi, the Austrians have gained slight advantages. The line of battle to the southeast is now more definitely outlined and runs from Turka through Nadworna and Kolomea to the Russian border just east of Czernowitz in Bukowina. The renewal of Russian attacks in this district indicates that they are now beginning to bring up a new levy of reserves.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 2. (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—A number of women coming back wounded or with wounded husbands from the front proves that the contingent of adventurous female warriors who have actually been engaged in fighting in the lines is quite considerable. A Cossack girl went as a trooper with the full knowledge and permission of the immediate authorities, but most of the amazons get there in disguise, many to be near their husbands and some from sheer love of adventure.

The Cossack girl mentioned long distinguished herself in the special martial exercises practiced by the Cossacks, and could beat most men of her age at feats of horsemanship and sword play. Her name is Helen Choba and she belongs to the Kuban Cossacks.

A Colonel's daughter, named Tomiloffskaya, distinguished herself on the East Prussian front in Augustowo by a series of fights. Like all women at the front she donned an ordinary soldier's uniform, which she wore so naturally that she passed quite unnoticed among the men. Those who go with an officer-husband's connivance usually adopt the uniform of an ensign of reserves. Tomiloffskaya was hit on three occasions, but her wounds being slight she remained on duty.

She once was for five days under fire with men, but specially distinguished herself as a scout leader in Augustowo Woods, where she had a squad of men under her own command. Her special piece of service here was intercepting a telegram from a German commander, whence it was ascertained that the German intention was to attack the Russian centre, and of course it was foiled.

Tomiloffskaya has also served as scout orderly and telephonist. She says the stories of German excesses are only too true and that she herself saw a German cleave the head of a Russian officer lying helpless on the ground. The man was shortly after shot by advancing Russians. Tomiloffskaya, who is only 21, comes from Minsk.

The wife of a Captain, a native of Moscow, whose initials alone are given, she fought her way through the Galician campaign with her husband. She possessed herself of an Austrian horse, sword, and revolver, and was present at all the fights in Galicia, being sometimes ten days under artillery and rifle fire without being injured. A fortnight ago, however, her regiment was near Kozenitze when her husband was wounded in the wrist. She was in another part of the fight, and only learned of this later.

Both are now in Moscow. Her usual employment during the campaign was to write reports and buy comforts for the men, and she once rode fifty miles to get some tobacco for her husband's company. She declares her intention of returning with her husband to the war as soon as he recovers from his wounds.

Three peasant girls waited on the commandant of Kiev with a demand to be sent to the front as soldiers. They had cut their hair and assumed soldiers' uniforms.

The general rule is for the girls to get away secretly with the connivance of friends among the soldiers going to the front, but many start alone on various pretexts, such as seeking an alleged fiancé or wounded brother, and they only don male attire when they have reached their goal.

SERVIANS IN HOT FIGHTS.

Vienna and Nish Both Claim Victories—Violent Bayonet Charges.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Amsterdam gives the following official Austrian dispatch received there from Vienna:

"The Austrians on Saturday successfully attacked a strong fortified Servian position near Rovrye. Our troops crossed the Save and Drina Rivers, which were obstinately defended by Servians, and occupied Ornabaro, Banovopolje, Rademkone, Gluosi, and Tabanovnio."

A dispatch from Nish, dated Oct. 31, contains the following semi-official note:

"The enemy operating Oct. 29 in the direction of Gutchevo bombarded our positions at Eminova and Banja from 7 o'clock in the morning until noon. At this hour they attacked but were repulsed by our troops. Our counter-attack developed into violent bayonet combats in which the enemy, suffering heavy losses, was forced to fall back in disorder, leaving three officers and about 300 men in the field.

"The enemy delivered another attack on our positions in the evening, but was again forced to retire with heavy loss.

"Nothing of importance has occurred on the remainder of the front."

Visiting New York's Institutions

LOOKING backward three hundred years, the tenacity of some New York houses in CONSISTENTLY FOLLOWING OUT ONE IDEA has been responsible for not a few historical successes.

Eighteen years back, this house was founded—WITH ONE CONTROLLING IDEA:

To give New York men haberdashery WHICH EXACTLY SUITED THEIR REQUIREMENTS.

This meant in style and in value.

Something MORE than they had ever had before.

The result—Weber and Heilbroner's haberdashery business has become the largest in America—an INSTITUTION peculiar to New York and worthy of a visit, whether you buy or merely look.

When that field was occupied, men's ready-to-wear clothing appeared in the Weber and Heilbroner stores.

There was ONE CENTRAL IDEA back of these clothes:

To furnish clothes MADE EXPRESSLY for the New Yorker, closely duplicating the product of well-known, fashionable tailors of this city.

Already this clothing has become an INSTITUTION—$20 to $45 for suits, and $20 to $50 for overcoats.

DR. ADAMS THINKS ITALY WILL FIGHT

Yale Professor Regards Her Army as Second Only to England's.

SAYS GERMANS MENACE US

"Our Turn Would Be Next if Germany Were Successful"—Long Hatred for England.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Prof. George Burton Adams, Professor of History in Yale University and a Ph. D. of the University of Leipsic, has just returned to England after a stay of several months in Italy. He is inclined to believe that the Germans have already spent their strength in two great attempts—one in the east and the other in the west—to crush the Allies, and have failed in both. He says that, judging from his information from all available sources, he believes there are not enough soldiers in Germany to strengthen either army sufficiently to bring about a decision in the Kaiser's favor.

This, he maintains, places Italy in such a position that if she enters the war now on the Allies' side, she will be a deciding factor; and, as Turkey has chosen to become embroiled, he will be little surprised if Italy soon joins the Allies.

Prof. Adams said:

"Italy can place a fine body of troops in the field. From what I could learn she would be able to supply fully 3,000,000 men. The Italian Army next to that of England, is the finest body of men I have seen in Europe. The officers are alert and keen, and the men are a fine-appearing lot. The Italians are overwhelmingly in favor of the Allies; in fact, there seem to be only two positions considered by Italians—either that of remaining neutral or fighting against Germany and Austria. There would be a revolution in Italy, I believe, from what I was told, if the Government should attempt to fight on the side of Austria. Now that Turkey has stepped in, I think it likely that Italy will not long remain out of the fighting. Germany represents in Government and institutions an obsolescent system, away from which the world has been advancing for generations."

If Germany should become the dominant power of the world, Prof. Adams asserted, history would be turning back upon itself. England would probably lose all her African possessions, and in the not distant future would have to join again with other nations in a war against Germany.

"Germany," he said, "must be defeated in this war. If it comes to a point where it is necessary for the United States to aid the Allies to the end that they should win, then I hope it will be done. She is opposed to everything for which we stand, and our turn would be next if Germany were successful.

"Thirty years ago I spent twelve months in Germany. I was profoundly impressed then with the hatred expressed for the British. Germany was then fired with the desire for a predominant place as a world empire. When I asked Germans how they would accomplish their desires they told me that the English had won their empire by conquest, and that through conquest it could be broken up. It was not until the Boer War that England realized Germany's attitude. In the Spanish War we began to be classed in German feeling with England, and we realized at Manila Bay her feeling toward us. Germany saw the islands she wanted being taken from her grasp. The longer Germany waited the more remote she saw her chances become of achieving her ambitions.

"I believe, if the truth were known, that Germany was back of the demands of Austria upon Servia. She had seen the Balkan peoples solving their own problem in a way which interfered with her ambitions and those of Austria in the eastern Mediterranean. Hence the war."

Prof. Adams does not foresee a Germany divided into small States if she is beaten, but he does see an end to military despotism. America, he thinks, should place herself strongly on the side of disarmament in the congress to follow the war, which will not improbably be held in Washington.

ENGLISH GOLD VANISHING.

Shrinkage of Supply Despite Imports Causes Comment.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—In a news item headed "Missing Gold" The London Daily Mail this morning says: "A distinct shrinkage is visible in the amount of traceable gold in England. It is suggested that a great deal of the missing gold is in the hands of the Germans, or has been smuggled abroad by the Germans or by neutrals in the employ of the Germans."

Continuing the article says: "During the last three months the net receipts of gold from abroad have amounted to more than 30,000,000 pounds sterling and Treasury notes equivalent to another 30,000,000 pounds also have been issued, but the stock of gold in the Bank of England has not increased by more than the amount received from abroad. Hence the belief that gold is to some extent being hoarded and that our enemies are operating against us in the manner indicated."

Inquiries by THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent in financial circles failed to confirm such an opinion. It seemed to be the consensus that since the beginning of the war there had been some hoarding of gold, perhaps more in Scotland than anywhere else, and that a few Germans, returning to their Fatherland, were taking back small amounts of gold, but it is held that this is negligible in view of the heavy gold imports. In fact, in certain circles the opinion prevails that England is gathering in gold at too rapid a rate. Whether this is being hoarded in England is a difficult matter to form any accurate judgment upon, as the only way of measuring such hoarding is by deposits and withdrawals at the Bank of England. The unusual circumstances prevent normal deductions being made from such statistics. For instance, the joint stock banks are keeping more gold on hand than in ordinary times, so as to be prepared to meet any small run which local conditions might bring about. Also the troops all over England are being paid weekly in silver. So on the whole financiers are far from being alarmed over the present gold situation.

MAY RUN GAUNTLET OF JAPANESE SHIPS

German Cruiser Geier Must Now Face Two Foes or be Interned at Honolulu.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—It is believed the repairs on the German cruiser Geier at Honolulu have now progressed to such a point that the commander of the ship must elect to run the gauntlet of the two Japanese cruisers lying outside the harbor, or apply to the port authorities to have his ship interned until the end of the war.

A conference which took place last night in Honolulu between the port officials and the Japanese Consul is supposed to have had some bearing on this subject, although no report upon it has yet reached the Japanese Embassy here.

In reply to a suggestion that, as in the case of the British cruisers which were hovering off Sandy Hook recently, the Japanese Government might be requested to remove these vessels from the vicinity of Honolulu, it was pointed out by some of the officials today that the conditions were materially different.

In the case of the British cruisers, their presence was said to be embarrassing to American ship masters, whose vessels were being signaled and detained. The Japanese cruisers off Honolulu are not interfering with American shipping or with any mercantile vessels, out are simply waiting to do battle with an enemy's warship. Their position is said to be precisely like that occupied by the U. S. S. Kearsarge, which waited outside the French harbor at Cherbourg until by the laws of neutrality the Confederate cruiser Alabama was forced to go out and meet her end.

HONOLULU, Nov. 2.—A midnight conference was held between Collector of the Port Franklin, Deputy Collector Sharp and the Japanese Consul here last night, and wireless messages were exchanged with the United States revenue cutter Thetis, patrolling outside the harbor.

THE PLATURIA RELEASED.

Oil Ship on Her Way—Turpentine and Resin on Free List.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Formal notification that the British had released the Standard Oil steamer Platuria, recently detained at Stornaway, Scotland, was conveyed to the State Department this morning by Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador. The Ambassador's advices said the Platuria had proceeded on her way to Copenhagen on assurances from the Danish Government that the cargo of oil would not be reshipped into Germany.

At the same time the Ambassador gave the welcome information that his Government had stricken turpentine and resin from the list of contraband articles. This news will be particularly pleasing to the South, as those articles will now be in the same category as cotton, which already has the freedom of the ocean highways.

The State Department is still awaiting a formal response to its protest against the seizure of the American ship Kroonland at Gibraltar. A dispatch from American Consul Sprague at Gibraltar has told the department without explanation that the ship's cargo was already being unloaded, and that prize court proceeding has begun. Nothing was said about the neutral passengers on board, but the assumption is that, with the cargo ashore and German passengers imprisoned, the ship may be allowed to proceed with her neutral passengers to destinations in Italy and Greece.

Great Britain has proposed that American ships bound for Northern European ports touch at some convenient Scotch port and submit to examination of their cargoes by British authorities, receiving certificates which will relieve them of further search. The State Department has not accepted the proposal, and indications are it will be made the basis of a protest. Officials expect, however, that some amicable arrangement can be reached to relive American ships from the burden of search and detention when they have no contraband on board.

REPORTS CHEER BERLIN.

Success on the Aisne Is Regarded as Most Favorable News.

BERLIN, Nov. 2, (By Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—Information, given out today for the press in official quarters, is as follows:

"The progress of the fighting on the front in the north of France is regarded here as highly favorable.

"The report given out yesterday, with its news that the French had been thrown back across the Aisne at a point near Soissons, and that the operations had already been extended to the west front of Verdun, is regarded as the most favorable issued for some time.

"Letters from the front, reaching Berlin, describe the fighting between Nieuport and Ypres as probably the fiercest of the whole war.

"The Germans forced their way southward by repeated night attacks. The toll of death was great on both sides."

KARLSRUHE SEIZES BIG NEW YORK LINER

PASSENGERS LAND IN BRAZIL

Vast Quantity of Frozen Meat, Coffee, and Coal in Her Hold—Two Other British Ships Taken.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A dispatch to Lloyd's Shipping Agency from Para, Brazil, says the German steamer Asuncion has landed there the passengers and crews of the British steamers Vandyck, Hurstdale, and Glanton, which were captured by the German cruiser Karlsruhe in latitude 1 south, longitude 40 west.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 2.—A private cable to a local firm received today from Para, Brazil, reports the destruction of the British steamship Vandyck by a German Cruiser. H. D. Haight, Boston, and Delgado of Rochester were on board, but were put ashore with other passengers before the Vandyck was sent to the bottom. The Vandyck plied between Buenos Aires and New York. The representatives of the local firm boarded her on Oct. 21.

The first news of the capture of the Vandyck was received in New York yesterday afternoon by Busk & Daniels, agents of the Lamport & Holt Line, in a cablegram sent by Capt. Anthony Cadogan from Para, advising them that the vessel had been captured by the Karlsruhe on Oct. 26. The dispatch said the passengers and crew of the Vandyck were all well, and had been landed yesterday at Para by a German steamship. Capt. Cadogan did not state whether the Vandyck had been sunk or not. She had about 3,000 tons of frozen beef on board from Buenos Aires and about the same quantity of coffee from Santos. The ship and cargo were estimated to be worth about $2,000,000, the agents said.

It is believed that the Karlsruhe put a prize crew on the Vandyck and is convoying her around to be used as a storeship, as she has about 3,000 tons of coal in her bunkers, which would be too useful to the German warship to destroy. When the Karlsruhe captured the Indian Prince on Sept. 12 off Para her Captain was ordered to steer after the German cruiser for five days and then her crew took off the stores and coal before she was sunk.

Directly after the report of the capture of the Vandyck was posted at the New York Maritime Exchange the agents of the Booth and other steamship lines whose vessels sail to South America, under the British flag called on the Consul General to see what was best to be done for the protection of their ships. The Consul informed them that the only guaranteed safe passage was from New York as far south as Trinidad. The Lamport & Holt Line suspended the sailing of its V class ships when the war commenced. On Oct. 12 they received a cablegram from the head office in Liverpool that it was safe to resume the passenger service, and this was done. It was assumed by the agents in New York that the Directors had some assurance from the British Government that the route from New York to Buenos Aires was safe from risk of capture by the German cruisers.

The effect of the capture of the Vandyck, the finest ship in the trade, it is said, will be to stop all services under the British flag from the United States to South American ports. The Royal Mail Steam Packet Company has been operating its fortnightly service from Liverpool to Buenos Aires without interruption, and the Amazon sails from Liverpool tomorrow with Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, and the members of the National City Bank staff who are going to open branches at Rio Janeiro, Buenos Aires, and other cities in South America.

The Vandyck was built three years ago for the South American trade, and was about 11,000 gross tonnage. She was fitted with the latest appliances and equipments for the safety and comfort of her passengers, and accommodated 250 passengers in her first cabin and 150 in the second cabin. Theodore Roosevelt traveled on the Vandyck to Buenos Aires in October, 1913, with his expedition to South America, and gave Capt. Cadogan a testimonial letter on his arrival saying how he had enjoyed the trip.

'BOBS' IN PRAISE OF GERMAN TROOPS

Lord Roberts Says They Fight Well, but Underestimated the British.

ENGLISH BETTER SHOTS

Germans Fire Toward the Enemy; English Pick Out a Target Before They Shoot.

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Flying about London, from the War Office to the Foreign Office, to the Home Office to the National Service League headquarters, to recruiting and concentration camps from one end of the nation to the other, passing out words of encouragement and optimism to soldiers in the making and giving sage and sound advice to those in power, who listen profoundly to what he says, there is a little man clad in a black morning coat, his hair and mustache white with age, but with a figure erect and soldierly—a man whose energy is one of the marvelous things the war has produced. He is Field Marshal Lord Roberts, the Little Bobs" of India and South Africa, the hero of the march to Kandahar, the leader of England's victorious army which fought the Boers.

Lord Roberts is 82 years old, but more active than many a soldier many years his junior. Not one of the military virtues acquired during sixty years of being a soldier has been lessened by advancing years, and the wisdom of all his campaigns is now proving of vast use to his country, while his confident optimism and the magic of his name has done a world of good. He is forever at it—this pounding home that England will win this war. He will countenance no other solution, will not even discuss it, and there is no reason to believe that even in his innermost mind the thought of German victory ever passes. In an interview with him, one of the few his aids say he has given, I ventured to try a question which started like this:

"Suppose that Germany wins"—

Lord Roberts permitted the question to go no further. He bristled and belligerently declared: "I will not suppose anything of the sort." That epitomizes the whole attitude of the man.

His interest in the private soldier is keen, and he is forever looking after his wants. One of the finest things he has done was to issue, through his National Service League, the organization he formed to spread military training, a booklet containing a number of marching songs. A hundred thousands copies will be sent to France next week.

Word of Praise for Germans.

It was characteristic of Lord Roberts to say a favorable word for the efficiency of the Germans when I asked him his opinion of the fighting in France. His patriotism does not let his judgment of a soldier become warped as it does that of many laymen. He said:

"The German troops have fought uncommonly well and have shown splendid organization, and have particularly demonstrated that they are well staffed. But there is every evidence that the Germans have underestimated our strength and power. Most of all, they have underestimated our 'empire power.' They thought that Ireland would not rally to the imperial cause, and they believed the same of India. Events have showed how vastly mistaken they were, for today the empire means unity of thought and purpose. They underestimated, too, the fighting value of the British Army. They thought it small and of not much importance, but now they have learned otherwise. But it is our empire power that they misjudged the most.

"Lord Cromer puts it rightly when he says that posterity will be amazed at the singular ineptitude of German policy and diplomacy and that the Germans have been wrong in everything—wrong in the probable action of Russia, England, Belgium, and Japan; wrong as to the value attached to the Italian alliance, wrong about the feeling of America, wrong as to the sentiment of the people both in South Africa and India, wrong as to the effect of the declaration of war in Egypt and Moslem countries. Indeed, Germany has misjudged and miscalculated."

Troops Show Great Improvement.

"Since the Boer war, the lessons of which were well learned by the army, our troops have shown vast improvement. The organization is better, the shooting is infinitely superior. When I went to Germany to attend manoeuvres of the German Army I noticed the close formations, and I thought then that, were we ever to engage in war with Germany, that formation would be to our advantage. And so it has proved. Our troops employ an extended order in battle, and with their good marksmanship they are able to stop these close-formed bodies of Germans, despite their superior numbers. A British soldier always shoots at something, he is trained to find a target before he pulls the trigger, and that accounts for the heavy German losses. The German, on the other hand, does not take the same care in firing; he is not trained to do so, and, as compared to our men, is not a good marksman. He fires in the general direction of the enemy, sending a rain of lead. For that reason, and the fact that our troops are in more extended and open formation, our losses are far less proportionately than those of the enemy."

POOH-POOHS INVASION TALK.

British War Office Reassures a Timid South Coast Resident.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A resident of Eastbourne, who wrote to the War Office inquiring as to the proper conduct of noncombatants in the event of an attempted invasion of England, has received a reply which says:

"There is nothing in the present situation which would warrant the assumption that an invasion is probable or imminent. The various defensive works constructed in the United Kingdom are only the normal precautions taken by every maritime power in time of war. In the event of the enemy attempting to invade this country instructions will be issued by the proper authority."

BELGIANS' ONE HOPE IS AMERICAN AID

Their Country's Food Supply Commandeered by Contending Armies.

FOUR-FIFTHS OF THEM IDLE

Even Those with Money Are Hungry—Postal Communication Only with Germany.

BRUSSELS, (Via London) Nov. 2.—Between six and seven million Belgians have little or nothing to call "home." They are a people almost without a country. Foodstuffs, forage, horses, cattle and automobiles not commandeered by the Belgian Army when the war broke out have been seized by the Germans. Practically every acre is now swept of everything valuable.

It is estimated that there are now 200,000 Belgians in England and 800,000 in Holland. The lowest estimate made here places the number of Belgian homes destroyed or so badly damaged as to be uninhabitable at 1,000,000. Malines, Louvain, Liége, Namur, Charleroi, Mons, Dinant and a score of smaller places have been so shattered by the artillery fire of the opposing armies that less than half of the normal population is decently sheltered.

A report from Limbourg says that the supplies for the breadline have been exhausted and the feeding can be resumed only when American food arrive.

The seizure of cattle for the armies has left the country without beef, milk and cheese. The supply of grain ordinarily imported from the United States and Canada has been cut off. For several weeks Flanders was able to help the eastern portion, but now that the lowlands have become the scene of fighting, Bruges, Ghent, Antwerp and Ostend are suffering the same distress which earlier befell the eastern part of the country.

At Liége, the Pittsburgh of Belgium, the steel industry has been brought to a standstill. At Antwerp, the New York of the Belgians, all shipping has stopped. Hundreds of big steamers lie idle at the docks along the Scheldt. Thousands of freight trucks are rusting beside the canals, while the horses are dead in Flemish trenches. The drivers and freight handlers are in hospitals or with King Albert's army.

Nieuport and Ostend, the latter suggesting Atlantic City to an American, are occupied by the Germans, and the hotels are filled with German wounded. A row of hotels along the beach at the resort fly the Red Cross flag.

Brussels, the deserted capital, has been spared destruction, but its industries are shut down. Lace workers are being fed at soup kitchens. The stores have no food to sell, and the public has no money to buy if opportunity offered. Members of noble families have discharged their servants and joined the breadline.

The fear is commonly expressed that the city, with its famous buildings, will be destroyed either by attack or by the Germans themselves should they be compelled to retire. Everywhere one hears stories of buildings having been mined with a view to blowing them up in the event that the city cannot be held.

German money is in general use. Military proclamations in all the shop windows announce that the mark, approximately 25 cents, must be accepted. Brussels has no postal communication except with Germany. Everything is censored. No railways are being operated in Central Belgium. Most of the lines are without bridges. The canals are the only avenues for the shipment of freight.

It is estimated by Belgians here that one-fifth of the Belgians remaining in the country have employment of some sort. These include farm owners and lessees. The beet crop has been ruined by the armies, and the beet sugar factories are closed. There are no horses or other equipment for harvesting, or trains to move the small amount of beets that have survived the devastation of war, and few able-bodied men to assist the brave women who are endeavoring to ward off starvation by gathering what little remains of the crops in the field.

Antwerp's diamond cutters are all in the army. Malines' tapestry factories are in ruins. Many cotton mills are in ashes, and those that still stand are closed. All universities and schools have been abandoned. Nearly all the physicians are at the front serving in the hospitals. Hundreds of priests and nuns are caring for the sick and wounded. Few churches are fit for occupancy as hospitals or otherwise. The convents have been necessarily deserted by the sisters. Many are so badly wrecked that they could afford no shelter.

The canals leading from Belgium to Holland and the one railway line between Antwerp and Rosendaal constitute Belgium's only communication with neutral territory. There are no mails or telegraphic service to Dutch territory. The disheartened Belgians are unable to communicate with their relatives, whether they are refugees in Holland or soldiers on the battle line. Their isolation is almost complete.

his favor, but that otherwise the armed struggle would continue. Voices from the crowd below demanded that Carranza remain in power.

THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent afterward asked Gen. Carranza for a statement in the designation of Gen. Guiterrez as Provisional President. He said he would reiterate as a statement what he had just said from the balcony of the City Hall.

A banquet was given in Puebla tonight in honor of Carranza, who may stay in that city until Wednesday.

Officials here are unwilling to be quoted on the designation of Gutierrez as Provisional President, but they point out that the action of the convention is not final and may be ratified or reversed on Nov. 20, when it is expected that duly accredited Zapatista delegates will take part in the deliberations and voting of the Assembly. The Zapatista representatives now at Aguascalientes are there only in an advisory and consultative capacity. It is further pointed out that Carranza has declared that he will resist any defection from the Constitutionalist cause with the same firmness as that with which he resisted the usurpation of Victoriano Huerta.

Among the public the news of the Gutierrez designation excited slender interest, as the Commemoration of All Souls today drew almost the entire population of the capital to the cemeteries.

El Democrata, commenting editorially on the election of Gen. Gutierres as Provisional President, says that if First Chief Carranza, considering the conditions laid down by him as fulfilled, declines to resign, it is the duty of his followers also to make way for others, adding:

"We shall place our positions and our means at the disposal of those who shall take charge of the national destinies, and if it is thought desirable that some of us, few or many, should not only retire from public life, but should also leave the country, we ought, whoever we may be, to comply with such desires, though we may have to endure bitter sufferings in exile. If we cannot help in any other way, let that be our contribution to the general welfare."

Puebla telegrams say that Gen. Carranza arrived there late today, having spent the night at Tlaxcala. He was welcomed at the railroad station by Gen Coss, Military Governor of Puebla, and other local authorities, and a considerable concourse of people. An open-air band concert in Carranza's honor was given tonight.

CARRANZA WARNED TO YIELD.

No Vera Cruz Evacuation Without Guarantees, This Government Wires.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Until the American Government receives the guarantees it has demanded respecting Vera Cruz, the soldiers and marines under command of Gen. Funston will not be withdrawn from that Mexican port. This was the tenor of a sharp message sent to Gen. Carranza today by the American Government.

The guarantees that the United States want are: First, that amnesty shall be granted to the Mexicans who have held office under the American administration at Vera Cruz, and second, that there shall be no duplication in the collection of customs and municipal taxes at Vera Cruz.

Guarantees of this nature were given to John R. Silliman, President Wilson's special representative in Mexico, by Gen. Candido Aguilar, the Mexican Constitutionalist officer who has been waiting outside of Vera Cruz more than a month to take over Vera Cruz from Gen. Funston. The American Government has been waiting for Gen. Carranza to indorse the action of Gen. Aguilar. Gen. Carranza is willing to give verbal assurances, it is explained, but not to put the guarantee in writing, for fear of creating a precedent inimical to the sovereignty of his country.

The Mexican Constitutional Agency here today received from Gen. Carranza a positive statement that his resignation had not yet been submitted to the convention at Aguascalientes. There appears to be little doubt, however, that the convention has taken action tantamount to the acceptance of his resignation. Carranza made it plain that he merely had agreed to tender his resignation on condition that both Villa and Zapata retire to private life along with himself, and that he insisted upon these conditions being met before he actually resigned.

VILLA FORCE DEFEATED.

Battle Fought Near Parral, with Carranza Army Victorious.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Nov. 2.—The Carranza forces commanded by Generals Maclovio and Luis Herrera defeated a strong Villa force near Parral, Mexico, today, according to an official statement received at Constitutionalist headquarters here.

Gen. Ignacio Pesqueira was quoted to the effect that he had been advised that the Villa forces "lost a considerable number of men and rifles and a quantity of ammunition."

PLAN CO-OPERATION IN BELGIAN RELIEF

Minister Havenith and R. W. de Forest Discuss Rockefeller Foundation's Aid.

SUPPLY COMMITTEE NAMED

T. F. Ryan and H. W. de Forest to Buy and Ship Goods with All Funds Available.

Emmanuel Havenith, Belgian Minister to the United States, held a long conference here yesterday with Robert W. de Forest, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Belgian Relief Fund, in regard to co-operation between the Belgian Relief Committee and the Rockefeller Foundation, which announced on Sunday that it was prepared to spend millions of dollars for the relief of suffering non-combatants in the war zone. After the conference Mr. de Forest said:

"Several points should be emphasized in relation to quick relief for the starving Belgians. The munificent gift of the Rockefeller Foundation, and whatever else may follow from that source, cannot possibly supply the need. All the money that America can contribute will be necessary. The action of the Rockefeller Foundation was on its own initiative, but there is complete co-operation between it and the New York Committee. Tomorrow's shipment of the Rockefeller Foundation, in fact, was arranged by Lionel Hagenaers, a member of the Belgian Relief Committee.

"Complete international co-operation has been arranged for the relief of Belgians in Belgium. The New York Committee is working in close co-operation with Mr. Havenith, Belgian Minister, and with the American Committee in London, in which our Ambassador in London, Mr. Page; our Minister in Belgian, Brand Whitlock, and our Minister at The Hague, Dr. Henry van Dyke, are members, and of which Herbert Hoover is Chairman. The Belgians need food supplies, and they must be obtained in large part from America.

Plan of Co-operation.

"The form of co-operation arranged in consultation with Mr. Havenith is as follows: All American contributions for the immediate relief of Belgians in Belgium, whether received by the Belgian Minister or the New York Committee, or any other Belgian Relief Committee, so far as the Belgian Minister and the New York Committee can control the same, will be placed in the hands of a supply committee, consisting of Thomas F. Ryan and Henry W. de Forest. This supply committee will purchase supplies and forward them direct by the steamer load as soon as they have sufficient amounts from time to time to make up a cargo.

"The New York Committee, as was announced on Friday, has already arranged with the London Committee, each committee appropriating $150,000 to send off a cargo. The supplies so sent will be sent to and distributed by the American London Committee, as announced to the press by Mr. Hoover.

"There are undoubtedly many committees organized and organizing in different parts of the country for Belgian relief. It is earnestly requested that these committees forward the amounts collected by them as promptly as possible and they will be applied in the same way, whether received by the Belgian Minister at Washington or by the New York Committee."

The Rev. J. F. Stillemans, President of the Belgian Relief Committee, praised the work undertaken by the Rockefeller Foundation.

"While the whole of America applauds the action of Mr. Rockefeller, and I as President of the Belgian Relief Committee and of Belgian birth, cannot fail to feel the deepest gratitude toward our noble benefactor," he said. "I deem it my duty to tell the American people at large that they should not think that henceforth there is no need in Belgium. The need in Belgium is beyond description. People are starving and will starve unless every effort to relieve them is put to work. The Belgian Relief Committee hopes that no one will say that Belgium is now sufficiently taken care of. On the contrary, a great example has been set, and that every one will imitate it according to his means. We hope that the daily receipts of our committee will show a marked increase. We make this appeal to every man, woman, and child in the United States."

Ambassador Page's Appeal.

Oct. 31 you first asked me what you could do for relief of starving Belgian women and children in Belgium. Three million of them are now practically without food. No food can be bought anywhere in Europe. England forbids export of food. All must come from America. The amount required is $5,000,000 worth a month throughout the Winter. An appeal for this is made to all neutral peoples.

The International Commission for Relief is under practical American management here. They have organized committees in Holland and Belgium under diplomatic arrangements made by Governments of United States, Spain, Holland, and Belgium, and have secured guarantee of safety from German military authorities and made a perfect system for distribution by Belgians in every neighborhood in Belgium. This does not call for the sending of money to England. It calls only for food to be sent to starving women and children in Belgium, and this is the only channel.

I hope you are in position to buy and ship immediately a boatload of food to American Consul in Rotterdam under a neutral flag. He is the local agent of the commission to whom consignments are shipped. I hope the Committee of Mercy will do our country the honor to send a cargo of food quickly to the worst-stricken 3,000,000 women and children in the whole world who are now suffering actual hunger. Cable answer.

AMERICAN AMBASSADOR, London.

Henry Clews, Treasurer of the Belgian Dollar Christmas Fund, said:

"The support of the Rockefeller Foundation should serve not as a plea to any one to tighten his purse strings but rather as an example and stimulus to noble giving. The Dollar Christmas Fund, of which I am Treasurer, seeks to help all stricken Belgians, and all donations intrusted to that fund will be cabled to relief headquarters before Christmas Day. By co-operating with the Shilling Christmas Fund in London, which has already collected $250,000 and which is well organized to distribute relief, we hope to make Christmas less lonely and less sad for thousands and thousands. I venture therefore with great earnestness to renew my appeal to send along a dollar—and more if you can."

At the Consulate Generals of Great Britain, France, Germany, Russia, Belgium, and Austria-Hungary the relief work of the Foundation was praised but no formal statements were issued.

At the offices of the foundation, 26 Broadway, it was stated that the steamship Massapequa, which is to leave here today with $275,000 worth of bacon, beans, rice, and flour for the Belgian sufferers, would deliver her cargo to the American Consul in Rotterdam. There was nothing further to be added to the statement issued by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., on Sunday.

ERNEST BICKNELL APPOINTED.

Rockefeller Commission to Sail for Europe Saturday.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Ernest Bicknell, Director of the American Red Cross, has been appointed a member of the Rockefeller Foundation Commission to investigate conditions in Belgium and determine upon relief measures. This was announced tonight by Wickliffe Rose, Chairman of the commission.

"Mr. Bicknell," said Mr. Rose, "is the Red Cross contribution to the movement."

The commission will sail for Europe Saturday if it can be organized by that time. Other members will be named immediately.

President Wilson and diplomatic representatives of the belligerent powers of Europe expressed great pleasure at the far-reaching Foundation's plan. While the President made no formal comment, he authorized the statement from the White House that he was highly gratified. The American Government, it was said today, would do everything in its power to facilitate the work of relief.

PRAISES ROCKEFELLER OFFER

But Belgian Relief Commission Says It Needs General Contributions.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The members of the American Commission for Relief in Belgium expressed great gratification over the magnificent support promised by the Rockefeller Foundation. The commission has made arrangements to discharge the cargo of the Massapequa on the arrival of the relief ship at Rotterdam and for the distribution of the foodstuffs in Belgium. They will be taken from Rotterdam on the commission's barges, which will be protected by all the Governments concerned.

The commission today pointed out, however, that when Ambassador Page communicated with the Rockefeller Foundation conditions in Belgium had not been fully investigated. It was formerly believed that $1,000,000 a month would be sufficient. Complete investigation shows, it is said, that $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 monthly will be the minimum amount required. Consequently the commission feels that general American support will be necessary, as even the Rockefeller Foundation Fund will be inadequate.

The commission is now on an international basis. The Spanish Government has instituted a relief fund in Spain to be administered by the London committee. Other Governments have signified their intention to concentrate the food relief for Belgium in the neutral committee.

Minister Whitlock's Appeal.

The commission today received the following statement from Brand Whitlock, American Minister at Brussels:

"The civil population of Belgium, already in misery, is faced with starvation. In normal times Belgium produces only one-sixth of the foodstuffs consumed. Within two weeks there will be no more food in Belgium. Winter is coming, and thousands are without homes or hope. Therefore it is now necessary to expand the relief work to the whole of Belgium. We have secured from the German military authorities assurances that all foodstuffs taken into Belgium by the commission for the civil population will be respected by the soldiery and not made the object of military requisition.

"Not money, but food, is needed. If means can be found to call the attention of the American people to the plight of the poor Belgians I am sure they will send succor and relief. It seems to me to be a work of mercy that will touch the hearts of those brought to understand. It will give our people in the United States an opportunity to serve nobly in a high cause."

First Cargo of Food Unloaded.

ROTTERDRAM, (via London,) Nov. 2.—The unloading of the steamer Coblenz, which reached here from England Saturday night with 1,000 tons of foodstuffs sent by the American Commission for the relief of the people of Belgium, began immediately after her arrival, and continued throughout Saturday night and Sunday at high pressure. The cargo was promptly transferred to river and canal vessels which last night started on their way to Belgium.

The Brussels correspondent of the Rotterdam Courant, writing regarding the need of foodstuffs, says:

"Lines form in front of the bakers' shops before daybreak and a large number daily are unable to obtain any of the hard, brown bread which is the only kind now baked. The flour supply is being husbanded to the utmost in order that it may last until the American supplies arrive. The American Consul expects these within two or three days."

GIFTS TO THE RELIEF FUNDS.

$11,661 More Received for Belgians —Mrs. Reid Pays for Nurses.

Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, widow of the former Ambassador to Great Britain, has informed the Red Cross that she will pay the salaries of six Red Cross nurses now serving with the British forces as long as the present war lasts. Yesterday she sent a check for $360 for the salaries of the nurses for the first month under her agreement. This act on the part of Mrs. Reid makes it possible for the Red Cross to send twelve instead of six additional nurses to the American Hospital in Paignton, England.

Contributions to the Red Cross fund received in this city yesterday amounted to $6,772, which brought the New York total of the National Red Cross European fund to $523,796.87. Contributions to the fund should be sent to Jacob H. Schiff, Treasurer, 52 William Street or 130 East Twenty-second Street. Yesterday's contributions (cents omitted) were:

London Embassy Sends an Agent in Behalf of Captives.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Chandler Anderson, formerly Special Counsel for the United States Department of State, now attached to the American Embassy, goes to Berlin tomorrow for the purpose of discussing with the Berlin authorities arrangements for the treatment of British prisoners there as well as German prisoners here and elsewhere. It has been found necessary to obtain some working arrangement which includes all countries as to treatment of prisoners. It is becoming a problem of vast importance.

Official advices show that Germany now has 250,000 prisoners, including many thousand civilians arrested in Belgium and France as the German army advanced, and taken back to Germany in order to prevent their participation in the war. France has more than 100,000, including civilians and soldiers, England detains 20,000 civilians and several thousand soldiers.

These numbers naturally will grow as the war proceeds.

Mr. Anderson has been discussing the matter with the British Government, and carries its views to Berlin. He hopes to return from Germany with some definite proposition. An effort will be made to reach an agreement between the two countries, which if made doubtless will be extended to all belligerent countries, for the payment of the maintenance of prisoners, including clothing, food, and compensation at the end of the war.

The Hague Conventions already provide for the repayment to belligerents of expenditures on behalf of prisoners of war. Now it is found necessary to make some similar arrangements regarding civilian prisoners. Mr. Anderson's mission assumes additional importance on account of the charges and counter-charges being made in the press in England and Germany of the ill-treatment of prisoners.

SAW SULLIVAN NEAR HIS HOME

Cashier of Union Bank Branch Tells Grand Jury of Meeting Convict in Flatbush.

OTHERS WERE INDULGED

Former Policeman and ex-Official of Wrecked Trust Company Said to Have Wandered from Sing Sing.

When the Kings County Grand Jury resumed its investigation yesterday of the doings of David A. Sullivan, the convicted Union Bank wrecker, it became known that Harry Meyersohn of 135 Ocean Parkway, an assistant cashier in one of the branches of the Union Bank, who knows Sullivan well, had testified that he saw Sullivan in Flatbush in the Summer of 1913 while returning home one evening with his brother-in-law. Leaving a Brighton Beach train at the Church Avenue station, the two entered a drug store on that thoroughfare. While they were in the pharmacy, Meyersohn says, he saw a man whom he recognised as Sullivan, although his mustache had been shaved off.

Sullivan, the witness said, upon seeing him, walked out of the place. Meyersohn turned to his brother-in-law and remarked:

"There is a man who is supposed to be behind prison bars and yet he is roaming the streets of the city."

It was said yesterday that other convicts with influence in Sing Sing had enjoyed extraordinary privileges. One of these was a former policeman who was sentenced for bribery as a result of a police graft investigation in Manhattan. Another was in control of a trust company in Manhattan which went to the wall. Mr. Cropsey said yesterday that he had no proof that members of the State Board of Parole had ridden in the Sing Sing automobile with Sullivan as they were reported to have done. Henry J. McCann of Albany, one of the members of the board, has denied that he was ever in the car.

About a dozen witnesses were before the Grand Jury yesterday in the District Attorney's investigation. These included politicians of Westchester County, who were asked whether they had seen Sullivan in that county in an automobile with Warden Thomas J. McCormick.

McCormick did not appear before the Grand Jury yesterday, as the District Attorney had been unable to serve him with a subpoena. James M. Clancy, former Warden of Sing Sing, has volunteered to go before the Grand Jury tomorrow and tell of the behavior of Sullivan while he was in charge of the prison.

District Attorney Cropsey gave attention to another phase of the Union Bank troubles yesterday. This was the motion by Lawyer Stephen C. Baldwin requiring him to show cause why the indictments against Edward M. Grout, ex-President of the bank, and James T. Ashley, who was cashier of that institution, should not be dismissed because of failure to prosecute. The hearing on the motion was adjourned until tomorrow.

UTICA, Nov. 2.—William Townsend of this city, a member of the State Parole Board, said this morning that he had never ridden in an auto from Sing Sing to Harmon, or Harmon to New York, with Sullivan or any other man.

Canal Tolls $377,000 Last Month.

PANAMA, Nov. 2.—The total canal tolls for the month of October amounted to $377,000, a gain of $107,000 over the September collections.

SELL DAHLGREN'S HOUSE.

Mutual Life Forecloses on Claim Against Son of Late Rear Admiral.

The home of Eric B. Dahlgren, son of Rear Admiral Dahlgren, at 812 Madison Ave, was sold at auction yesterday under foreclosure proceedings for $50,000. The purchaser was the Mutual Life Insurance Company, which held a claim against the property amounting to $73,097. A deficiency judgment was entered against Mr. Dahlgren for the difference.

The house has figured largely in the matrimonial troubles between Mr. Dahlgren and his wife, the daughter of Joseph Drexel of Philadelphia. Mr. Dahlgren is a member of the Stock Exchange. His father left him a fortune and his wife inherited some $20,000,000 from her father.

In the Spring of 1912 Mrs. Dahlgren left her Madison Avenue home, taking her eight children with her. Soon afterward she began suit for divorce. The matter was submitted to a referee, who reported in favor of granting a decree. This decree was made final and then Mrs. Dahlgren went abroad, where she has lived since.

Between the granting of the interlocutory and the final decree of divorce Mrs. Dahlgren took out a replevin on all of the furniture in the Madison Avenue house. The value of the furnishings was set at $30,000, and Mrs. Dahlgren said she had paid for all of them. When the Deputy Sheriffs arrived at the house in March, 1913, they found it boarded up and in charge of a company that protects property against burglars. The furniture was seized finally and turned over to Mrs. Dahlgren. Then a "To let" sign appeared upon the house.

CANDIDATE ARRESTED.

Bluecoat Said Martin McCue Used Abusive Language to Him.

Martin M. C. Cue of 734 Third Avenue Democratic candidate for Assemblyman in the Sixteenth District, was arrested last night on the stoop of the Men's Night Court and was charged with disorderly conduct.

Eugene McCue, 18 years old, a son of McCue, had been arrested by Patrolman Duffy of the East Fifty-first Street Station for building a bonfire in Forty-ninth Street, near Third Avenue. His father went to court and told Magistrate Levy that the arrest of the boy was spite work on the part of the policeman. Magistrate Levy ordered that the subject be discussed no further, and cautioned the policeman and candidate not to speak to each other. He discharged the boy.

After leaving court Martin McCue was arrested by Duffy on the sidewalk. The policeman said that McCue had used abusive language to him. The prisoner was represented by Robert Donahue, who asked for an adjournment until tomorrow afternoon in the Yorkville Court. McCue was paroled.

CUTS OFF HIS FAMILY.

Lawyer Hall Leaves His Estate to Mrs. Emma S. Smith.

The will of Charles Mason Hall, a New York attorney, who died at Charlottesville, Va., on Oct. 18, leaving his estate, about $1,000 in personality, to a Mrs. Emma S. Smith, who is charged with the sole custody of his body," was filed for probate yesterday. His widow, Mrs. Ella Louise Hall of 645 West End Avenue, and his daughters, Sybil Peaslee and Ruth Elizabeth Hall, and Vivian Whittier H. Smith of 312 West 123d Street are referred to in the will as follows:

"I do not leave anything to Ella L. Hall or my children for the reason that the latter have been provided for and the former has had all the money and support for years which I could afford to give her."

Mrs. Hall said that she had not been provided for. She states she only knew about Mrs. Smith for the last two years, previous to which the beneficiary had been a Miss Freeman.

START FUND TO KEEP PASTOR OUT OF JAIL

Appeal Made for Money to Pay Lawyers of Dr. Frank W. Sears's Former Wife.

LETTER SENT TO HIS FLOCK

New Thought Leader and Co-respondent Went to Europe with Cash Raised by Congregation.

Still another urgent relief fund was brought to the attention of benevolent New Yorkers several days ago when subscriptions were asked for to help Dr. Frank W. Sears, pastor of one of the New Thought churches, pay the counsel fees incurred by his wife, Mrs. Julia Seton Sears, in her successful suit for divorce last June. Mrs. Sears, who founded the New Thought congregation, of which she says her husband's church is an offshoot, did not ask for alimony, but Justice Giegerich directed her husband to pay her lawyers $500. At the time he paid $100. The rest of the judgment was not met, and last Tuesday Mr. Sears was adjudged in contempt of court by Justice Blanchard for failure to pay it and was threatened with arrest if he did not make good his deficiency at once.

On Friday a letter was sent to sixty of the members of his church which read as follows:

Oct. 30, 1914.

Dear Friend: The New Thought Church has decided to work out its destiny in love and harmony, and to that end will comply with the Divine Laws, as well as the laws of man.

The man-made laws have decreed our leader, F. W. Sears, in default for the payment of the sum of $400, and he is personally willing to accept the penalty such default demands; but we feel that the higher laws are asking more than that, and even though the penalty were suffered, yet there remains to be paid our tribute to the law of harmony.

Realizing that somewhere down the path of our Cosmic Journey each of us will be called upon to pay our portion of the discordant debt, some of us have concluded to pay our portion here and now, thereby releasing or antidoting our negative causes, permitting us to go on in constructive peace.

I know that it will be necessary only to call to your attention "what would be the loving thing to do in the circumstances" and to give you the opportunity or invitation to contribute to your portion to the fund being raised, to release not only our speaker, but our church.

This is not in any way intended as an appeal—simply a message of love between souls interested in the advancement of themselves and the Higher Truth.

Your subscription for whatever amount you elect will be appreciated. For it you will receive the thanks of the church and the benefit of your life that such consciousness will create. If the amount is oversubscribed, the balance will be used for the purposes of the church. * * *

LYDIA B. KOCH.

Lydia B. Koch of 56 Pine Street is a Trustee of the church. Miss Koch yesterday refused to discuss the matter, and, though she admitted that a Trustees' meeting had been held last week, she would not say whether she was acting for the entire Board of Trustees in the matter.

Dr. Sears, however, was willing to explain the letter. When the judgment was brought against him, he said, he was unable to pay it; indeed, he testified in the trial that his income, which was derived from New Thought teaching and healing, amounted to only $15 a week. In 1902 he had been divorced from his first wife at Kansas City and ordered to pay her $45 a month allimony, which during the second divorce suit he admitted he did not always do.

As to the circumstances of his parishioners raising money to pay the expenses of the divorce suit, he said that it was not unusual for members of a church to raise funds for their pastor's use in one way or another. Indeed, it was with money raised by members of the congregation that Dr. Sears and the girl named by his wife as co-respondent once went to Europe with a party of friends. The contributors to that fund were at the time referred to as the doctor's "ministering angels."

POLICE HONOR ROLL CONTAINS 41 NAMES

Commissioner Woods Publishes List of Acts of Bravery and Meritorious Conduct.

DARING RESCUES RECALLED

Arrests of Mayor's Assailant and Tannenbaum Raiders and Slaying of Guarnieri's Murderer.

The Police Department roll of honor, which Commissioner Woods yesterday made public, contained the names of one Lieutenant and ten patrolmen who received honorable mention for bravery and meritorious conduct, and one Lieutenant, two Acting Detective Sergeants, and twenty-seven patrolmen who were commended. Among the acts which won official approval were the protection of Mayor Mitchel when Michael P. Mahoney attempted to shoot him last April, the arrest of Frank Tannenbaum and his army of the unemployed, and the shooting of the murderer of Detective Guarnieri.

The list of honorable mention men follows:

LIEUT. GEORGE HAERLE, for shooting William Horgan just after Horgan killed Detective Guarnieri.

PATROLMAN PATRICK GILSHINAN, for rescuing a man in the Hudson River on Jan. 2. He was in the water twenty minutes.

PATROLMAN JOSEPH BROWN, for rescuing a watchman at a fire in East Broadway.

PATROLMEN HENRY WEILAND and WILLIAM G. CAMPBELL, for capturing two highwaymen in the Bronx.

PATROLMAN FREDERICK NAU, for capturing a man who attempted to rob a bank messenger.

PATROLMAN TIMOTHY O'CONNOR, for rescuing two boys from Jamaica Bay.

PATROLMEN JOHN J. PHILLIPS and WILLIAM A. McCLAURY, for arresting three Italians in a stabbing and shooting affray last April.

PATROLMAN DANIEL F. STACK, for arresting a burglar who had killed Patrolman Wynn.

Commendation was given to Lieut. Patrick H. Gildea and Acting Detective Sergt. James J. Gegan for the arrest of Tannenbaum and 191 of his followers, and to Acting Detective Sergt. John G. Neun for assisting in the arrest of Mahoney.

Four Sergeants and forty-six patrolmen are named for excellent police duty.

Strong Support for Senator Murtaugh

Friends of State Senator John F. Murtaugh, who is a candidate for delegate at large to the Constitutional Convention on the Democratic ticket, are warmly urging his election. It was through the efforts of Senator Murtaugh at the last session of the Legislature that there was passed a bill to prevent fraudulent circulars being inserted in newspapers. Senator Murtaugh, who lives in Elmira, was Democratic leader of the Senate, and it was through his hard work that the bill got through, despite determined opposition.

rallying calls. Every one along Eastern Parkway, in Brooklyn, in the east side streets in Manhattan, along Fifth Avenue, and Broadway was startlingly reminded that the Glynn campaign was being wound up with fanfare and flourish.

And as the Governor shouted his last words before election to the crowd at 104th Street and Third Avenue at 1:15 A. M. he seemed almost as strong in voice and body as when he began his campaign three weeks ago. Seasoned politicians, men who have weathered arduous campaigns, were emphatic last night in giving voice to their amazement at the Governor's campaigning abilities. Though he has been tired often—and admitted it—he has never failed to rally when called upon, and not once has he given out in voice or strength. One old campaigner who had been watching the Governor for the last two weeks remarked after it was all over last night, "Well, he's the gamest little fighter I ever saw."

At the Brooklyn meeting Gov. Glynn addressed a hall packed with more than 1,000 persons, most of whom were Jews. He spoke to them of the religious issue injected into the campaign, and was cheered loudly when he declared that his was the true Americanism of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, and Abraham Lincoln. He was introduced as "the friend and champion of religious liberty," and asserted that he had ever done his best to deserve such a title.

In concluding his denunciation of those responsible for the religious issue he stirred the audience to prolonged and noisy applause by shouting:

"The man who taboos a Jew because he is a Jew and the man who taboos a Catholic because he is a Catholic violates the very principles upon which this Government was founded in 1776."

Straus Denounces Bigotry.

Nathan Straus followed Gov. Glynn, and said at the outset that he had come into the campaign solely because the religious issue had been raised.

"I am talking to you as Jews," he said, "and I want you to hear me as one who has always been a good Jew. If it had not been for the war, Mrs. Straus and I would now be on our way to Palestine, but if I can help crush the religious bigotry injected into this campaign I shall be glad I was prevented from going away. Many of you are Socialists, I know, and I do not ask you to be disloyal to your belief in socialism. But religious intolerance, religious bigotry, is a bigger thing than socialism or anything else. It strikes at the very roots of our life and liberty—and I ask you men to rise up and crush it. And the best way to punish those who have sought to drag sectarian hatred into this campaign is to elect Martin H. Glynn by an overwhelming majority.

"You should know that this religious issue is a big thing by the fact that I am here. When my brother ran for Governor two years ago I did not speak for him, and so you may be sure that if I am speaking for Martin H. Glynn tonight there is a big reason for it. I never enter a political campaign unless there is a vital issue at stake—and there is a vital issue now."

Mr. Straus was cheered and applauded for several minutes after he had finished. It was evident that he had carried his audience with him. Mrs. Straus was on the platform by his side, and she, too, was applauded by the crowd in the hall.

Jacob H. Schiff joined the Governor and Mr. Straus after the Brooklyn meeting, and went with them on the long Manhattan tour. Mr. Schiff made the plea for Gov. Glynn he has made on several occasions before, appealing for his election, both for the economic and social benefit of the State and as a rebuke to religious bigotry.

The meetings in Manhattan were at 110th Street and Fifth Avenue, 113th Street and First Avenue, 116th Street and Lexington Avenue, 104th Street and Third Avenue, Seventy-ninth Street and Third Avenue, Avenue C and Seventh Street, Hemmington Hall, at 214 Second Street; Rivington and Columbia Streets, Grand and Division Streets, Grand and Forsyth Streets, Second Avenue and Seventh Street, and Times Square.

Gibboney on Long Island Trip.

In his visit to Nassau and Suffolk Counties on Long Island, the Governor entered strong anti-Tammany, Progressive, and Republican territory, so his trip was planned for the reassurance of those who might have heard and heeded District Attorney Whitman's "Glynn is a Tammany nominee." The speakers of the trip were chosen from the ranks of independent Democrats, and most of them were well known to the Long Islanders. Through them Democracy presented a united front.

Chief among the speakers was Stuart G. Gibboney, counsel to Controller of the Currency Williams, and one of the leaders in John A. Hennessy's primary fight. Also, on the train were Harry P. Kleth, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Eastern District, and a Long Island anti-Tammany leader; ex-Judge Rowland Miles of Suffolk County, another independent leader, and ex-Congressman Martin W. Littleton.

Gov. Glynn was well received at every station by from 200 to 500 persons, and what he had to say was first attentively listened to and then enthusiastically applauded. Mr. Gibboney, because of his well known anti-Tammany and pro-Wilson leanings, was also well received. In his first speech at Mineola he explained his presence on the train. He said:

"My appearing before you is an indication of the unification of the Democratic Party in support of Gov. Glynn and Ambassador Gerard. As is well known, I always have been a Democrat opposed to the leadership of Mr. Murphy, but I believe that Gov. Glynn, if elected, will be the leader of the party in fact as well as in name, and he will use his best efforts to bring about a unity we have not known in years. I believe Gov. Glynn is entitled to re-election on his record and also because it is extremely important at this time that State Governments be in harmony with the National Administration. And President Wilson needs Ambassador Gerard in the United States Senate."

The towns at which the Governor spoke were: Mineola, Westbury, Hicksville, Farmingdale, Medford, Southold, Greenport, Mattituck, Riverhead, Centre Moriches, Patchogue, Sayville, Islip, Bay Shore, Babylon, Lindenhurst, Amityville, Freeport, Rockville Centre, Lynbrook, and Valley Stream.

The Governor went to bed long after midnight at the Vanderbilt Hotel, and will leave for Albany at 10:30 o'clock this morning.

After the closing of the polls, at 5 P. M. today, the counting of the vote will start immediately throughout the State. As soon as enough returns have been received to make the results of the complete count reasonably certain, the verdict of the voters will be instantly communicated to everybody for miles around through the use of the great searchlight on the tall tower of The Times Building. The signals will be as follows:

Detailed election returns will be thrown by a stereopticon on a large screen on The Times Building, Broadway and Forty-second Street.

How to Vote For Delegates to Constitutional Convention

Special effort is being made to get the voters to give proper consideration to the nominations made by the various political parties for delegates to the Constitutional Convention. The work of that convention rises above party considerations, and men should be selected to sit in the convention without regard to party lines.

Each voter will be called upon to vote for fifteen Delegates-at-Large. All of the political organizations, except the American Party, have nominated fifteen candidates. Their names will all appear on one separate ballot, in columns under their party emblems. The nominees of the three principal parties are:

DEMOCRATIC.	REPUBLICAN.	PROGRESSIVE.
Edgar M. Cullen,	William Berri,	Vasco P. Abbott,
John A. Dix,	Edgar Truman Brackett,	Carlos C. Alden,
Samuel Gompers,	Jacob Brenner,	Francis W. Bird,
D-Cady Herrick,	Alphonso T. Clearwater,	Homer D. Call,
Calvin J. Huson,	Patrick W. Cullinan,	William Hamlin Childs,
Martin W. Littleton,	Seth Low,	Katharine B. Davis,
James M. Lynch,	Louis Marshall,	Charles M. Dickinson,
William F. McCombs,	John Lord O'Brian,	Frederick E. Draper,
Michael F. McGoldrick,	Herbert Parsons,	William H. Hotchkiss,
John F. Murtaugh,	Adolph J. Rodenbeck,	John Mitchell,
Morgan J. O'Brien,	Elihu Root,	Edwin R. A. Seligman,
William Church Osborn,	Jacob Gould Schurman,	Oscar S. Straus,
Jacob Ruppert,	Henry L. Stimson,	Charles H. Strong,
Samuel Untermyer,	George W. Wickersham,	George S. Van Schaick,
Robert B. Van Cortlandt.	Charles H. Young.	James C. Thomas.

The voter can put a cross mark under any party emblem and vote for the fifteen nominees of that party, or he can vote for any fifteen candidates by putting a cross mark in the blank square to the left of each candidate's name, taking care not to vote for more than fifteen altogether. There is nothing to prevent the voter from voting for more than one candidate appearing on the same horizontal line of the ballot.

In addition to the Delegates-at-Large, each voter will be called upon to vote for three District Delegates, the districts being the same as those for State Senators. The names of the District Delegates will appear on the ballot under those of the Delegates-at-Large.

In the Voters' Guide, published in THE NEW YORK TIMES Sunday, Oct. 25, appeared brief sketches of the lives of the forty-five Delegates-at-Large printed above. There was printed on the same page information gathered by the Citizens' Union regarding the fitness of all the candidates for District Delegates in New York City.

WHITMAN WINDS UP IN BRONX.

Spent the Day in Rockland County —Confident of Winning.

District Attorney Whitman wound up his campaign for Governor yesterday with an excursion into Democratic Rockland County in the afternoon and a whirlwind trip through the Bronx last night. His first public engagement for today is to accompany some friends to the voting booth at 309 Fourth Avenue, near his home, at 37 Madison Avenue, where he will cast his ballot at 10 o'clock this morning. Afterward he will go to his office, in the Criminal Court Building, to spend the day.

It is Mr. Whitman's plan to keep in close personal touch with watchers at the various polling places and to be prepared to follow up any reported instances of fraudulent voting.

"I don't know how I can read the signs of victory wrong," Mr. Whitman said, as he stepped into an automobile at Tarrytown at 6 o'clock last night, after coming across the Hudson from West Nyack on the ferry. "I am not so sure as I might be of Rockland County, which I just left, but the Republican leaders there are hopeful, on account of the road grafts this year. I have never known them to be hopeful that way before. If the distrust of Tammany control at Albany has become so widespread that it has even broken up the solid Democratic ranks in Rockland, then what are we to expect from the rest of the State? I am sure I will win by a decisive margin."

Mr. Whitman missed the noon train from the West Shore Station and disappointed a number of Rockland County politicians, who had come down to act as an escort for him. At 1:15 o'clock he appeared at the station in company with District Attorney Cunningham of Ulster County, who has taken a prominent part in prosecuting road grafts. Martin A. Driscoll, Jr., Republican candidate for District Attorney of Rockland County, met Mr. Whitman and spoke with him through the day's tour. The two District Attorneys and the candidate for District Attorney each took a fling at the highways situation at mass meetings in Haverstraw, Nyack, and West Nyack.

When Mr. Whitman crossed the Hudson to Tarrytown he drove to Broadway and 242d Street, where fifteen automobiles were waiting to convoy him through the Bronx. He spoke at 155th Street and Third Avenue, 161st Street and the Southern Boulevard, 170th Street and Clermont Place, McKinley Square, and finally at Maurer's Casino, at Van Ness Avenue and Unionport Road.

COLONEL EXPECTS BIG VOTE.

Oyster Bay "Neighbors" Give Him Warm Greeting at Final Rally.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Nov. 2.—Col. Roosevelt received the warmest greeting in this campaign when he began his talk this evening in the Lyric Opera House in Audrey Avenue. He said he had selected the night before election to talk to his "neighbors," as he had always done. He talked to them for nearly an hour and he went over the whole campaign. The hall was filled and there was an immense crowd outside the place as the Colonel drove up in the automobile of Bainbridge Colby. Those outside greeted him with three cheers as he hurried into the hall. In his speech the Colonel said:

"Some of you have known me since boyhood and others not so long, but I feel sure that I know every one of you, and I also know that you all know me. Knowing me I am certain that you believe in me, and that you know that I have always loathed dishonesty, particularly in politics."

The Colonel then spoke of Barnes and Murphy, who, he said, were alike in character. He said the Progressive Party was the only one that offered any genuine correction of the present political evils. He said he felt certain that the Progressive vote tomorrow in New York State would be a large one—larger than either Barnes or Murphy would admit.

Bainbridge Colby followed the Colonel and paid a warm tribute to the work of the Colonel in this campaign. Former Assistant District Attorney Elder of Brooklyn also spoke. Many of the houses and business places along Audrey Avenue were illuminated, and the town generally was decorated for the occasion.

LAST WORD FROM MANAGERS.

Little Money to be Spent at the Polls—No New Forecasts.

Charles F. Murphy at Tammany Hall said yesterday that he stopped making election forecasts after the Bird S. Coler election, and that the reports from district leaders with their figures were in their sealed envelopes on his desk, and would not be opened until tomorrow morning. It is said that the checks sent out to the district leaders several days ago were for the smallest amounts in many years.

Progressive State Chairman Theodore Douglas Robinson said the party would spend no money at the polls today, and would close the campaign with a substantial balance and all bills paid. Mr. Robinson was confident that the Progressive Party would poll a large vote, but he gave no figures.

Samuel S. Koenig, the Republican County Chairman said the district leaders in Manhattan this year would get about half what they got in 1913.

Republican State Chairman Tanner, said yesterday that he would stand pat on his forecast that Whitman would get a plurality of 145,000 outside of New York City and would win by a plurality in the State of at least 95,000.

A letter sent to an up-State newspaper by Chancellor James R. Day of Syracuse University in which he vote that no one had been authorized to state that he was advocating the election of Gov. Glynn, was given out by the Republican State Committee. Mr. Day said he had not declared his convictions politically in the present canvass and did not expect to.

William Sulzer gave out this forecast: "I will get at least 40 per cent. of the Democratic vote, 20 per cent. of the Republican vote, 50 per cent. of the Progressive vote, the entire Prohibition vote and 75 per cent. of the Independent vote which is a big factor in this State. This will be more than enough to re-elect me, despite the fact that a concerted effort will be made to count me out.

"Tammany has registered about 80,000 illegal voters. Every effort will be made to vote these men on Election Day."

Thomas D. McCarthy, manager of Ambassador Gerard's campaign for United States Senator said he expected Gerard would win by 200,000.

VICTORY, SAYS WADSWORTH.

Feels Certain of a Republican Sweep as He Starts Home.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—James W. Wadsworth, Jr., Republican nominee for the Senate in New York, left Washington tonight for his home at Mount Morris, Genesee County, where he will vote tomorrow. He is confident of the election of the entire Republican ticket and predicts that Whitman will defeat Glynn by more than 100,000 votes. Wadsworth believes that many Democrats will support Sulzer.

Because of the illness of Mrs. Wadsworth Mr. Wadsworth will return to Washington early Wednesday. He has been at his home, 800 Sixteenth Street, since last Friday. Although Mrs. Wadsworth's condition is not of such nature as to cause any apprehension, Mr. Wadsworth canceled the speaking engagements of the last three days of his campaign and remained with her.

PRESIDENT TO GO HOME.

Will Vote at Princeton and Return to Capital to Hear Results.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—President Wilson will go to his home in Princeton, N. J., tomorrow to vote. He will leave Washington at 8 o'clock, and will return late in the afternoon. He will be accompanied by Dr. Cary T. Grayson, U. S. N., the White House physician; Charles Swenson, his confidential stenographer, who is to cast his first ballot, and several Secret Service men. The President is deeply interested in the Congressional contest in his home district, where his friend Allan B. Walsh of Trenton is being opposed for re-election by Alijah C. Hutchinson, Republican.

Secretary Joseph P. Tumulty left Washington at noon today for his home in Jersey City, where, tonight, he will attend a rally in his home ward. Just after Mr. Tumulty had left the White House, a messenger reached his office with a phonograph. Clerks at the Executive Office insisted that some mistake had been made, and that the phonograph should not have been delivered at the White House.

"It was ordered by telephone," said the messenger. "A man named Turmoil or 'Tumoil-ty' said that it should be delivered here at once."

Just what use is to be made of the phonograph will not be known until Secretary Tumulty returns to Washington tomorrow evening. After voting in Jersey City, Mr. Tumulty will go to Princeton and return with the President. Special telegraph facilities have been arranged at the White House so that the President may receive the election returns tomorrow night.

Regardless of whether the Democrats retain control of the House in the next Congress, the President has made it clear that the Sixty-fourth Congress will not be convened in extraordinary session after the adjournment of the short session of the Sixty-third Congress on March 4. It has also been announced at the White House that the President will not call Congress together in extra session after the election. The short session will convene on Dec. 7.

ARRANGE SPEECHES ALL DAY

Dr. Davis Says Experience Has Taught Her That Teasing and Flattery Go a Long Way.

Society's Woman Suffrage Shop, under the auspices of the Seventeenth Senatorial District Women's Political Union, opened at 663 Fifth Avenue yesterday morning with a theatre and cannon in the window and a large gathering of people inside. The cannon, belonging to the Federal Government, was captured by the Sixty-ninth Regiment during the civil war. It bore a placard which read: "Fifty years ago this cannon helped to free the negro." The women were promised at that time that if they would work for the negro their turn would come next. The cannon yesterday pointed the fact that they were still waiting.

In the theatre one of the scenes showed a house mother with her hands tied, while strings reaching from different departments of her home to departments of the municipality illustrated how closely the two are related. A string stretched from a baby in the cradle ill with scarlet fever to the Health Department, in which the women have no voice, was another scene. Big war pictures in the window showed women at work in the hospitals at the front and other women fleeing from besieged towns or doing the work of the men who were engaged on the battlefield. Crowds gathered in front of this window all day.

Borough President Marcus M. Marks and Miss Lillian Wald spoke at the noon meeting, and Norman Hapgood and Commissioner of Corrections Katharine B. Davis from 4:30 to 6 P. M.

"From the time Adam and Eve set up housekeeping and little Cain was born," said Dr. Davis, "woman has been at the head of the Corrections Department. Eve began it when she punished little Cain for crying at night. The various city departments are only our own housekeeping problems on a large scale, done by the city because they are too large for us to do them ourselves. The men have a way of getting together and saying in effect: 'We represent so many votes and we want so and so.' The way we women have been getting things by influence or personal charm is not good. We haven't all of us got personal charm—perhaps we would get more things if we had. It is bad for the character to get things indirectly.

"You can get things by teasing. I know, because I have done it. A few words of flattery will go a long way. It has its effect in Albany. I know, because I have had thirteen years' experience, but I have always felt when I got things in any of those ways as if I had been stealing.

"I shall have the work of my department so well organized by next April that I shall be able to take the time each week required to attend the convention if that honor is given me, and I have a very efficient deputy, so you need not be afraid to vote for me for fear I will neglect my work. Both men and women will have to live under the Constitution for the next twenty years."

There will be speakers every day except Sunday, from 12 to 1, and from 4:30 to 6 P. M., at the Suffrage Shop, which is near Fifty-second Street. On the committee are Mrs. Henry Bull, Mrs. Ralph Ellis, Mrs. Sumner Gerard, Mrs. Henry Wise Miller, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Ogden Reid, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Mrs. Willard D. Straight, Mrs. Norman De R. Whitehouse, and Mrs. Charles S. Whitman.

CONTEST FLURSCHEIM WILL.

Three Daughters Object to Bequest Made to Mme. de Lyteuil.

Mrs. Estelle L. Loeb of 315 West 140th Street, Mrs. Agnes V. Cowen of Park Avenue and Seventy-seventh Street, and Mrs. Helen I. Strauss of Haverhill, Mass., daughters of Hermann Flurscheim, half owner of the Franklin Simon Company, started proceedings yesterday in the Surrogates' Court to contest the codicils attached to their father's will making a conditional bequest of $100,000 to Mme. Bertrand de Lyteuil of Paris, France, who was not a relative. Undue influence and unsound mind are alleged. The estate exceeds $1,000,000.

The will left to the daughters, the sons, Bernard H. and Henry D., and Madeline Lindnauer, a grandchild, two-thirds of 49 per cent. of the new corporation to be formed out of the copartnership of Franklin Simon & Co. Bernard H. received the other third. The codicils set aside bonds of the 416 Fifth Avenue Company sufficient to produce the $100,000 which Mme. de Lyteuil was to receive in the event Mr. Flurscheim lived till 1915, but she was to receive only $50,000 should he die in 1914. The codicil, dated Jan. 9, 1914, reads:

"Should the payment of these sums not be agreeable to be made, my executors can postpone the payments until convenient and meanwhile pay 6 per cent. interest, so that Mme. Bertrand de Lyteuil will receive 5,000 francs, equal to about $1,000 monthly."

Crazed Woman Hurt by Trolley Car.

A well-dressed woman, thought to be demented ran in front of a crosstown car at Bedford Avenue and North Fourth Street, in Brooklyn, early yesterday morning, and was knocked down. She was cut severely on the head. Before the motorman could seize her she disappeared in the direction of McCarren Park. The motorman reported the incident at the Bedford Avenue Police Station, and Policeman Bracken found the woman roaming about in McCarren Park. The woman attacked him, and Bracken was forced to call two other men to his assistance. She was taken to the observation ward of the Kings County Hospital. Her name was not ascertained.

He is not held under any bail, but is in my custody—the first time he ever has been. He is absolutely guiltless of any wrongdoing, for who could have told when these things were done that the Sherman law would be held to cover them? But this Grand Jury has been really sitting in Washington; at any rate, it adjourned there."

None of the other defendants had anything to say about the matter. Howard Elliott, President of the present New Haven board, was in Boston. When he was informed over the telephone of what had occurred he declined to make any comment for publication.

Those who are mentioned as having been in the conspiracy with the defendants were the late J. Pierpont Morgan, George N. Miller, Wilson G. Hunt, E. M. Trowbridge, William D. Bishop, Sr., William D. Bishop, Jr., Nathaniel Wheeler, Henry C. Robinson, Edward M. Reed, Charles P. Clark, Joseph Park, Chauncey M. Depew, Henry S. Lee, Loverett Brainard, William E. Barnett, Lucius Tuttle, Charles S. Mellen, John M. Hall, Charles F. Choate, Nathaniel Thayer, Royal C. Taft, Carlos French, George J. Brush, I. de Ver Warner, Arthur D. Osborne, Luzon B. Morris, Frank W. Cheney, Percy R. Todd, Richard A. McCurdy, H. McK. Twombly, John C. Parker, Alexander J. Cassatt, John H. Whittemore, Timothy E. Byrnes, Hiram M. Kochersperger, James McCrea, Edwin Milner, Amory A. Lawrence, Augustus S. May, Edward G. Buckland, Arthur F. Clarke, Frank Jones, Samuel G. Lawrence, George G. Haven, W. R. Berry, W. H. Newman, Oakleigh Thorne, and Marsden J. Perry.

The Conspiracy Charge.

In addition to these the Grand Jury stated it believed there were others whose names were unknown to it with whom the men indicted had conspired to monopolize interstate commerce. This, it was explained in the indictment, consisted in the common carrier business of transporting passengers and property by railroad, by water, and by both from New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Vermont, Maine, and New Hampshire to other States.

The indictment gave a list of the transportation companies which it was alleged had been merged in the New Haven system. There were more than 100 of them, and they included the Boston & Maine, the Boston & Albany, the Central New England Railway Company, the Central Vermont Railway Company, the Eastern Steamship Corporation, the Joy Steamship Company, the Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company, the Maine Steamship Company, the Metropolitan Steamship Company, the New York & New England Railroad Company, the New York, Westchester & Boston, the New York, Ontario & Western, the Connecticut Company, the Rhode Island Company, and the Rutland Railroad Company.

It was noticed that in drawing criminal charges from the development of the New Haven the Government disregarded the compromise which it reached with the present management of the company in arriving at the settlement of the civil dissolution suit. In that it was content with the abandonment by the New Haven of its control over the New England trolley lines, the coast steamship lines, the Merchants and Miners' Company, and its connection with the Boston & Maine and the Boston & Albany. It left to the Interstate Commerce Commission the decision whether the New Haven might continue its relation with the Sound steamship lines, and had nothing to say about the Central New England, the New York & New England, the Rutland, and the New York, Ontario & Western Railroads.

In the indictment the Government went back to July 2, 1890, and found that from that time until the actual presentation of the indictment yesterday there had been a conspiracy to form a monopoly by acquiring the stock or control of all the subsidiary companies of the New Haven, whether they were left to it in accordance with the civil decree or not. It is likely that the defendants will bring this point up in the demurrers which they are expected to file.

Question of Immunity.

It is believed that some of the defendants may raise the plea that as they have testified on New Haven affairs before the Interstate Commerce Commission they are entitled to immunity. As Mr. Mellen has been the chief witness before the Grand Jury it has been impossible to indict him, but at the time that he was called upon to give evidence at Washington it was suggested that thereby he had won immunity for himself.

Those who now may put forward the same plea are Mr. Skinner, Mr. Billard, and Mr. Cuyler. They were sworn and gave such testimony as they were asked for. In addition Mr. Ledyard and Mr. Robbins submitted to the commission unsworn statements.

The men charged with conspiracy, it was alleged, took advantage of the fact that the New Haven was the only railroad of any importance which led from New York City to the New England States, and treated it as a nucleus to "bring as many of said common carriers and their properties and facilities for carrying on said commerce under their influence, management, domination, and ownership." The Grand Jury asserted that the measures taken to bring this about were "unfair, undue, unreasonable, and unlawful practices."

Special mention was made of the purchase of the Joy Steamship Company by the New Haven, and the use made of it in capturing the Sound steamship trade. Thus it is alleged that the men indicted used the Joy Company and the United Steamship Company, although the fact that they were controlled by the New Haven was kept concealed, "to engage in such destructive competition for limited times, with such common carriers as had not come under the domination and control of said New Haven company, that such common carriers would either be destroyed or compelled to come under such domination and control."

The Grand Jury summed up the case by representing that the men indicted used, or threatened to use, the advantage of position of the New Haven "to grasp the commerce rightfully and normally belonging to" the transportation corporations which the indictment enumerated.

The process which brought the defendants before the courts began with the pressure put on the New York & New England Railroad Company in 1891 by the New Haven, which resulted in the first investigation of the latter's methods by the Massachusetts Legislature. This ended in the purchase by the New Haven and the New York Central of what is now the Putnam Division of the latter and the throwing of the New York & New England into a receivership.

Series of Mergers and Leases.

In 1893 the New Haven leased the Old Colony Company and formed the first agreement with the Boston & Maine Railroad. Meanwhile a series of mergers and leases were in progress, by which the New Haven absorbed small railroad lines in New England, and in 1896 it acquired a majority of the stock of the Boston Terminal Company, which controlled the terminals in Boston.

In 1904 the New Haven acquired the Central New England, and in the following year the New York, Ontario & Western. Three years later the Boston & Maine passed finally under New Haven ownership, and the agreement for the joint operation of the Boston & Albany was made with the New York Central. In June, 1909, the Boston Railroad Holding Company was organized, and in February, 1911, the New York Central sold to the New Haven the Rutland Railroad. Finally in 1912 an agreement was entered into between Mr. Mellen and Edson J. Chamberlin of the Grand Trunk of Canada, which ended the latter's invasion of New England.

The acquisition of a steamboat monopoly by the New Haven began before 1895, by which time it had acquired the Providence and Stonington and other important lines. Between 1900 and 1903 it took over the New Haven Steamboat Company, the New London Steamboat Company, and the Bridgeport Steamboat Company, and in 1904 to 1906 it sold its steamship holdings to the New England Navigation Company, which sold them in 1907 to the Consolidated Railway Company, which, in its turn, was merged with the New Haven.

In 1911 the Eastern Steamship Corporation, another New Haven subsidiary, took over the Metropolitan, the Maine, and the Eastern Steamship Companies, and the New England Navigation Company, by secretly buying up the stock of the Joy Line, was able to drive out all competition. In this way the New Haven acquired twenty-two of the thirty steamship lines serving New England.

Control of Trolley Lines.

It was in 1893 that the appearance of trolley lines began to disturb the New Haven, and, beginning with the purchase in 1895 of the Stanford Street Railway Company, it by 1906 had obtained the ownership of 1,500 of the 1,652 miles of trolley lines in Rhode Island, and all but 119 miles of the trolleys in Connecticut. In Massachusetts, it had practically everything south of the Boston & Albany line and west of Worcester. Then, in 1906, occurred the Westchester deal, by which it acquired the New York, Westchester & Boston at, approximately, $12,000,000 more than its value, according to the Government. This was merged with the New York & Port Chester in 1910, and last year earned $400,000 less than its operating expenses.

It was remembered that at the annual meeting of the New Haven last week Mr. Elliott had given out some notes with regard to the personnel of the present board of the company in which five of the men indicted still have seats. Mr. Brewster, who was elected on May 5, 1907, he said, was a substantial holder of the securities of the company and had been identified with the financial and industrial life of the community.

Praised by Mr. Elliott.

Mr. McHarg, who has also been a Director since May, 1907, was said by Mr. Elliott to have been helpful to the New Haven in its financing and by his good advice and criticism. Mr. Cuyler, whose service on the board dates from October, 1910, was referred to as a representative stockholder from Pennsylvania with much experience in large corporations and financial affairs, and Mr. Maxwell, who joined the directorate in May, 1911, was said to have been most active in the last year in trying to better the position of the company.

Mr. Milligan, who also became a Director in 1911, was praised as a most earnest student of the conditions surrounding the company and for his activity in safeguarding its interests.

Of the other defendants William Rockefeller was one of the senior members of the board when he resigned on Sept. 29 last. On Jan. 1, 1914, he was the owner of 2,150 shares. George M. Miller had been on the board a long time when he resigned on Jan. 16, 1913, and Charles M. Pratt, Theodore N. Vail, and Alexander Cochrane also dropped out of the directorate.

John L. Billard was placed on the board in 1910 and resigned on Aug. 11 last, and in September Charles F. Brooker, James S. Elton, and George F. Baker, who, with an ownership of 100 shares, had been on the board since 1910, retired. On Oct. 15 William Skinner, Thomas De Witt Cuyler, who had been a Director since Oct. 26, 1910, and A. Heaton Robertson, who was elected on May 31, 1907, resigned. Finally last week, at the annual meeting, the resignations of D. Newton Barney, Robert W. Taft, and James F. Hemingway were announced.

E. D. Robbins, who is also indicted, has been a Director for a few months, but he is included in the charges brought as the general counsel of the New Haven during the years in which the alleged conspiracy has been in existence.

INDICTED MEN RETICENT.

Decline to Discuss the New Haven Indictments.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 2.—Attempted interviews over the long-distance telephone tonight with D. Newton Barney of Farmington, Edward D. Robbins of New Haven, John L. Billard of Merdine, and Francis T. Maxwell of Rockville, and a talk in this city with Director Edward Milligan of the New Haven Road, who is also President of the Phoenix Fire Insurance Company, elicited little comment on the Federal Grand Jury indictments in New York City against Directors and former Directors of the New Haven system.

Mr. Maxwell seemed to think he had a good defense because he was not on the board in 1906, when the various purchases were made. Mr. Milligan had nothing to say beyond that Edward M. Day of Hartford would be his counsel.

Mr. Barney said he was no longer a Director of the New Haven, and was not interested in what the Grand Jury did. John L. Billard declined to offer any comment. Mr. Robbins laughed cheerfully, and seemed amused at the suggestion that he might like to discuss the Grand Jury's action. Mr. Billard, said he, thought he again would retain H. S. Cummings of Stamford, but Mr. Robbins would not even say if he would retain counsel, after he had done something more than "scan the headlines in the newspapers."

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Nov. 2.—T. De Witt Cuyler, the only Philadelphian listed among the indicted Directors and ex-Directors of the New Haven, had heard of the indictment in New York; he would not make any comment except that "of course the thing would be fought."

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 2.—Theodore N. Vail expressed surprise today when informed that he was among the twenty-one Directors and former Directors of the New Haven Road against whom criminal indictments were returned. Mr. Vail declined to discuss the indictment. He is here recovering from slight injuries suffered in a fall at Cape Henry on Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 2.—J. G. Hemingway and A. Heaton Robertson declined today to discuss the indictments against them in the New Haven Railroad inquiry. Frederick F. Brewster said he knew nothing about the indictment.

Papers in the criminal proceedings have not been received here for service. Of the Connecticut men who are mentioned as conspirators, but not indicted, William E. Barnett, John H. Whittemore, I. de ver Warner, Edward Milner, and Luzon B. Morris are dead.

BEST TEST OF SHERMAN LAW.

More Prominent Men Involved Than in Other Cases.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—In getting the New Haven indictments officials of the Department of Justice feel that they have the best opportunity since the Sherman law was enacted to test its value as a criminal statute. There have been other indictments under the law, but in no previous cases have so many prominent men been in danger of trial and imprisonment.

Attorney General McReynolds, before he left the department to become a Supreme Court Justice, was convinced on the evidence secured by department investigators that criminal prosecutions were forthcoming. His successor, Mr. Gregory, who was special assistant in the New Haven case, had reached the same conclusion. To add strength to their position President Wilson, when the negotiations for a peaceful dissolution of the New Haven system seemed doomed to failure, directed that the criminal phase be gone into.

It was the New Haven case that brought the present Attorney General to Washington as special attorney for the department, and it was the way in which he handled preliminary negotiations for a peaceful dissolution of the great system which led ex-Attorney General McReynolds to recommend him as successor.

REPORTED PRICE $500,000

Negotiations Ended After Five Years When Generous Donation of $113,750 Made Purchase Possible.

A gift of $113,750 from William K. Vanderbilt enabled Columbia University to take title yesterday to the north half of the block bounded by 116th and 117th Streets, Amsterdam Avenue and Morningside Drive. This property was a part of the Drexel estate and was purchased by the university after five years of negotiations at the reported figure of $500,000. The Vanderbilt gift was announced yesterday afternoon at the regular meeting of the Trustees of the university.

The property was acquired by the university with the original view of moving the College of Physicians and Surgeons to the Morningside Heights campus. From a statement given out yesterday by the Trustees, it seems doubtful now whether the college will be moved from its present site on Fifty-ninth Street. The university has not decided what disposition will be made of the property.

"The university began the acquisition of this block five years ago," the Trustees stated, "with a view to providing a site for the Medical School, now situated on West Fifty-ninth Street, that would be in immediate juxtaposition with the other departments of the university. The subsequent alliance between the university and the Presbyterian Hospital has led to a re-examination of the whole question as to the best future site for the Medical School, and the educational and financial problems involved are still unsolved. Meanwhile, the newly acquired property is already occupied by the Crocker Laboratories for Cancer Research and by a research laboratory for the use of the Department of Botany. Both buildings are temporary and may be readily removed when the plans for the permanent development of the newly acquired property are completed.

Clinical instruction is hereafter to be provided for medical students at the Montefiore Home, and to carry on this instruction the following new appointments were made: Dr. Siegfried Wachsman, (Berlin, 1891,) Professor of Clinical Medicine; Dr. George L. La Porte, (Columbia, 1894,) Assistant Professor of Clinical Medicine; Dr. Bernard S. Oppenheimer, (Columbia, 1901,) Assistant Professor of Clinical Medicine; Dr. S. Philip Goodhart, (Yale, 1894,) Assistant Professor of Clinical Medicine.

Roscoe C. E. Brown, formerly managing editor of The Tribune, was added to the teaching staff of the School of Journalism, and Dr. Dean S. Fansler was appointed Lecturer in English.

Dr. Warfield T. Longcope was appointed to serve as a member of the Board of Managers of the George Crocker Special Research Fund. Dr. Theodore C. Janeway resigned from the service of the university, his resignation having been tendered last Spring.

President Butler submitted his annual report on the work of the university for the year ended June 30, which was ordered printed.

Among the gifts received in addition to Mr. Vanderbilt's were:

One thousand five hundred dollars from the class of 1890, Arts and Mines, on account of the cost of their class memorial to be presented at commencement, 1915; $875 from the Royal Netherlands Government toward the salary of the Queen Wilhelmina lecturer for 1914-15; $50 from A. Ellers of New York toward the maintenance fund of the Deutsches Haus.

N. Y. U. DEDICATES NEW HALL.

$100,000 Building Is the Gift of Mrs. John Stewart Kennedy.

New York University formally dedicated the Cornelius Baker Hall of Philosophy at University Heights yesterday. The ceremonies, which were very impressive, took place in the afternoon in the auditorium of the building. It completes part of the main plan of architecture for the campus, designed, when the institution moved to the Heights, by the late Stanford White. The building itself was designed by William D. Crow, and cost more than $100,000, all of which was the gift of Mrs. John Stewart Kennedy, the last $15,000 being conditional on the raising of $20,000 from other sources, to insure the completion of the part of the Hall of Fame adjoining the new building.

The new structure was given in memory of Cornelius Baker, father of Mrs. Kennedy. The bronze memorial tablet in the new hall was unveiled by Miss Charlotte Baker, a granddaughter of Cornelius Baker.

In accepting the new building on behalf of the university, Chancellor Elmer E. Brown spoke of the necessity which it relieved. In the presentation address, the Rev. Dr. Adolphus F. Schauffler spoke on opportunity and the part that it played in life. The dedicatory address was delivered by the Rev. John Henry Jowett, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, the dedicatory prayer by Chancellor Emeritus Henry Mitchell MacCracken and the statement on behalf of the Building Committee by John H. MacCracken, syndic of the university. The Rev. Dr. George Alexander, President of the University Council, presided.

Among those present were Mrs. Finley J. Shepard, donor of the Gould Memorial Library and the college dormitory, Gould Hall; Mrs. John Stewart Kennedy, Mrs. A. F. Schauffler, Miss Estelle Whitfield, Mrs. E. C. Bodman, Mrs. F. A. Constable, Miss Florence Harper, Chancellor and Mrs. Elmer E. Brown, Dr. and Mrs. John P. Munn, Charles B. Alexander, representing the State Board of Regents; Mr. and Mrs. James Abbott, Francis Hovey Stoddard and the members of the Faculties of the different schools.

VEHICLES KILL 276 YOUNG.

Heavy Death Toll of Children in City's Streets Since Jan. 1.

Since Jan. 1 276 children have been killed on the streets of the greater city by vehicular traffic, according to a report of the National Highways Protective Society. During October 43 persons were killed, 25 of them children under 16 years of age. Automobiles killed 28, trolleys 8, and wagons 7. Of the fatalities more than 60 per cent. occurred in Manhattan.

On account of the deaths of so many children Col. Edward S. Cornell, Secretary of the Society, urges that the Board of Aldermen pass at once an ordinance similar to the following, which went into effect in Chicago last year.

That it shall be unlawful for any person to skate on rollers or ice skates upon any street or public way in the city, except on the sidewalks thereof or at street intersections while crossing from one side of the street to the other.

During October in New York State, outside of New York City, automobiles killed 55, trolleys 14, wagons 3. In New Jersey automobiles killed 22, trolleys 3, and wagons 3. Twenty-four persons were killed at highway railroad grade crossings in New York State and 9 in New Jersey.

Franconia Touches Bottom.

The Cunarder Franconia, commanded by Capt. D. S. Miller, which sailed at 4 P. M. yesterday for Liverpool, touched the mud about a mile below the entrance to the Ambrose Channel. The liner was steaming out slowly and had to swing to avoid hitting a big tow bound up to New York. She was stopped for fifteen minutes, and then proceeded on her way.

CONVICT TWO MORE IN BOOK FRAUD CASE

James J. Farmer and Col. William J. Hartley Quickly Found Guilty by a Jury.

THOS. P. DUNN ACQUITTED

He Falls in Faint While Prosecutor Is Summing Up—Women Give Farmer a Bouquet.

After being out only one hour the jury which for the last two weeks had been trying the rare book fraud case in the Federal District Court, before Judge Foster, returned a verdict of guilty against James J. Farmer, President of the Anglo-American Authors' Association of 225 Fifth Avenue, and Col. William J. Hartley, one of his chief agents. On the other hand, it acquitted Thomas P. Dunn, who also stood trial with them. The two men convicted were admitted to $10,000 bail until Friday morning, when argument will be made on a motion for a new trial.

This ends the trial by which the Government has hoped to break up country-wide frauds in the sale of so-called rare books which it is asserted has taken from the public in the last few years millions of dollars. Of the other men indicted with Farmer and Hartley, Glen Farmer, son of J. J. Farmer, is now serving a sentence for a similar offense in a Massachusetts penitentiary; W. H. Scott is said to be in a lunatic asylum; Romeo Nathan has pleaded guilty; Samuel Warfield, acquitted in the Federal courts, has been arrested on a grand larceny charge by the State authorities, and George Fisher has been permitted to go free.

One more witness was called yesterday by the defense to show that the prices charged by the defendants were not exorbitant. Albert M. Adam, a Chicago bookbinder, valued their edition of Shakespeare at $100 a volume and the Queen Victoria series at $250 a volume.

Then Isaac Weill, counsel for Dunn, addressed the jury, urging that three letters on which the Government relied to connect him with the alleged conspiracy were ordinary business communications and proved nothing.

James R. Ely tried next to explain the "Col. Bill" letters which were put in by the Government. He scoffed at the emphasis put upon the phraseology in familiar letters and described the Government's book experts as pessimists of the worst sort. Moreover, he attacked the theory of conspiracy, saying that there was no combination, but every man was out for himself competing with his neighbors for business.

James Mack also dwelt on the sunshine which Hartley radiated on all who met him and suggested that some of the letters, it should be remembered, had probably been written after the Colonel had taken a highball or two.

As Assistant District Attorney Roosa was summing up for the Government, Dunn, who is 73 years old, fell in a faint on the floor. Hartley and the court attendants ran to his side, but it was fifteen minutes before the trial could proceed. Both Mr. Roosa and Assistant District Attorney Wood attacked the defendants and their tactics severely for their misrepresentations, and Mr. Roosa denounced Miss Weniesse, secretary for Farmer, whose forgetfulness had been a stumbling block to the Government.

After Judge Foster had summed up the jury went out for luncheon. It was not able to come to a decision with regard to Dunn until it had sent for the letters which had been used as evidence against him. When the verdict of acquittal was announced, Col. Hartley was the first to congratulate Dunn.

Early in the day two women entered the courtroom and presented a bouquet to Farmer.

$13,000,000 IN GOLD ARRIVES

Eight motor trucks of the American Express Company, bearing heavy loads of gold bars and guards with repeating rifles, trundled down from the Grand Central Station yesterday and held the attention of a large crowd behind the Assay Office most of the afternoon. They delivered about $13,000,000 of $25,000,000 started to this city from the Denver Mint last Friday. Each bar was contained in its separte bag to prevent abrasion, and each bag was checked up several times before the treasure finally found lodgment in the vaults.

W. A. Beasley, the Denver manager of the express company, brought the shipment through. It came in three express cars, each containing armed guards in addition to the regular express messenger. The gold is being brought here to offset inroads made upon the Government's supply of the metal by shipments to Canada in process of liquidating the country's debts in Europe.

Big Mortgage on Brokaw Realty.

MINEOLA, L. I., Nov. 2.—A mortgage of $100,000 has been given by Irving Brokaw, a cousin of W. Gould Brokaw, to W. Emlen Roosevelt, John A. Weeks, and John D. Dennis, all of Oyster Bay, on property purchased recently by Mr. Brokaw from the Mill Neck Club. Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Weeks, who is President of the Mill Neck Club, and Mr. Dennis accepted the mortgage, it was said in the County Clerk's office here, as trustees of the club. A deed conveying part of the property to Brokaw was filed simultaneously with the mortgage on Saturday. The consideration of that parcel is $160,000. Mr. Brokaw paid a mortgage tax of $500.

NURSES GO ON STRIKE AS DOCTOR OPERATES

Leave Patient with Appendicitis When Called Out as a Protest at Flushing Hospital.

TWENTY-SEVEN QUIT WORK

Five Suspended After Row Over the Dismissal of a Supervisor—The Other Nurses Reinstated.

A strike of the twenty-seven pupil nurses of the Flushing Hospital, which caused two girls to quit the operating room at the summons, though Dr. C. B. Story was then working over a man on whom he had already started an appendicitis operation, has started a controversy in which some of the oldest and best-known families in Flushing, Bayside, and the surrounding districts are now concerned. Five of the nurses were expelled after an investigation of the strike, which occurred on Saturday.

They, as well as most of the others, are daughters of prominent families, many of whom are interested in the hospital work, and they have sided with their daughters The young nurses who have been dismissed are the Misses Ethel Olsen, daughter of Capt. Charles K. Olsen, a trustee of the hospital; Margaret Shapter, May Schultz, Sophia Belle Hardgrove, and Bertha Scheper.

Miss Shapter and Miss Schultz were the girls who left the operating room, according to a sister of Miss Olson, who spoke for her last night, a cold having temporarily destroyed Miss Ethel's voice. Miss Olsen said that all the pupil nurses had agreed to strike on signal because the hospital authorities had refused to give a public hearing to Miss M. E. Melville, Supervisor of Nurses, who had been dismissed, and Miss Schultz and Miss Shapter left the operating room when another nurse knocked on the door and called out that the strike had started.

"There are four physicians in the room, and Miss Frances Nicholson, the operating room supervisor, was present," said Miss Olson. "So the girls felt no hesitancy in quitting the room as they might have done under other conditions."

At Miss Shapter's home it was said that neither she nor Miss Schultz left the operating room until ordered to do so by Miss Nicholson, though Miss Olsen insisted that all the girls had acted voluntarily. Miss Olsen said that the regular meeting of the trustees would be held on Nov. 15, when the matter of the dismissal of the nurses which was ordered by the Executive Committee of three would be taken up in full meeting. All the nurses except the five dismissed have been reinstated.

The unexpectedness of the strike left the hospital work paralyzed for a time, but presently the authorities got fifteen nurses from Brooklyn and Manhattan and meantime the physicians attended the sixty patients in the wards. Several doctors stayed by Dr. Story with the result that his operation was completed successfully.

"Thank Heaven no harm was done," said Dr. Story last night. "We were able to handle the situation, but it was certainly a most unwomanly thing for the nurses to leave a patient at such a critical time."

GRAND JUROR WITH MAYOR.

W. A. Reid Says He Didn't Sign Attack on Charities Department.

Mayor Mitchel received a letter yesterday from Wallace A. Reid, a member of the August Grand Jury, which handed down a presentment criticising institutions under the control of the Charities Department. Mr. Reid said:

"The writer, in addition to one or two other members of the August Grand Jury, declined to sign the presentment in regard to the Charities Department. You are quite correct in your position. The Morgue employes having been indicted for robbery, the jury should have passed on to the next piece of business."

CITY HEADS WASTE LIGHT.

Commissioner Williams Says 15 Per Cent. Could Be Saved.

Commissioner Williams has sent a circular letter to the heads of all city and borough departments calling their attention to the waste of gas and electricity.

"The funds for the purchase of gas and electric current for use in public buildings in New York are disbursed under the direction of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity," said Commissioner Williams. "Gas, electric light, and power cost money. To waste them is to waste money, and the co-operation of all will save at least 15 per cent. of the appropriation."

WOMAN HELD AS AUTO THIEF

Miss Elsing Arrested While Driving Stolen Car.

Miss Nellie Elsing, 21 years old, of 34 West Sixty-first Street, who says she is an Australian actress, was arraigned before Magistrate Deuel in the Harlem Court yesterday and held in $1,500 bail for examination Wednesday on a charge of having stolen a seven-passenger touring car belonging to Adolph G. Seasongood, of 26 West Seventy-fourth Street. She is the first woman to be arrested as an auto thief in this city.

In court the young woman said she had dined late Sunday night at a café at 123d Street and St. Nicholas Avenue with a man whom she knew as Al Mitchell. When she told him she had a mania for motoring, she says, he gallantly placed the use of his car at her disposal. He directed her to a car which was standing outside, she says, so she drove off in it.

Ten minutes later Joseph Hanrahan, chauffeur for Mr. Seasongood, rushed into the West 123d Street Station and said his car had been stolen. The police communicated with Mr. Seasongood, and, on learning that the car had been taken out without the owner's permission, held Hanrahan. Shortly afterward Patrolman Powell noticed a large touring car stalled at Broadway and 107th Street. William Blair, a garage employe, was working over it and Miss Elsing sat at the wheel. Patrolman Powell recognized the car from the description that had been sent out, and arrested Miss Elsing.

In court, Mr. Seasongood refused to make a complaint against Hanrahan, and he was set free. Miss Elsing protested that she had no intention of stealing the auto.

BROKE LAW TO SAVE CAT.

Veterinarian, Called to Attend Sick Feline, Arrested for Speeding.

Christian Rohrer, a veterinarian, of 128 West Fifty-third Street, an employe of the State Agricultural Department, pleaded in the West Side Court yesterday that he drove his automobile along Riverside Drive at the rate of twenty-eight miles an hour because he was on his way to attend a sick cat.

"You should not hurry to attend a cat that has nine lives," said Magistrate Herbert. "Since your speeding endangered human beings with but one life, you are fined $25."

Rohrer paid the fine.

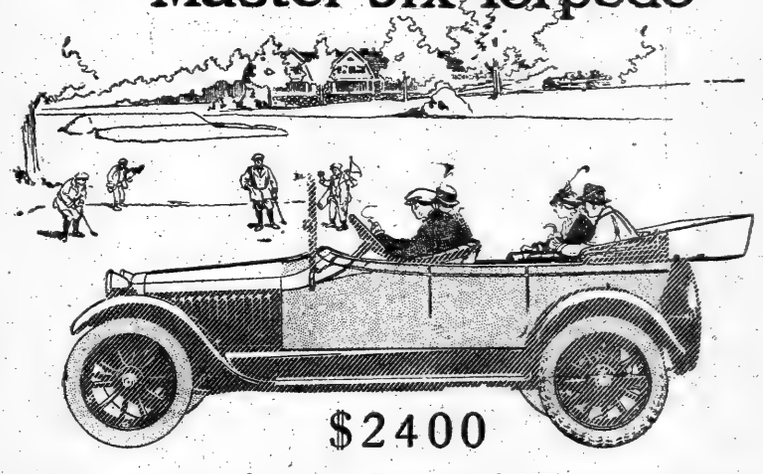
Chalmers "Master Six" Torpedo



$2400

For years men have turned to makers across the water as the originators of automobile styles. But this is changed now. For 1915 an American car has set a high mark of beauty for men to judge all cars by.

And this car is the Chalmers "Master Six" Torpedo. Point by point it is fully comparable with the most expensive European models. Yet its price is $2400. It is a car so exclusively distinctive in beauty and quality that it clearly defines a new period in American automobile building.

Wherein It Excels

The body is of the "boat" type of design built lower than usual to emphasize the "raciness" and smartness of the lines.

The front seats are divided by an aisle of ample space. All the seats are sloped to give the greatest ease. There's but a single door of extra width in the center of the body on either side. The upholstery is luxuriously deep and comfortable.

Mechanically This Car Leads All

For seven years the Chalmers Motor Company has been first to introduce many of the most noted improvements in automobile building.

In this seventh year success, the "Master Six" Torpedo, is embodied all that has been gained during these years. There is no unproved part or principle of construction. It is a car of known quality.

In basic mechanical design the chassis is similar to that of the famous 1914 "Master Six" which thoroughly proved itself in the hands of thousands of owners over every kind of roads.

And the automobile world knows no better. Yet there are several detailed improvements and a number of 1915 Chalmers refinements which make it even a greater "over value."

The Most We Can Say Is, "See This Car"

Much as we might say in praise of the "Master Six" Torpedo we could not hope to equal the impression created by seeing this great car. So we urge you to come in at once and see that what we say is not exaggerated by our natural enthusiasm over this new "Master Six."

SOMETHING NEW IN CAMPAIGNS.

There has never been a campaign like the one now ended. It is not that there has been "apathy," or lack of interest; that has happened before, and there is probably less of it now in reality than in some other campaigns, such as that of 1892, where there seemed to be great excitement. The registration was not abnormally low, and evidently men have made up their minds on candidates and issues just as positively and for as good reasons as ever.

But the War of the Ten Nations has overshadowed it. The cloud that hangs over the world insured, for the first time in our history, a cold, appraising attitude among the voters. All attempts to create partisan excitement, the old hurrah-boys atmosphere, failed. No venom has been shown except by the candidates, and by only a few of them. A man just returned from a visit to several up-State cities said that he had seen only two campaign banners and no red fire or brass bands. Men did not discuss the issues excitedly on street corners and in barrooms, but made up their minds coolly about them at home over their newspapers.

This is why, despite all their predictions, the politicians are at sea, and it explains the fear privately admitted in both camps. There are none of the usual signs. There is no peg to hang a conclusion on. They do not know how the people in their own districts are going to vote, for they have not even heard them talk. Yet we should think such a campaign would favor the chances of Gov. GLYNN, for he has made a cool, business-like appeal to voters on State issues, while Mr. WHITMAN has run away from the questions Mr. GLYNN has put forward. Mr. WHITMAN has conducted a campaign in the old-fashioned way, abusing his opponent, seeking to arouse a dark suspicion and appealing to prejudices which for the moment are dormant. He has not struck in the key to which the popular mind just now is attuned, and the result is shown in his comparatively unresponsive audiences. The old tune was always good enough to play, it will be good enough some day, but it is not the tune for today, while this great scourge of war hangs over us.

We should think, too, that with the public mind unquestionably disposed to put no obstacles in the way of President WILSON, or to do anything likely to impair his standing with foreign nations in view of the figure he is likely to be called upon to play before the war is over, the character of the campaign should favor Mr. GERARD'S election as Senator and the election of a Democratic House. No one wants to have it go out in Europe that the President has been rebuked and discredited by his own people; he will need every inch of his prestige when the time comes. In an ordinary campaign this consideration might be lost sight of in the shouts, the red fire, and the appeals to passion; but nothing has tended to obscure it in this campaign.

GUTIERREZ TO THE FRONT.

Having accepted the conditional resignations of CARRANZA and VILLA, the convention of Governors and Generals at Aguascalientes has appointed EULALIO GUTIERREZ Provisional President of the republic for twenty days. The need of a "Who's Who in Mexico" has become imperative. Though Gen. GUTIERREZ took an active part in the war against HUERTA, little has been heard about him here. He may be for all that the very man to bring order out of chaos. It is also reported that the convention has appointed VILLA Provisional Secretary of War, so that he will be in charge of all the military forces. In any other country this would be regarded as a dangerous proceeding, as a War Secretary who does not owe his appointment to the President might be inclined to take the law in his own hands. It is needless to say that the Constitution has not been regarded in this proceeding, but it has been ignored since the triumph of the so-called Constitutional Revolution.

CARRANZA, it seems, started yesterday to explore the Toltec pyramids at Teotahuacan, which probably he has hitherto neglected to visit just as New Yorkers neglect to visit the Statue of Liberty and the Aquarium. Anyhow, at latest advices the deposed First Chief was at least thirty miles away from any peril that may abide in the capital and well on his way to Vera Cruz, where he may meet the Belgian Ambassador whom he so rudely treated last week.

It cannot be said that the latest news from Mexico is immediately reassuring, but the convention has undoubtedly taken itself seriously and accomplished something, though twenty days is a short time in which to quiet a disturbed country. The appointment of a Provisional President capable of forming an effective temporary Government to restore order while preparations are making for a new election is the first essential. The banishment of VILLA was not desired by anybody except CARRANZA, and if that discomfited leader now goes into exile, along with so many other patriots who have tried to help their afflicted country and gratify their own ambition since the Fall of 1910, he does so by his own choice. No tears can be shed over the political fate of CARRANZA. He had the situation in his hands, but his empty pomposity and childish intolerance have had the inevitable result.

TURKEY'S WAR.

Turkey's way both of getting into the war and of trying to get out of it is unique. She began war upon Russia by firing on the ships and bombarding the ports of that Power, with which she was quite at peace, with which she had no cause of quarrel, and between which and herself there was no pending question giving rise to diplomatic interchanges such as by their progress, and particularly by their suspension, form the usual prelude to war. But Turkey was at once informed that she could not go to war with Russia without making war also upon England and France. The Allies were resolved to stand together. The Ambassadors of the three allied Powers then demanded their passports.

Thereupon Turkey reconsiders. The Grand Vizier apologizes for hostile acts of the fleet in the Black Sea and Turkey's war may be over. At least that is the present status. It will probably be found that the hostilities against Russia were not formally authorized by the Government. Assuredly there are two parties in Turkey, and the opponents of war may yet prove to be the stronger. The conclusion has been general that the move against Russia was brought about by German influence. The two German warships, Goeben and Breslau, that fled from the Mediterranean and were transferred nominally at least to Turkish ownership, are reported to be still under the command of German officers. There have been many German officers in the Turkish Army and the Turkish Navy. The cable brought the report yesterday that Germany had made a war loan of $50,000,000 to Turkey. What foundation there is for these various reports of German influence and persuasion in Constantinople remains to be disclosed, but in the circumstances the demand of the Allies that Turkey shall free herself from German influence is justifiable.

It has been reported that Petrograd was well pleased at Turkey's hostile act, as it was felt that at the end of the war the Turks would be driven out of Europe and Russia would at last secure her long-sought access to the waters of the Mediterranean. That may have been the feeling in irresponsible quarters, but it will be better for Russia and for the Allies if Turkey remains neutral. They have a mighty task before them in overcoming the forces of Germany and Austria. There will be glory enough in that, without the added but not very considerable credit of whipping Turkey, too. Besides, the war is, in its present dimensions, as big as the world wants to see. With Turkey out of it there would be much greater probability that Greece, Italy, Bulgaria, and Rumania would also be able to hold aloof. The fewer the warring Powers, the shorter the war.

THE LONG BALLOT.

The ballots which the voter in New York City will receive and on which he will be expected to record his choice for sixteen officers of more or less importance will contain, one eighty-nine names and the other at least fifty-four names, and it is by no means as big or baffling a ballot as we sometimes have. In reckoning the chances of a voter making a reasonable choice in this extensive collection we may put to one side the ballot for delegates to the Constitutional Convention. This is submitted after a long interval, and there has not yet been invented any mode of election superior to the direct choice of delegates at large for the State and of delegates for each Senatorial District. We shall be pretty sure to get a fairly representative body of fairly able men, with enough material for leadership to assure a reasonably good Constitution. That is about all, under the best conditions, that we are entitled to hope for. We may also put aside the consideration of candidates for legislative offices. They are properly chosen by direct ballot, and though the work of the Legislature may well be reorganized and improved, there is no prospect of any serious change in the selection of its members.

But if we examine the so-called State ballot we find that there are thirty-two candidates for five offices that might be and ought to be filled by appointment. The offices are those of Secretary of State, who has very little responsibility; Controller, whose position is far less important than that of the United States Secretary of the Treasury; Treasurer, a still less important officer; Attorney General and State Engineer and Surveyor. Except the candidates for State Engineer, the names put forward for all these offices are relatively unknown save to a very small proportion of the voters of the State. Of these voters there must be a still smaller number who are able to pass more than a vague general judgment on the qualifications for these five places. Even if information regarding them were attainable we ask any one of our readers, when he gets home this evening, to try and recall the names of the men he voted for for these offices, the names of their chief competitors, and specifically why he chose the one set and rejected the other. It will be a good object lesson in the working of the suffrage and in the need and usefulness of a short ballot.

SENATOR ROOT AND JUDGE CULLEN.

We renew our suggestion that before going to the polls the voters today prepare a list of fifteen delegates at large to the Constitutional Convention and three district delegates, picking out the best names they can find among the nominees of all parties, and use this list for their guidance in marking the official ballot. The work of the Constitutional Convention will be very important. It ought to be intrusted only to men well qualified for such a task. In the few minutes that the voter remains in the booth there is insufficient time for a deliberate, intelligent choice. Time should be taken and sound judgment exercised.

We again urge upon the voters of all parties that to whatever other candidates they may give their vote they should certainly vote for Judge CULLEN and Senator ROOT. The wisdom, the great knowledge of Constitutional Law and the practical judgment of these experienced men will be of inestimable value in the deliberations of the convention.

INVESTORS AS RAILWAY RATE REGULATORS.

The Interstate Commerce Commission may fancy that it has the power to regulate rates, and the shippers may fancy that if they can hold the ear of the Commission they may regulate rates. Both shippers and Commissioners exercise their powers in the first instance only. The last word on rates rests with the silent class, which thinks rather than talks, and which acts as silently and surely as it thinks. It matters nothing how nearly ideal may be the regulation of rates by the Commission. It matters not at all how well the Commission's acts suit the shippers, whose counsel is so prominent in the proceedings. The rates may be perfection in these respects, but if they offend the investing class they cannot be permanent. There is no argument before investors, and there is no appeal from their decision. If the securities of the railways fall in the market, it is a sure sign of starvation for the railways, and a worse thing for the shippers than any rates which are possible.

That is exactly what has happened. Railway securities have fallen in the estimation of discriminating investors. One sure sign of it is the replacement of railway securities in the holdings of national banks. Another sign is the testimony of CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, in his letter to the President, published in yesterday's TIMES. In his own words: "Personally, I have no financial interest in railway securities. Watching the course of events and legislation, I long since ceased to feel confidence in them." He sold out because he foresaw what is now here. That was the course of action of a man who has been a Commissioner of railways for many years; a railway Director for other years; a man of inherited wealth and of training in the selection of investments; a man who in many relationships, such as that of Overseer of Harvard University, is influential regarding the investments of many others than himself. No doubt the Commission thinks him as wrong as he thinks the Commission. But the purpose of this comment is to show how superior his position is to that of the Commission.

He and his class have the final word, and the power of absolute veto over whatever action the Commission takes, good or bad. But the Commission cannot reach him and his class in any way. They buy and they sell on their judgment alone, and there is no power which can control them. They are exercising this privilege, and the regulation of railway rates in the recent manner is doomed. The country must have railways and cannot get them because the Commission affronts the investing class. It is the last word, and the decisive one. The Commission is helpless before a power which is uncontrollable by legislators or the courts, still less by the Commission.

THE GREATEST OF THESE IS CHARITY.

Certainly the prompt aid offered to the literally starving non-combatants of Belgium, and the Rockefeller Foundation's plan to devote "millions" to all non-combatants, of whatever nation, who can be reached, is a new and impressive example of the scope reached in the business of philanthropy in our country, and, indeed, in the world. It is to be noted that this marvelous and unprecedented enterprise of humanity is conceived and is to be carried out in a systematic, scientific, and entirely practical manner. It is as far as can be imagined from the ordinary impulse of vague benevolence yielded to without forethought and carried out in haphazard generosity.

Ample funds have been provided. An active, continuous, and permanent organization has been effected. Ample precaution is taken against waste or miscarriage. The initial act in the work—the relief of the Belgian sufferers—proceeds with the celerity, the exactness, and the adequacy that characterize the work of a great industrial concern. For the later and still more extensive operations of the Foundation a system of investigation, planning, and execution is established that will assure the greatest efficiency with the least possible cost of time or means. The task assumes the proportions of an international undertaking, and, so far as can now be judged, it will have the co-operation of all the Governments concerned. The spirit thus expressed and carried out is a product of modern times and to a certain extent, we may say, with pardonable pride, of American conditions.

We cannot say that this spirit is peculiar to America, for it has been manifested, its precious seed has been planted, and its rich fruit garnered in other lands. But in our own land certain conditions have promoted it. First there is the unprecedented number and extent of great fortunes here, the product of the comparatively rapid development of resources unequaled in richness and variety. Second, there is the fact that among the possible uses of wealth in America what we have called the business of philanthropy offers the greatest and most inspiring attractions to possessors who can appreciate them. Honors cannot be purchased in any marked degree in the United States. Social ambition has a limited and fluctuating field. Mere lavish display furnishes to wealth but a barren and narrow field. Great hereditary estates can be established only with infinite difficulty and confer no considerable prestige.

But philanthropy, as a carefully planned and permanent use for wealth, offers incalculable scope not merely for humane activity but for the exercise of the energies and the talents of the investor and administrator. This latest instance of its pursuit is on a world-wide scale, and will draw world-wide attention. But only in its scale does it differ from the work which the Rockefeller Foundation has so wisely and thoroughly conceived and prepared.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

"Accident" Hardly the Word.

Exactly how and why Sunday's grade crossing accident near Haverstraw happened will probably never be known. If one were to judge from the facts as observed by the only witnesses now available—those on the train that ran the automobile down—the instant killing of three persons and the infliction of terrible injuries on another were the result of an utterly reckless taking of chances in an attempt to avoid the few seconds' delay that a reasonable regard for safety would have dictated.

This theory of the slaughter is accepted with reluctance, however, as Dr. WEST, the driver of the car, was a man of intelligence and character, and his companions were members of his immediate family, for whose lives he would naturally have shown even more of consideration than for his own. Yet in broad daylight he turned in front of a rapidly moving train beside which he had been running along a parallel country road for half a mile, thus doing something which would be expected only of a party of wild "joy riders," such as this one certainly was not.

It has been suggested that the doctor did intend to slow down, or even to stop, but by mistake pressed his accelerator instead of his brake. But that is a possibility too remote for the serious consideration of anybody familiar with the details of automobile construction. A far more plausible explanation—if that term can be applied to what is only a guess—is that Dr. WEST came unexpectedly upon the turn in the highway that carried it across the railway track, and was moving, when he reached it, at such speed that, with no opportunity for deliberation, he had to choose between two dangers. Both were serious, but one—that of overturning the car if he moved onward in a straight line—gave the certainty of disaster, while the alternative course at least delayed the disaster for an instant and therefore was instinctively selected.

Whatever the truth, the lesson remains the same—an amount of care that should have been taken, that every driver of an automobile can take if he will, was not taken and the deaths followed. In other words, the accident, like every other that ever occurred at a grade crossing, was distinctly of the sort called avoidable and involved a large element of contributory negligence.

Cost of Safety from Fire.

Our curiosity, and presumably that of many others, as to the cost of building a house in such a way that a dinner party in one of its rooms need not be disturbed by a brisk fire burning in another is met with definite information contained in a letter sent to THE TIMES by HENRY B. HEARS, the architect.

Ex-Fire Chief CROKER'S dwelling, Mr. HEARS writes, besides being absolutely fireproof, has other superiorities. It is also proof against rats and smaller game, no dampness affects it except such as blows through open windows in the shape of fog, it is warmer in Winter and cooler in Summer than any house not of similar construction, and it is kept clean with much less work. Its cost was 40 cents a cubic foot, which is declared to be not materially greater than that of ordinary brick or stucco houses ranking with it in decorations, equipment, and conveniences.

As compared with houses otherwise similar, but built of wood in the common way, this one cost about 40 per cent. more. The advance over the usual brick-and-frame house was about 20 per cent., while the house of stucco on tile as built in general practice costs within 15 or 17 per cent. as much.

Considering that a house like Mr. CROKER'S needs no insurance, and that its owner, besides incurring no danger to life in it, will never suffer the loss and trouble which fire causes even to the "fully insured," these increments of expenditure do not seem either unreasonable or prohibitive. The general adoption of like or similar construction would work a wonderful diminution in this country's annual losses by fire, the total of which is now both colossal and disgraceful and which form a drain upon its resources not at all lessened by insurance except in the sense that the losses are widely distributed.

At Present He Is With Us!

When a man who writes to a paper is of a nature so retiring that he does not sign his name to his letter, it can be taken for granted that his modesty would suffer if any publicity were given to the subject of his communication. Therefore, as our earnest and constant effort is to avoid the giving of pain to anybody, we will not tell what one anonymous letter received yesterday was about, but we do venture to reveal that the substitute for a signature was "A Reader of THE TIMES—for the Present."

That, now, so far as memory serves, besides being highly interesting, is quite new as the description of a subscriber's status with relation to his newspaper. The man who writes to stop his paper because of something it has done or hasn't done is a familiar figure in the mails of every office. Familiar, too, is the fact that he and his class never have the slightest effect on circulation—a phenomenon from which various deductions might be drawn if it were necessary to do so. But to have a reader tell us that only "at present" can we count on his support and countenance is disquieting, because it is so difficult to decide whether we can in fair safety continue along chosen lines or whether it will be necessary to select others or lose him.

We can at least hope that the toleration of this particular correspondent will persist. He has a grievance, but that is the common human lot; and he would have to stop more than his paper to escape from it.

A Weapon Against Submarines.

Anybody who has ever seen the trouble that can be made for a steamship when a rope, even though not very long or very large, gets tangled in its propeller, will wonder what happened to the submarine, presumably German, that was reported in yesterday's dispatches as having run foul of a fishnet off the Dutch coast.

No craft, probably, has a "margin of safety" quite as small as does the submarine, and hardly anything can happen to it that does not produce consequences serious or fatal. Now, the nets used in deep-sea fishing are large, strong, and heavy, but they do not cost much, as war expenditures go, and the little incident described all too briefly in the cable news seemingly suggests a convenient and effective means of reducing these much-dreaded little assassins to helplessness.

With a net once around her organ of propulsion, a submarine would either remain permanently under water, which would be bad for her crew, or she would have to rise to the surface and remain there for a considerable time, within sight of hostile marksmen, and that, too, would be attended with most positive inconveniences.

ALL GERMANY UNITED.

But Her People Did Not Seek War, Writes Prof. Baginsky.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The following is an abstract of a letter received by me from Prof. Adolph Baginsky, who is the editor of the Archives of Diseases of Children, and also professor of the University of Berlin and the Director of the Kaiser and Kaiserin Frederick Hospital in Berlin:

If ever there was a people that loved and cherished peace and wished to make peace its supreme treasure, it was the people of Germany, which grew up and flourished under peace. But we were veritably overwhelmed with this war, in most ruthless fashion. If Germany had desired war, it could have gone into it much more comfortably and with the finest prospects of success ten years ago. At that time France and Russia were not yet prepared for war, and it would have been an easy matter for Germany to overthrow them individually or together. But there was not the faintest idea of that in Germany. And just as little did it entertain such an idea toward England; although England at that time irritated and challenged us by its policy of preventing the building up of our fleet. But Germany endured all this in patience.

Had it followed a policy of Bismarck's time, then perhaps such insults to Germany and Germany's citizens would not have been endured. No! We loved and strove for peace alone and paid no attention to the French and English, who could not understand that the Germans were taking away their trade because they did not compete successfully. It was only after the hostile powers, in carrying out the policy of the late King Edward to surround Germany with hostile allies; only after France, in her morbid moromania of "revanche" to regain Alsace-Lorraine, joined England in together bribing Russia by paying her large monetary subsidies—only then was the war sealed. Then it had to come, because the ruthless wills of these three nations demanded it. All that followed was merely the opportunity they sought.

Our people are full of vigor, through and through; full of courage. Indeed, among us all are soldiers! You ought to see the young and old of our people, with what courage and song and ringing music they march out! Now, after the war has been forced upon us our enemies shall recognize what it means to start trouble with Germany. Among us all parties have disappeared.

No one seeks to conceal for a moment the heavy task that this involves, and we do not expect to win an unbroken succession of victories. That is manifestly impossible in a campaign spread out over such a vast front. But what shall we think or say of these victories of journalists, sung out the ears of the world, without a word of truth?

The Prussians have beaten the Russians in two bloody battles, destroying an army of nearly 100,000 men in the Masurian swamps, yet, in the face of that, papers speak of "threatening Berlin." If it were not so sad, it were a matter to cause laughter.

SEES HYPOCRISY IN TEUTON SUPERIORITY.

Mr. Chesterton Regards the Prussian Point of View as a Case of Philosophic Sulks.

By GILBERT K. CHESTERTON.

In considering the Prussian point of view we have been considering what seems to be mainly a mental limitation—a kind of knot in the brain. Toward the problem of Slav population, of English colonization, of French armies, and of reinforcements it shows the same strange philosophic sulks. So far as I can follow it, it seems to amount to saying, "It is very wrong that you should be superior to me, because I am superior to you." The spokesman of this system seems to have a curious capacity for concentrating this entanglement or contradiction sometimes into a single paragraph, or even a single sentence. I have already referred to the German Emperor's celebrated suggestion that in order to avert the peril of Hunnishness we should all become Huns. A much stronger instance is his more recent order to his troops touching the war in Northern France. As most people know, his words ran: "It is my royal and imperial command that you concentrate your energies, for the immediate present, upon one single purpose, and that is that you address all your skill and all the valor of my soldiers to exterminate first the treacherous English and to walk over Gen. French's contemptible little army." The rudeness of the remark an Englishman can afford to pass over. What I am interested in is the mentality, the train of thought that can manage to entangle itself even in so brief a space. If French's little army is contemptible it would seem clear that all the skill and valor of the German Army had better not be concentrated on it, but on the larger and less contemptible Allies. If all the skill and valor of the German Army are concentrated on it it is not being treated as contemptible. But the Prussian rhetorician had two incompatible sentiments in his mind, and he insisted on saying them both at once. He wanted to think of an English Army as a small thing, but he also wanted to think of an English defeat as a big thing. He wanted to exult, at the same moment, in the utter weakness of the British nation in their attack and the supreme skill and valor of the Germans in repelling such an attack. Somehow it must be made a common and obvious collapse for England and yet a daring and unexpected triumph for Germany. In trying to express these contradictory conceptions simultaneously he got rather mixed. Therefore he bade Germania fill all her vales and mountains with the dying agonies of this almost invisible earwig, and let the impure blood of this cockroach redden from shore to shore to the sea.

But it would be unfair to base the criticism on the utterance of any accidental and hereditary Prince; and it is quite equally clear in the case of the philosophers who have been held up to us, even in England, as the very prophets of progress. And in nothing is it shown more sharply than in the curious, confused talk about race, and especially about the Teutonic race. Prof. Harnack and similar people are reproaching us, I understand, for having broken "the bond of Teutonism"—a bond which the Prussians have strictly observed, both in breach and observance. We note it in their open annexation of lands wholly inhabited by negroes, such as Denmark. We note it equally in their instant and joyful recognition of the flaxen hair and light blue eyes of the Turks. But it is still the aberrant principle of Prof. Harnack which interests us most, and in following it I have the same complexity of inquiry, but the same simplicity of result. Comparing the professor's concern about "Teutonism" with his unconcern about Belgium, I can only reach the following result: "A man need not keep a promise he has made. But a man must keep a promise he has not made." There certainly was a treaty binding Britain to Belgium, if it was only a scrap of paper. If there was any treaty binding Britain with Teutonism it is, to say the least of it, a lost scrap of paper—almost what one might call a scrap of waste paper. Here again the pedants under consideration exhibit the illogical perversity that makes the brain reel. There is obligation and there is no obligation; sometimes it appears that Germany and England cannot keep faith with each other; sometimes that Germany need not keep faith with anybody and anything; sometimes that we, alone among European peoples, are almost entitled to be Germans; sometimes that besides us Russians and Frenchmen almost rise to a Germanic loveliness of character. But through all there is, hazy but not hypocritical, this sense of some common Teutonism.

Prof. Haeckel, another of the witnesses raised up against us, attained to some celebrity at one time through proving the remarkable resemblance between two different things by printing duplicate pictures of the same thing. Prof. Haeckel's contribution to biology, in this case, was exactly like Prof. Harnack's contribution to ethnology. Prof. Harnack knows what a German is like. When he wants to imagine what an Englishman is like he simply photographs the same German over again. In both cases there is probably sincerity, as well as simplicity. Haeckel was so certain that the species illustrated in embryo really are closely related and linked up that it seemed to him a small thing to simplify it by mere repetition. Harnack is so certain that the German and Englishman are almost alike that he really risks the generalization that they are exactly alike. He photographs, so to speak, the same fair and foolish face twice over, and calls it a remarkable resemblance between cousins. Thus he can prove the existence of Teutonism just about as conclusively as Haeckel has proved the more tenable proposition of the non-existence of God.

Now, the German and the Englishman are not in the least alike—except in the sense that neither of them are negroes. They are, in everything good and evil, more unlike than any other two men we can take at random from the great European family. They are opposite from the roots of their history—nay, of their geography. It is an understatement to call Britain insular. Britain is not only an island, but an island slashed by the sea till it nearly splits into three islands, and even the midlands can almost smell the salt. Germany is a powerful, beautiful, and fertile inland country, which can only find the sea by one or two twisted and narrow paths, as people find a subterranean lake. Thus the British Navy is really national because it is natural. It has cohered out of hundreds of accidental adventures of ships and shipmen before Chaucer's time and after it. But the German Navy is an artificial thing, as artificial as a constructed Alp would be in England. William II. has simply copied the British Navy, as Frederick II. copied the French Army, and this Japanese or antlike assiduity in imitation is one of the hundred qualities which the Germans have and the English markedly have not. There are other German superiorities which are very much superior. The one or two really jolly things that the Germans have got are precisely the things which the English haven't got, notably a real habit of popular music and of the ancient songs of the people; not merely spreading from the towns or caught from the professionals. In this the Germans rather resemble the Welsh, though heaven knows what becomes of Teutonism if they do. But the difference between the Germans and the English goes deeper than all these signs of it. They differ not less than any other two European in the normal posture of the mind.

Above all, they differ in what is the most English of all English traits—that shame which the French may be right in calling "the bad shame," for it is certainly mixed up with pride and suspicion, the upshot of which we call shyness. Even an Englishman's rudeness is often rooted in his being embarrassed. But a German's rudeness is rooted in his never being embarrassed. He eats and makes love noisily. He never feels a speech or a song or a sermon or a large meal to be what the English call "out of place" in particular circumstances. When Germans are patriotic and religious they have no reactions against patriotism and religion, as have the English and the French. Nay, the mistakes of Germany in the modern disaster largely arose from the fact that she thought England was simple when England is very subtle. She thought that because our politics have become largely financial they had become wholly financial; that because our aristocrats had become petty capitalists they had become entirely corrupt. They could not seize the subtlety by which a rather used-up English gentleman might sell a coronet when he could not sell a fortress; might lower the public standard to-day to forever the future. In short; the Germans are quite sure that they understand us entirely because they do not understand us at all. Possibly, if they began to understand us they might hate us even more, but I would rather be hated for some small but real reason than pursued with love on account of all kinds of qualities which I do not possess and which I do not desire. And when the Germans get their first genuine glimpses of what modern England is like they will discover that England has a very broken, jolted, and irregular habit of having an obligation to Europe; but no sort of sense whatever of having any obligation to Teutonism.

This is the last and strongest of the Prussian qualities we have here considered. There is in stupidity of this sort a strange, slippery strength, because it can not only use outside rules, but outside reason. The man who really cannot see that he is contradicting himself has a great advantage in controversy, though the advantage breaks down when he tries to reduce it to simple addition, to chess—or to the game called war. It is the same about the stupidity of the one-sided kinship. The drunkard who is quite certain that a total stranger is his long-lost brother has a great advantage until it comes to matters of detail. "We must have chaos within," said Nietzsche, "that we may give birth to a dancing star."

In these slight notes I have suggested the principal strong points of the Prussian character—a failure in honor which almost amounts to a failure in memory; an egomania that is honesty blind to the fact that the other party is an ego, and, above all, an actual itch for tyranny and interference, the devil which everywhere torments the idle and the proud. To these must be added a certain mental shapelessness, which can expand or contract without reference to reason or record—a potential infinity of excuses. If the English had been on the German side the German professors would have noted what irresistible energies had evolved the Teutons. As the English are on the other side, the German professors will say that these Teutons were not sufficiently evolved; or they will say they were just sufficiently evolved to show that they were not Teutons. Probably they will say both. But the truth is that all that they call evolution should rather be called evasion. They tell us they are opening windows of enlightenment and doors of progress. The truth is that they are breaking up the whole house of the human intellect that they may abscond in any direction. There is an ominous and almost monstrous parallel between the position of their overrated philosophers and of their comparatively underrated soldiers. For what their professors call roads of progress are really routes of escape.

CULTURE.

Is No More Kindly to Genius in Germany Than Elsewhere.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With more than pardonable pride Germany and Austria point to their musical achievements. The world is surely indebted to those two nations for some of the proudest and most glorious names in the melodic art. But when the Germans today vaunt their superior culture and derogate the outpourings of other peoples it is entirely proper to examine their title somewhat attentively. If Germany (I include German Austria) is and was the greatest exponent of true culture, it stands to reason that the Germans should be the first to recognize genius, and to reward it according to its merits. That barbarians like the English and the French permit their poets and musicians to starve is, of course, to be expected, but we are led to believe that German culture is of an entirely different material.

For instance, the man who bears what is doubtless the greatest name in pure music, Beethoven, was in such distressed circumstances toward the close of his career that he gratefully accepted the charity bestowed upon him by the London (sic) Philharmonic Society. Mozart, most mellifluous of composers, died in Salzburg a heartbroken young man, and was recompensed for "Don Juan," "Figaro," and "Magic Flute" by being allowed to occupy a pauper's grave. Schubert, sweetest of singers, whose songs are so pregnant with love and beauty and passion, literally starved to death. Gluck, father of modern opera, composed mediocrities in Vienna; it was only after a lengthy sojourn in Paris that he was enabled to give the world "Armide" and "Orfeo." The scene of Mendelssohn's greatest successes lay in London, which he visited ten times, while Meyerbeer did his greatest work in Paris. Handel went to England, and worked there during his entire career, while Haydn, who was also frequently in London, based two of his most important works, "Creation" and "Seasons," upon English libretti.

Of the tribulations of Wagner, of his incessant struggles for recognition, it is needless to speak. Curious, however, is it to reflect that his two stanchest supporters, the two who, out of Germany's millions, really recognized his transcending genius, were both addicted to madness. King Ludwig killed himself in Starnberger See, near Munich, while Nietzsche, (afterward his bitter enemy,) passed away in an insane asylum.

The point I am trying to make is merely this: If Germans really are so much more cultured than other people, why, in the name of heaven, do they allow their great men to starve, and in a later generation glorify themselves because these poor, neglected ones happened to be of their own nation?

Atrocities—A German View.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I would like to reply to the letter of your correspondent signed "American Lawyer." While my sentiments are not with the Allies I feel for Belgium just as much as he does, but if he will refer to the last part of Dr. Burgess's article he will find (and we all know it) that Belgium had the choice of avoiding the present situation. This talk about her injured honor, &c., at so tremendous a sacrifice is ill-advised.

Furthermore, I wish to call attention to the fact that the Germans are committing a war, which means, ever since the world existed, the burning of villages and wrecking things in general. That is all the Germans are doing. They are not committing the atrocities that the Allies would like us to believe.

I am not writing this to belittle the crime in Belgium, but simply to say that if "American Lawyer" thinks the Germans take pleasure in what they are doing he is very much mistaken. Unfortunately, European conditions demanded it, and what the Germans are doing in Belgium is nothing compared to what the Russian Cossacks are doing to the Germans in East Prussia.

Dr. Butler's Views on the War.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Several times recently the statement has appeared in print and in dispatches from Europe that President Butler of Columbia University has, either in a letter addressed to the Paris paper Le Temps or otherwise, expressed views in relation to the conduct of the present war and in criticism of the efforts made to influence American opinion in behalf of the one or another of the belligerents.

Permit me to say that President Butler has neither made any such public expressions himself nor has he authorized them.

WHAT'S WRONG IN GERMANY.

And How Some Men of German Descent Feel About This War.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent, Frank Seggebruch, says: "Mere assertions do not prove anything, nor do they convince anybody." This is why Mr. Seggebruch's letter is unconvincing. He should read the article in THE SUNDAY TIMES of Oct. 25, by James M. Beck, and then he will have the facts that are upon record.

I am of German descent, and I am proud of it, my grandfather being Consul General for Saxony and Baden to the United States for fifty years, and Prussian Minister to the United States for one year, and my father being Vice Consul for twenty-five years. One of my uncles, now deceased, was Baron von der Heydt, son of the Prussian Minister of Finance during the Franco-Prussian War. Another of my uncles was Gen. von Winterfeldt, who acted as Fluegel Adjutant to the father of the present Kaiser, and who at one time commanded the Kaiser's guard troops around Berlin. I have four first cousins, all officers in the German Army, in the present war, and about half a dozen second cousins. I, therefore, cannot be said to be prejudiced against the Germans, though proud to be a born American myself, and my family has always mixed in the highest society in the Fatherland. But my sense of justice leads me, as it does, to my knowledge, many other descendants of Germany in this country, to denounce the Kaiser and his system of militarism.

Any person who has lived in Germany, and is not merely carried away by his imagination, knows what are the real conditions there today. He knows that the Germans of the middle classes are merely slaves and that the upper classes rule with the iron hand of the Middle Ages. Will Mr. Seggebruch deny that, before the war, if a German dared to criticise the administration he would be put into jail? Will Mr. Seggebruch deny that a man must serve in the German Army whether he will or not? Will Mr. Seggebruch deny that a common soldier cannot rise above the rank of a non-commissioned officer in the German Army? Will Mr. Seggebruch deny that the German officer treats his soldiers more like dogs than human beings? I myself have often seen an officer strike a soldier upon the back with his sword for no greater offense than getting the parade step wrong.

Will Mr. Seggebruch deny that many of the German soldiers hate their officers? If they did not hate their officers, why should so many German officers be found shot in the back on the field of battle? My uncle, Gen. von Winterfeldt, who was through the Franco-Prussian War and ought to have known, told me often that many German officers during that war were found shot in the back, and that the only theory was that they had been shot by their own men. Will Mr. Seggebruch deny that the German public has no voice whatever in the foreign policy and administration of the Fatherland? If he does deny it, he knows nothing about the German administration. The upper classes—and in Germany this class represents militarism—in Germany, as in Russia, Austria, and other absolute monarchies, rule, and they alone rule. They have more rights today than they used to have, because the systems in such countries as Germany, Austria, and Russia, being more consolidated, are the more powerful. It is the policy to give the people in these countries every right that is not vital to the ruling classes, but should the commoner infringe upon such a vital right the system crushes him.

No, Mr. Seggebruch, you may speak for yourself, but you do not voice the sentiment of some thinking Germans in this country. I look for the defeat of the Kaiser and his caste of militarism, for in it I foresee a German Republic wherein the least German will have rights equal to the highest.

The C. B. L. Not in Politics.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your paper Monday morning on Page 8, Column 2, contains a statement that "members of the Catholic Benevolent Legion called at Mr. Whitman's rooms." &c. On behalf of the Catholic Benevolent Legion we wish to correct the impression that any of the members would so far forget duty and propriety as to visit political headquarters of any candidate with a view to permitting him to advertise their support. The Catholic Benevolent Legion is purely a business fraternal insurance organization. It takes no part in politics and would repudiate the effort of any candidate, or of any member of our organization, to make it appear that the Catholic Benevolent Legion can be used for political purposes. As citizens we select our candidates in the same manner as other citizens, but we do not permit ourselves as an organization to be exploited in behalf of any political candidate.

ELSIE FERGUSON SEEN IN 'OUTCAST'

She Gives a Skillful Performance in an Interesting Play at the Lyceum.

BY HUBERT HENRY DAVIES

His Latest Work Is a Sincere and Cheerless Study of a Pretty Pariah.

OUTCAST, a play in four acts, by Hubert Henry Davies. With Elsie Ferguson. At the Lyceum Theatre.

Geoffrey.....Charles Cherry
Hugh.....Warburton Gamble
Tony.....J. Woodall Birde
Taylor.....Leslie Palmer
Miriam.....Elsie Ferguson
Valentine.....Marguerite Leslie
Nelly.....Anne Meredith
Maid.....Nell Compton

With the advantage of Elsie Ferguson's able and sincere performance in the rôle from which the play takes its title, "Outcast" was produced for the first time in this country last evening at the Lyceum Theatre. It is a piece in four acts, by Hubert Henry Davies, the English playwright, who is best known in New York as the author of the charming "Cousin Kate." This latest work of his was written with the knowledge that it was to serve to bring Ethel Levey from her secure place in the music halls of London to the more ambitious stage of Wyndham's Theatre. It was produced there in early September with Gerald Du Maurier in the rôle which, at the Lyceum, falls to Charles Cherry.

"Outcast" is a four-act study of the ways of a man with a mistress. It is a sympathetic but entirely dispassionate and unsentimental exploration into the cruel problem of the woman pariah. Like countless playwrights before him, Mr. Davies elects to lead his characters down a lane from which he knows there is no turning. For his own play he elects none of the traditional methods of escape, and if, when 11 o'clock comes, he climbs the fence, he at least does not pretend that he has found a real way out. He presents an ancient question. He does not pretend to answer it, but simply leaves it with the implication that there is no answer.

His play is sincere, straightforward, intelligent, unaffected. That is why it is interesting from first to last. Also, that is why it is cheerless.

The "outcast" is Miriam, a cheerful, somewhat philosophic, and quite uncomplaining girl of the London streets. Chance brings her to the door of Geoffrey's flat at a time when he is busily going to the devil with the aid of whiskey and drugs which he has sought for consolation when the woman he loved "chucked" him for a more advantageous match. The girl, recognizing, perhaps, a certain free masonry established between them by his utter misery, lends him a friendly arm. She covers, and in the ends takes care of. They join hands as pals. They settle into the relation of man and mistress.

She fails deeply and miserably in love with him, and her suffering is due not so much to the fact that he will not marry her, though she is wistfully eager for that, but because she knows his tenderest feeling is for Valentine, the woman who had jilted him. It is Miriam's speechless woe which, in the end, shows Valentine not merely that Geoffrey cannot tear himself from this girl, but that she herself cannot tear herself from her devoted, inarticulate and quite uninteresting husband. So Valentine goes drearily back to him and Geoffrey and Miriam set forth together for South America.

He offers her marriage in the casual manner of one offering something one does not value. But she will not have it that way. She has been reading the marriage service and it has added something to her social philosophy.

"Whether you think of marriage as religious or as just human," she observes slowly, "it's a pretty solemn business. It's for good women. It's their reward."

Thus Miriam. Whether this touch at the end was intended by Mr. Davies to be of high significance in its context and as an indication of his purpose, it is not actually of much significance, for there is nothing to suggest that it is an expression of anything more than a passing mood. It is Mr. Davies's disposition to study and picture moods that, while it provides him with interesting material, heightens the impression that "Outcast" is indeterminate.

"Outcast" is also curiously and troublesomely lacking in what may be called filling. In its intellectual absorption in his main study it seems as though Mr. Davies had forgotten to add those little touches of the atmospheric, the incidentally amusing, the casual, the irrelevant, which may do nothing to push a story on its way, but which often serve to give surrounding scenes the light and shade, patchwork quality of life.

Miss Ferguson apparently does not seek to have the play seen in her shadow, but she meets to the full the demands of a vivid and by no means easy rôle. Hers is a discreet, intelligent and artistic performance. It is apace with her marked progress in the theatre. Mr. Cherry is fully satisfactory in a part immeasurably better suited to him than the one in which he appeared at the same theatre two months ago.

Mr. Davies has not tried to make Geoffrey a hero and Mr. Cherry makes no furtive attempt to defeat the playwright's intentions. Miss Leslie is not blessed with a comfortable rôle. She is asked to present a portrait which Mr. Davies himself never finished.

But the play is essentially Miss Ferguson's. She is one of the reasons why it is interesting, for "Outcast" is decidedly that. It is also unpleasant. It could not honestly be anything else.

SOCIAL NOTES.

The wedding of Thomas Blagden, r., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Blagden of this city, and Miss Ethel Noyes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Noyes of Washington, D. C., is to take place at noon Saturday, Dec. 19, in St. John's Church, Washington. Their engagement was announced last June.

At Hammerstein's Victoria yesterday a long bill of vaudeville acts was headed by Singer's midgets, twenty entertaining little persons who put on a very complete vaudeville show all by themselves. The midgets were clever in so many different lines that the audience grew enthusiastic at each new turn. The little people were assisted by some very good animal specialties, some very large dogs, and several Shetland ponies. Other acts on the bill included Orville and Frank, Norcross and Holdsworth, two minstrel men; Ramsay Morris and May Newman, Bob Dalley and company in a musical skit, Harriet Burt in songs, Jack Lorimer, the Scotch comedian; Joe Howard and Mabel McCane, Claudius and Scarlet, Dainty Marie on the wire, and a Keystone comedy.

Irene Franklin in new songs is the Palace headliner this week. Miss Franklin made her first metropolitan appearance in four years yesterday and was given a rousing welcome. Burt Green accompanied Miss Franklin at the piano. The dancing number of the week is Mae Murray and John Jarrott. Will M. Cressy and Blanche Dayne present a rural comedy sketch written by Mr. Cressy, "The Man Who Remembered." Harry L. Delzay is a "Mono-Dramatic-Vaudo-logue," in which he reveals the scope of his versatility. Billy Gould and Belle Ashlyn sing, dance, and chat. Maria Lo and company present "Porcelain," a reproduction of famous Dresden and other china, depicted in a series of living tableaux. Mullen and Coogan provide "Odd Nonsense," and Bill Pruitt is "The Cowboy Caruso." Nevins, Snyder and company present a cycling act.

At Keith's Royal Theatre this week are Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven in "The Masher," Bessie Wynn, Paul Morton and Naomi Glass in a musical satire called "Before and After," a sequel to the former offering of "My Lady of the Bungalow", Claud and Fannie Usher in "The Straight Path," Brooks and Bowen, Joe Cook, "the one-man vaudeville show of all creation" and Houdini, Handsell and Louie, lightning oil hunters, and the Alpine troupe on the aerial double wire.

Others on the bill are Adelaide and Hughes, James and Bonnie Thornton, Wellington Cross and Lois Josephine, late of Ziegfeld's Follies, in a singing and dancing specialty; Laddie Cliff, the Seven Brown Bluegrass cowgirls; the Bijouves, skaters, and Cooper and Smith, presenting "The Bell Boy and the Porter."

Eddie Leonard and Mabel Russell are the headliners at Keith's Alhambra Theatre this week. Others are B. and R. Rolfe in "The Bride Shop," featuring Andrew Tombes and Lola Wentworth; Valerie Bergere in her latest sketch, "The Lion Tamer," an absolutely circus life by Edward Weitzel; Claire Rochester, Fred Sosman, the monologist; Lane and O'Donnell, tumblers; Mme. Doria in "The Maid's Absence," an original dog sketch; Frank Whitman, "the boy behind the fiddle," and "The Lelands," paintographists.

At the Broadway Theatre is Harry Bulger, former musical comedy star, in a new act; Mike Bernard and Amy Butler; Barney Fagan and Henrietta Byron in a little musical comedy, "Captain Kidd, Jr.," and many other acts.

At the Bronx Opera House the attraction is "The Dummy," with the same cast which was seen in this delightful play during its run at the Hudson Theatre.

"Bringing Up Father," a farce founded upon George McManus's well-known newspaper cartoons, is the bill at the Grand Opera House.

Maccart and Ethelyn head the vaudeville bill for the entire week, presenting two new one-act plays at the American.

A change in plan at the Vitagraph Theatre brought two new film dramas into that playhouse yesterday. They were Cyrus Townsend Brady's five-part dramatic story of the far-reaching influence of a child, "The Little Angel of Canyon Creek," pictured from the book of the same name by Col. Jasper Ewing Brady and presented by the Western Vitagraph Company under the direction of Rollin S. Sturgeon, and a three-part human interest drama, "Two Women," written by James Oliver Curwood, and produced by Ralph Ince with a cast including Anita Stewart, Earle Williams, Julia Swayne Gordon, and Harry Northrup. In place of the usual daily releases, the Vitagraph Company has decided to include with the feature pictures two short comedies, selected from the best month's releases. The comedy pictures for the current week include "In Bridal Attire," produced by Lee Beggs, and "The Professional Scapegoat," produced by Sydney Drew.

"The Spoilers" has returned to Broadway for an indefinite run at the Rose Garden Theatre.

John Barrymore in "The Man From Mexico" will be seen on the screen of the Strand Theatre all week. In the motion-picture version of the play a wider scope is possible, and the star has unusual opportunities to display his artistic talent, his ludicrous mannerisms, and mirth-provoking pranks. The play was produced by the Famous Players Film Company. Another interesting feature this week is the showing of a new installment of war pictures taken on the European battle fields.

This week at Hammerstein's Lexington, Fifty-first Street and Lexington Avenue, "The Ordeal," in five parts, is the feature attraction produced by the Life Photo Film Corporation. Sterling and Keystone comedies, Pathe scenic pictures, and the Topical News complete the picture programme. Mlle. d'Ainert, from the Opera Comique, Paris, sings new selections, and Roy Lepeari, the singing blacksmith, and Miss Dorothy Sothern, soprano, complete the programme.

In this era of crook plays, cheap vulgarity in so-called musical comedies, and many other crimes against good taste on the stage "The Only Girl," which slipped quite unobtrusively into the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre last night, is as refreshing and delightful an entertainment as one might well wish to see. Of vulgarity there is none; of cheap, white light comedy there is still less, but of genuine, splendid fun and pretty, tuneful music—for "The Only Girl" is a musical comedy—there is a-plenty.

Perhaps it is hardly fair to call this new piece by Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert a musical comedy. The disrepute into which that term has fallen, and the idea that it conveys of rows and rows of girls, comedians who fall up and down stairs, and slap sticks and seltzer bottles, makes "musical comedy" hardly the name to apply to this new musical play. The authors themselves have chosen to call it a musical farcical comedy, although a farcical comedy with music would be the better way of classifying it.

In writing the book Mr. Blossom has gone back to Frank Mandel's comedy, "Our Wives," produced with indifferent success a season or so ago at Wallack's Theatre. Into this comedy he has interpolated some very stately looking girls—just six of them—some fresh complications, and a large number of good lyrics for which Mr. Herbert has done his best in the musical end. To this combination Joe Weber, who made the production, has added two extremely pretty stage settings, so that there is really nothing left to be desired.

The piece is as well played as if the actors and actresses in it all had names to conjure with along Broadway, which most of them have not. The six girls who make up what may be called the chorus have real voices, and the men and women in the leading rôles all sing, too, and sing very well. In addition, they can act, and, occasionally, dance, although they are not called upon to do that very often.

The story is that of a librettist who has a musical show to write, but who can't compose the music. From the flat above him comes the strains of a wonderful song, and he sends for the unknown musician. The librettist, who is not exactly a woman hater, for he has as his friends a soubrette and some of the chorus women from his last show, but who has no idea of giving his love to one woman, expects to find some young man, but the writer of the music turns up in a very pretty young woman.

It is hardly necessary to go on with that thread of the story. The finish of the last act can quite easily be guessed, but before that finish comes three of the librettist's men friends have been married and are being bossed about by their wives, which prevents him from really making up his mind that he is in love with his co-worker although she has been in love with him all the time.

As the librettist Thurston Hall was excellent, as were his friends, played by Richard Bartlett, Jed Prouty, and Ernest Torrence. The latter was particularly good in his rôle of Andrew McMurray, a Scotch painter. The wives of three friends, Josephine Wessell, as Mrs. McMurray, was easily the best, although no fault was to be found with Josephine Whittell or Louise Kelley as the other two. As a rather rough soubrette, Adele Rowland was entertaining and refreshing. Wilda Bennett, as the young composer, had little to do except look pretty and sing one song, but she did both without any effort. John Findlay, who played a combination old butler and valet, was charming.

Mr. Herbert's music has just the right swing to it to make the piece exceedingly popular, although there is no one air in "The Only Girl" which stands out strongly enough to attract attention to the play. At the conclusion of the second act last night Mr. Herbert, backed up by Mr. Blossom, made a little speech.

As has been intimated before, "The Only Girl" is not a show for the tired business man. It is instead an entertainment for the very wide-awake person, young or old, who goes to the theatre for a thoroughly enjoyable evening.

OPERA PRINCIPALS BACK FROM EUROPE

Twenty Metropolitan Singers Arrive in Boston from Naples.

HARDSHIPS IN WAR ZONE

Miss Farrar's Long Third-Class Journeys—Polacco Slept in a Freight Car.

BOSTON, Nov. 2.—Twenty principals and seventy-five members of the chorus of the Metropolitan Opera Company arrived from the European war zone by way of Naples on the steamer Canopic tonight. High-salaried singers, used to traveling in luxury, told of seemingly endless journeys in third class railroad cars, freight cars, farmers' carts, and afoot in their efforts to escape from the troubled area.

Among the passengers were Enrico Caruso, Emmy Destinn, Geraldine Farrar, Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Arturo Toscanini, Giorgio Polacco, Lucrezia Bori, and Frieda Hempel.

Miss Farrar, who had been touring Europe with Mrs. Newman of New York, was in Munich when war was declared. "We left immediately for Amsterdam, where we hoped to obtain passage on the steamship Nieuw Amsterdam for New York," said Miss Farrar. "We reached there safely, and made reservations, but after hearing that the North Sea was lined with mines and scouted by hostile warships we decided to go to Naples, where we knew that Mr. Gatti-Casazza was gathering the party from the fighting countries. All I remember is what seemed to be constant travel in smelly, dirty, third-class trains, sleepless nights, and a bayonet at my back, while numberless officials demanded passports, passports."

"Soon after leaving Amsterdam I engaged as secretary a Dutch youth, Paul Voss. The boy was invaluable. He did the talking, while Mrs. Newman and I did the smiling.

"After being shunted about for eleven days, waiting on sidings for troop trains to pass, sleeping in crowded cars, having our clothing tumbled in and out of our trunks, often going hungry, we found ourselves back in Munich.

"Soldiers were parading the streets, crying women clung to husbands and sweethearts who were leaving for the front, and confusion reigned everywhere. We pinned the Stars and Stripes prominently on our clothing and, with our ever-faithful Dutch boy, boarded an express train. This time we went through Switzerland, where traveling was just as uncomfortable as on our fruitless trip to Amsterdam. When we reached Naples and I viewed the ship which was to carry us to the United States my heart sank.

"'Only one funnel!' I exclaimed to Mrs. Newman. Ah, how different when I always travel on ships with at least three! But we found the boat more than comfortable and are mighty glad to be back in the United States once more." Caruso, looking the picture of health, said he had been living the simple life on his farm outside Florence.

Giorgio Polacco and his wife, who were in London, where Polacco was conducting, hurried to Carlsbad, where they were detained for fifteen days by the authorities. They made the journey to Milan and then they were released in farmers' carts and freight cars. In Milan they lived for five days in a freight car, sleeping on straw.

The Canopic had an uneventful passage, although her decks were shrouded with canvas at night, and no lights were permitted after sundown.

The entire opera company, with the exception of Mme Destinn, who left Boston for New York late tonight, and a few who went to one of the uptown hotels, spent the night on the steamship and will leave here for New York on a special train at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

CARL FRIEDBERG'S RECITAL.

A New Pianist Appears in Carnegie Hall.

There are many attractive qualities about the piano playing of Carl Friedberg, who made his first appearance in New York at Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon. There is a feeling for tonal beauty and for tonal coloring, within rather restricted limits, a technique that gives him delicacy, cleanness, and independence of articulation, and a sensitive feeling for some of the finer nuances. But there is a little too much of delicacy and sensitiveness in his style for some of the things he undertakes to play. Now, Mr. Friedberg comes with the appellation of "the poet of the piano." There are various kinds of poets, but he seems to have centred his attention on a slender lyric vein.

There are pianists who especially affect the pianissimo; but they are usually wise enough to limit their repertory accordingly. Beethoven's elegiac and introspective sonata in E major, Op. 109, lends itself to the kind of treatment that Mr. Friedberg gave it, and his performance, though small in scale, and not quite finding expression for the fullest emotional reach of the last movement, had much beauty. His playing of Liszt's arrangement of Bach's G minor organ prelude and fugue was clearly and soundly set forth, though the fugue would have had a greater breadth if the tempo had not been so much accelerated at the end. But Schumann's "Etudes Symphoniques" suffer no such treatment as Mr. Friedberg gave them, inviting the audience to view them through the wrong end of an opera glass. Their soaring flight was held very close to the ground, and their magnificent proclamation was very confidentially conveyed. It was big music played in a small style.

Mr. Friedberg played also three of the later piano pieces by Brahms and a group of Chopin numbers.

MISS HINKLE'S RECITAL.

A Beautiful Voice and Style Displayed in Aeolian Hall.

It was good to recognize in the singing of Miss Florence Hinkle, who gave a song recital in Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon, all the rare beauty of voice, all the admirable technical control, all the intelligence and genuinely musical feeling that have heretofore won high praise for her singing. There were also to be noted a greater freedom and spontaneity of expression; and there was especially a gain in her understanding and interpretation of French songs, as well as of German. French diction, which has been one of the less successful elements in her singing. Her French group, comprising songs by Fourdrain Vuillermoz and A. Goring Thomas, with Leoncavallo's "Serenata Francese," was in truth charmingly sung.

Miss Hinkle began with three interesting and little-known old songs, airs from R. da Capua's "Vologeso," Rhigini's "Gerussalemme Liberata," and Monsigny's "Le Roi et le Fermier," and her programme also included, besides the French group, one of German Lieder and one by English and American composers. Charles Albert Baker's accompaniments were excellent.

TWO MORE PLAYS OPEN.

"Mary Goes First," with Marie Tempest, and "Papa's Darling."

In addition to "Outcast," which came into the Lyceum Theatre last night, and "The Only Girl," which opened at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre, there were two other new offerings in the theatres. At the Comedy Theatre "Mary Goes First," a comedy by Henry Arthur Jones, was presented with Marie Tempest in the stellar rôle. The piece concerns the struggle of two English women for social leadership in a small English town

COLLEGE FOOTBALL GAMES HERE TODAY

Gettysburg at Fordham and Trinity Plays New York University.

Fordham put on the finishing touches yesterday in preparation for the tussle with Gettysburg at Fordham Field this afternoon. As this is the hardest week on the Maroon schedule, the practice yesterday was limited to a long signal drill. Dunn and Yule also got a chance to try their kicks against the wind that swept over Fordham Field.

Gettysburg is coming to Fordham today with the best football representation it has ever boasted, and instead of being a practice game for the Fordham-Navy contest next Saturday, the Bronx collegians expect this afternoon's game to be the hardest played at the Maroon field this season. The Gettysburg eleven has a very strong defense, and during this season held Pennsylvania and Penn State to 14 to 0 and 13 to 0, respectively. Fordham, on the other hand, has one of the lightest lines in the East and has been forced to build the offense and defense around the exceptionally strong back field it possesses. Yule and Dunn have both figured prominently in keeping the Fordham string of victories unbroken by their good tackling.

Beside seeing the Fordham team wearing numbers for the first time, today's game will witness the introduction of the new Canadian mode of attack into local football circles. The Maroon warriors were busy all last week studying the Dominion methods under the eye of "Jack" Shea and expect to use the new system to overbalance the superior weight and line plunging of Gettysburg. "Bud" Wymard also spent some time yesterday in perfecting his goal kicking.

Following the introduction of numerals by Fordham, the Gettysburg players have also decided to appear tagged in this afternoon's game.

In yesterday's practice on Ohio Field Coach "Tom" Riley applied the finishing touches to the New York University football team, which will play the Trinity College eleven this afternoon on Ohio Field, in the annual Election Day game, at 3 o'clock. Although the games have been closely contested, Trinity has won all the games played with the Violet team since 1906, with the exception of two which resulted in ties, and as a result the New York boys are going to work hard to break the winning streak today. Only work of the lightest sort was engaged in yesterday, but this included a thorough signal drill and kicking practice. Wiener, the Violet's left tackle, who has shown ability in placement kicking in this season's games, spent some time in this department and demonstrated accuracy with his toe. The backfield men and the ends came in for much attention.

Without a single exception, the Violet line is now intact, and yesterday's practice included all who will start in the game today. From end to end the Violet team presents a more formidable appearance than in any previous game in which it has played this season, the presence of Waldman and MacKenzie in the end positions allowing Coach Riley to shift all his men back to their regular places. The backfield, after nine days without a game, is in the best of condition and well prepared for today's battle.

Capt. Huntley, Bernstein, and McNally will probably be used for the greater part of the offensive work against the New Englanders. They expect a difficult proposition in the New Englanders, and a close game is expected. The game will probably draw the biggest crowd of any in several years, the 500 students of the Medical College having voted to attend in a body. The probable line-up will be:

RUTGERS AND W. AND J. HERE

Plans Being Made for Game at Polo Grounds Nov. 28.

Negotiations for a football game at the Polo Grounds on Nov. 28 between Rutgers and Washington and Jefferson, the team which defeated Yale, are progressing favorably. If the match is arranged it is very likely that the proceeds will be given to the Belgium Relief Fund. The Rutgers eleven, which is coached by George Foster Sanford, is anxious to get a New York showing and is doing everything possible to make the long trip of W. & J. here worth while. Last year Washington and Jefferson arranged to play at the Polo Grounds in November with the Carlisle Indians, but when Glenn Warner realized that he was going to have a weaker team than usual he cancelled the engagement.

The Polo Grounds gridiron will be the scene of the football game between the High School of Commerce and Manual Training H. S. on Nov. 14.

Faculty to Lift Ban on Athletes.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Nov. 2.—There was a general good feeling in Lehigh's football camp tonight when it became known that the petition of 600 students to the Faculty praying for the lifting of the probation of several athletes had received favorable consideration. This means that Chenoweth, the sensational little quarter back; Tate, the giant tackle, and Inge, the big freshman guard, will be available for the team if they can displace other men already filling positions they are trying for. Another reason for gratification is the reappearance of Grumback, who had an arm broken in the Franklin and Marshall game. Grumback may be able to play in the Lafayette game. The practice today consisted simply of a snappy signal drill, with the prospect of a light scrimmage tomorrow and heavier work Wednesday.

Today all the regulars were out, once again, excepting Mattern, who was slightly injured in Saturday's game. Cahill's injured leg is in fair shape again and he ran the Varsity squad in old-time fashion. Frank Gross, the big guard, who was hurt in the Yale game, arrived today, but did not get into uniform.

Middies' Deficiencies Pointed Out.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 2.—Talks by Coaches Howard and Vaughan on weaknesses indicated in the game against the North Carolina Aggies on Saturday were among the main incidents of the practice at the Naval Academy this afternoon. The scrimmage was short, but much attention was devoted to kicking, handling the ball, and formations. Blodgett continues to practice punting under the direction of Ensign Dalton, and some of his kicks this afternoon covered sixty yards. Capt. Overesch rested this afternoon, and others who were kept from the game by injuries received in practice were Hicks and Mills, guards, and Wessell and Westphal, backs. Lieut. Jonas H. Ingram, a former player and coach at the Academy, was among the coaches this afternoon, he working with the backs.

Stevens Works Out Defense Plans.

Stevens "Tech" eleven devoted yesterday afternoon to a long drill along the lines that proved to be deficient in Saturday's game with Delaware College, namely, in improving their defense against end runs and in getting off forward passes. "Jimmy" Ferera, who has been instructing the men in this department, developed an end blockade that could not be penetrated by the scrub team, and the passes were made in a satisfactory manner. After a hard scrimmage against the scrub team, the Varsity went through a long signal drill in order to learn some new plays that have been introduced, these plays may be used in the game next Saturday, when the boys journey to Troy to line up against Rensselaer.

YALE REGULARS REST.

Signal Rehearsal Extent of Drill for First and Second Teams.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 2.—All of Yale's regulars and most of her second-string players were allowed to rest today by Coach Frank Hinkey. Every player who faced Colgate last Saturday was on the field, however, as were also Capt. Talbott and Field Capt. Aleck Wilson. Talbott coached the first eleven, while Hinkey gave keen attention to several promising members of the second team. Wilson was in uniform, and handled punts and passes an hour. Both players will probably be found in the signal drill tomorrow, but are not likely to be pitted against Brown on Saturday, as the coaches wish to take no chances on them.

The work for the first and second teams amounted to a long and thorough signal rehearsal. The third and fourth teams battled for half an hour. Two important shifts were made in the positions of a pair of players who have been prominent all the Fall—Jack Wiley and "Tug" Wilson. Wiley has been at centre, and Wilson at right end most of the time. They were placed behind the line, Wiley playing full back and Wilson half back. Roberts, the former end, who has resumed scrimmaging after three weeks' absence, caused by a wrenched knee, also went to half back. Ainsworth went to half back on the second eleven for the signal drill, but it was asserted that this was not a permanent change, and that he has not been displaced by Scovil. Harry Le Gore was on the field, but did not line up even for signals. Despite a severe cold that handicapped his work at right tacke on Saturday, George Sheldon was in the line-up.

Ex-Capts. Tom Shevlin, who came from Minnesota to see some Eastern football, and Robert Corwin were among the spectators. The Varsity backs will probably begin practice in handling punts in the new bowl tomorrow.

TIGERS' DEFENSE WEAK.

Coaches Teach Them Elementary Points in Football.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 2.—The Princeton team reverted to elementals in the practice today as a result of the slump in the game against Williams on Saturday. The coaches found a lot of fundamental faults with both line and back field men, and had the backs and forwards at the tackling dummy for a long session. The open field defense work of the Tigers on Saturday was miserable, and directors of Princeton's play are taking no chances of a repetition of this sort of errors at Cambridge next Saturday.

Eddie Trenkmann, who has been incapacitated since the Dartmouth game, was back at guard today. He has been pronounced fit again by Trainer Keene Fitzpatrick. McLean, the tackle, who has been out of the play for over a fortnight, also returned to work, his injured shoulder having healed. The return of the two men will bolster up the line greatly, and means that the Tigers' forwards will present their maximum strength against the Crimson.

There was no scrimmage this afternoon, but the Varsity went through a long signal drill and rehearsed several new plays which will be tried out against the scrubs during the week. Field Coach Ponfield gave the men a blackboard explanation of the new formations and then supervised the rehearsals while it ran through them. Times directed the eleven at quarter back with Glick at half back. Moore started the practice at the other half back position, but gave way to Dickerman later. Driggs, who seems to have displaced Law at full back, had a drill in punting. When the regulars completed their signals drill Eddie Hart took charge of the linesmen and ran them up and down the field until twilight prevented further work. The line is in for the hardest kind of a week under Hart, whose energy seems tireless.

MICHIGAN GAME IN VIEW.

Cornell Now Will Prepare to Tackle the Wolverines.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 2.—Head Coach Sharpe decided today that most of the Cornell football men had earned a rest for another day and only a few men were out this afternoon for practice. The entire squad reported late in the day, however, for a blackboard talk, when the coaches outlined to them the work that was scheduled in preparation for the Michigan game.

Cornell scouts who had watched the Harvard-Michigan battle sent in their reports today and the coaches now have a basis to work on.

Shuler, the star left half back and the biggest ground gainer of the team, was confined to the university infirmary today, but there is no alarm over his condition. The coaches sent him there more for a rest than for treatment. He is a bit run down as a result of the strenuous work of the past three weeks, but it is stated that he will be back in the line-up later in the week. Mike Hinnert, the husky "sub" full back and line plunger whom Cornell hopes to match against Maulbetsch of Michigan, is improving rapidly and he may get out for practice in a few days. The balance of the Varsity squad seems to be in shape except Oviatt, whose condition is the cause of some concern. Oviatt's captain was far off form in the Holy Cross game and some fear is felt that he will not be able to come back. He has lost one month's practice this Fall through an injury, and unless he returns to form in a very short time the coaches will not be able to count on him for the big games.

Hard Week Ahead for Army.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 2.—Coming through the Villanova contest in splendid physical condition, the Army began today preparations for the big game here Saturday with Notre Dame. The work today was light, consisting of a blackboard talk, followed by a sharp signal drill, which was designed principally to work out whatever slight kinks or bruises were prevalent after last Saturday's game. Only a few of the regulars were in the drill. Tomorrow the hard week's grind begins in earnest, for the Army men will be driven at top speed every day in their final polish for the Notre Dame battle. It is expected that Oliphant and McEwan, neither of whom has played in nearly three weeks, will be in some of the scrimmages. Lieut. Thompson, West Point, 1904, who was a crack Army line man, reported here today, and will remain until the Navy game, to assist Capts. Sutton and Graves and Lieut. Pullen in the coaching of the Army's forward wall.

Columbia Interclass Water Polo.

In the first contest of the interclass water polo series at Columbia University, the seniors trimmed the juniors by the score of 5 to 3. L. Mouquin, Captain of the Varsity team, has given medals which will be presented to the team winning the series. Oscar Myers, a junior, who stroked the junior Varsity crew at Poughkeepsie last June, scored for his team on a thrown goal in the first period. H. W. Rogers of the Varsity punting under the direction of Ensign Dalton, and some of his kicks this afternoon covered sixty yards. Capt. Overesch rested this afternoon, and others who were kept from the game by injuries received in practice were Hicks and Mills, guards, and Wessell and Westphal, backs. Lieut. Jonas H. Ingram, a former player and coach at the Academy, was among the coaches this afternoon, he working with the backs.

NO HARD GRIND FOR HARVARD THIS WEEK

Crimson, However, Will Polish Off for Game with Princeton on Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 2.—Although they played through the hardest football match of the early season Saturday against Michigan, the 'Varsity players at Harvard were not coddled this afternoon and all had to come out for a hard day's work. There was no actual football playing, and probably there will be little, if any, before the Tigers get here Saturday; but the regulars work against the substitutes, both on attack and defense, was almost the real thing.

The team as it is lined up this afternoon was made up as it will start against Princeton, with one exception. Bigelow, who played through most of the Michigan game, was at centre, but Wallace will be in the line-up again by Wednesday. Pennock got back at right guard, which balanced the line much better, and there is no reason now, so the coaches say, why he should not be able to stand the gaff for the remainder of the campaign.

Eddie Mahan not only returned and played half back, but put in a long session of drop kicking. He also punted for the first time, and his kicks were accurate. His drop-kicking practice all was done close to the goal, and all of his fifteen shots from the 15-yard line counted. The return of Mahan sent Hardwick out to his end again, which will be another help for Harvard against the Tigers. Hardwick's best defensive strength was lost against Michigan because of the protective scheme for the Wolverine's forward passes. The scrubs will work several days against the 'Varsity with the Princeton plays, but there will be little rough work.

Capt. Brickley came out again and kicked a few goals. Using his left foot and shooting from only the 15-yard line he missed only one of his fifteen tries.

The 'Varsity attack today was watched by Charles D. Daley, the army coach, who in 1900 led the Crimson team. Daley was here only for the day and returned to the Point tonight. Ex-Capt. Bob Storer assisted in the individual coaching.

WALSH DROPS OUT OF CASE.

Will No Longer Endeavor to Get Athlete Powers Reinstated.

P. J. Walsh of the New York Athletic Club has given up the fight to have Bill Powers, the former Irish-American A. C. athlete, reinstated by the Amateur Athletic Union. Three weeks ago Mr. Walsh took a personal interest in the Powers affair, and brought his case to the attention of the Registration Committee in the form of an appeal, after Powers had been suspended for almost two years for an alleged infraction of rules in connection with a set of games he managed for the Tipperary Men's Association. Mr. Walsh gives no reason for retiring from the fight, but it was learned yesterday that Powers, without informing the lawyer, had promised Jake Stumpf, Chairman of the Registration Committee, to tell all he knew about the games, and then failed to keep his promise.

The Registration Committee believes Powers has information that would cause a wholesale upheaval in amateur athletics if he would divulge it. In several talks with Mr. Stumpf the suspended athlete hinted at professional action on the part of a number of the most prominent athletes in the United States who took part in the Tipperary games.

It is not Powers himself that has caused the athletic world to take interest in his case, but the facts he is concealing is what every one connected with the sports would like to know. By telling all to the Registration Board Powers can once more get into the good graces of the A. A. U., provided his own status has not been affected, but even if he does "peach" and it is found he used professional methods in securing entries he will be barred forever from the governing body.

RECORD BALLOON FLIGHT.

New St. Louis Carries Four Persons Eighty-four Miles.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 2.—A flight of eighty-four miles yesterday with four persons in the basket, made by the balloon New St. Louis, piloted by H. E. Honeywell, is said to establish a new world's record for a continuous flight with four passengers. The balloon rose from St. Louis yesterday morning and, after a flight of two and a half hours, descended at Kinmundy, Ill., eighty-four miles distant. The longest previous flight with four persons is said to have been seventy miles.

Brothers in Brighton Auto Race.

John De Palma in a six-cylinder racer will endeavor to defeat his brother, Ralph De Palma, at Brighton Beach this afternoon in an automobile race. John yearns to beat his more experienced brother, but the two have never met in the same race with cars that were anywhere near matched. There are a number of other drivers entered who will give the De Palma brothers a run, however, more than twenty-five entries already having been made. The veteran Chevrolet, Jack Le Cain, Erwin Bergdohl, the Philadelphia driver who gave Ralph De Palma a hot contest at the last Brighton Beach meet, and others will compete. The appearance of Louis Chevrolet marks his return to the racing game. He has not raced since his accident in the Vanderbilt Cup race of 1910. The entry list includes, in addition to those mentioned, Benedict in a Mercer, McCarthy in Bollot's Peugeot, Dickinson, Stutz; Vail, Otto car; Jessop, Chevrolet; Le Cain, Chevrolet; Barbino, Argyle; Watson, Mercer; Moore, Mercer; Murchil, National; Adams, Lozier; Jackson, Correja; Galvin, Marquette-Buick; Steinreich, Benz; Schmidt, Isotta; Graef, Jamaica Special, and others. There are five sprint events on the card.

H. C. Burnett a Golf Champion.

Surviving several hard fought matches H. C. Burnett finally won the golf championship of the North Jersey Country Club. Extra holes were necessary before he won in the first and second rounds, while in the 36-hole final his opponent carried him to the home green. The summary:

First Round:—H. C. Burnett beat E. L. Hicks, 1 up, (19 holes;) C. F. Sweeney beat E. D. Rapp, 8 and 6; J. Walder beat E. Ballerstein, 5 and 4; H. W. Mason beat T. J. Mooney, 1 up; H. M. Allwood beat R. Chriswell, 7 and 6; W. B. Kinkead beat E. H. Gray by default; C. S. Chapman beat H. W. Mason, 4 and 3; C. Felix beat E. W. Russell, 4 and 3.

Second Round.—Burnett beat Sweeney, 1 up, (20 holes;) Walder beat Mason, 3 and 2; Kinkead beat Allwood, 6 and 5; Chapman beat Felix, 2 and 1.

Semi-Final Round.—Burnett beat Walder, 5 and 4; Chapman beat Kinkead, 3 and 2.

Final Round.—Burnett beat Chapman, 2 up.

Another Team for Six-Day Race.

Frank Cavanagh of Newark, the "Irish Giant," who is considered the logical successor of Frank Kramer as American champion, will be a starter in the annual six-day race in Madison Square Garden, which will get under way on Nov. 16. Charles Piercey, one of the latest arrivals from Australia, will be Cavanagh's partner. This team was signed yesterday by Manager MacFarland, who expects them to prove one of the best in the race. Cavanagh started in the big grind three years ago, but was only a cub at that time, and quit after going ten hours. Since then he has competed in six smaller six-day races, and is figured to be well-seasoned for the big race in this city. The Australian is a veteran, having been successful in a number of six-day contests in the antipodes and in Europe.

RANK SQUASH PLAYERS.

National Association Classifies Leading Racquet Wielders.

Following the plan adopted by the United States National Lawn Tennis Association in ranking the leading players according to their playing abilities, the Ranking Committee of the National Squash Tennis Association yesterday announced the ranking of fifty prominent players in the association. The committee, which is composed of George Whitney Harvard, Chairman; Charles M. Bull, Jr., Heights Casino; J. O. Low, Heights Casino; F. T. Keeler, Columbia, and J. V. Onativia, Jr., Harvard, ranked the players on their performances of last year. It is expected that with more comprehensive information the list of players will be considerably augmented next year.

The players are grouped into four sections. The first five players are ranked according to their standing in last year's tournament. The three remaining sections are arranged according to alphabetical order. Dr. Alfred Stillman 2d, Harvard Club, the present champion, receives the post of honor. The runner-up for the national title, George Whitney, Harvard, is placed second; Malcolm D. Whitman, Harvard, the former national lawn tennis champion, is third on the list, and Charles M. Bull, Jr., Heights Casino, and E. T. Winston, Harvard, fill the remaining places in the first section.

A strong effort will be made this Winter to increase the interest in the sport. In addition to Class A interclub tournaments it is intended to arrange Class B matches for second teams to play on the opposite courts to Class A teams. National scratch and handicap tournaments will also be arranged. If the Yale courts are finished the Yale club will be admitted to membership in the National Association, and it is expected that the Squash Club will also join the organization. The ranking follows:

Section 1—Dr. Alfred Stillman 2d, Harvard; George Whitney, Harvard; Malcolm D. Whitman, Harvard; Charles M. Bull, Jr., Heights Casino; E. T. Winston, Harvard.

Section 2—S. H. Bird, Princeton; H. Davis, Harvard; W. H. Y. Hackett, Harvard; L. du Pont Irving, Harvard; J. O. Low, Heights Casino; D. P. Starr, Harvard.

Section 3—H. C. Bulkely, Columbia; A. J. Cordier, Heights Casino; S. Davis, Bridgeport Country Club; R. Goepel, Heights Casino; Hamilton Hadden, Harvard; E. du Pont Irving, Harvard; F. S. Keeler, Columbia; Frank Kidde, Montclair Athletic Club; Lyle E. Mahan, Columbia; J. V. Onativia, Jr., Harvard; E. W. Putnam, Columbia; A. W. Riley, Princeton; T. Sanger, Harvard; H. S. Satterlee, Harvard; S. Stoddart, Bridgeport Country Club.

Section 4—G. Abbott, Heights Casino; F. M. Bladgen, Harvard; R. A. Boyeson, Columbia; J. W. Bergen, Harvard; A. Cammack, Harvard; D. R. Catlin, Bridgeport Country Club; M. L. Cornell, Columbia; H. W. Hac, Englewood Field Club; T. Hague, Montclair Athletic Club; A. H. Lockett, Englewood Field Club; Arthur R. Marvin, Columbia; D. Mills, New Jersey League; D. R. Noyes, Squash; T. Phipps, Harvard; W. C. Bell, Crescent A. C.; E. H. Pool, Harvard; W. E. G. Pope, Crescent A. C.; R. E. T. Riggs, Heights Casino; Dr. Ewing Taylor, Harvard; Allan Tobey, Princeton; M. L. Torrance, Crescent A. C.; R. H. White, Columbia; R. E. Wigham, Columbia; J. H. Williams, Heights Casino.

FOUR TENNIS SURVIVORS.

National Fall Squash Tournament Reaches Semi-Final Round.

With the completion of play yesterday four survivors were left in the Fall tournament of the National Squash Tennis Association, at the Heights Casino, Brooklyn. The Harvard Club and Heights Casino are equally represented in the semi-final round. J. O. Low and Charles M. Bull, Jr., will play for the Heights Casino, while J. V. Onatavia, Jr., and E. du Pont Irving represent the Crimson organization.

Three matches were played, two of which required extra games to reach a decision. J. O. Low, Heights Casino, defeated F. S. Keeler, Columbia, 16—13, 12—15, 15—2. Low led 13—5 in the first game, but Keeler rallied and made it deuce. The Brooklyn player captured the extra games. Low again led 11—4 in the second game, but a splendid recovery by Keeler enabled the latter to make the games even. Keeler went to pieces in the final game. His placement shots were good, but he lacked the speed and aggressiveness of Low, who will play du Pont Irving in the semi-final round.

Charles M. Bull, Jr., Heights Casino, found H. C. Bulkely, Columbia, a hard proposition. It was an interesting game, with first one player and then the other in the lead. Bull is drawn against Onatavia, who scored a straight-game victory over A. J. Cordier, Heights Casino. The summary:

Third Round—J. O. Low, Heights Casino, defeated F. S. Keeler, Columbia, 16—13, 12—15 15—2; Charles M. Bull, Jr., Heights Casino, defeated H. C. Bulkely, Columbia, 15—5, 10—15, 15—7; J. V. Onatavia, Jr., Harvard, defeated A. J. Cordier, Heights Casino, 15—11, 15—6.

Athlete Rau Killed in War.

Verification of a report that Rau, the champion sprinter of Germany, was killed in the war before Mons, France, was received here yesterday by Hannes Kolehmainen, the Finnish runner, who was a close friend of Rau. Clippings from a Finnish paper conveyed the information that Rau had been shot in a German charge on French intrenchments more than a month ago. He was an officer in the Kaiser's army, but his rank was not stated in the dispatch. Rau represented his country in the last Olympic Games, but because of an injury previous to the games did not figure very prominently. He ran fifth in the 220-meter contest, finishing behind Lippincott, Reidpath, and Young of the United States and Applegarth of England. He was credited with 6:10 4-5 for the 100 meters in a race in Germany, which now stands as a record for the country. Rau claimed he ran the distance in 0:10 3-5, but this mark was not allowed. He was one of the foreign athletes who were scheduled to come here next year for the national championships at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco in August.

Record in Boston Six-Day Race.

BOSTON, Nov. 2.—A new record for the first six hours was made by the eleven teams entered for the six-day bicycle race, which began here today. George Wiley, who was paired with Clarence Carman, withdrew to devote his attention to motor-paced racing. His place was taken by George Cameron of New York. All the teams were even at 149 miles 3 laps, seven miles ahead of the record, at the end of the first six hours. The competing teams were: Goulett-Hill, Moran-McNamara, Walthour-Root, Lawson-Drobach, Carman-Cameron, Thomas-Ryan, Rudi Russe-Madonna, Lawrence-Magin, Kopsky-Hansen, Anderson-Mitten, Piercy-Logan. The teams will race from 4 o'clock each afternoon until 2 o'clock the following morning, except on Sunday, when an earlier closing hour will be set.

WOLGAST BREAKS ARM, BOUT STOPS

After boxing eight rounds, the last three with a broken arm, "Ad" Wolgast threw up the sponge and admitted himself defeated in his bout with Freddie Welsh, the lightweight champion of the world, last night in Madison Square Garden.

The bout was to have gone ten rounds, and as it was the first appearance here of Welsh since he won his title in his fight with Willie Ritchie in England, an old-fashioned fight-loving crowd was in attendance and fairly well filled the Garden. Clubmen who have not been much in evidence of late at fistic encounters returned to the game feeling sure that the known fighting qualities of Wolgast and the expert boxing of Welsh would make a meeting worth seeing even if it did not result in a knock-down and drag-out affair. It would take a couple of the rough fighters of the Wolgast type to bring that about, but Welsh's promises to make it a knockout affair brought them back in hopes that the meeting would at least result in a good lively mix-up.

That possibility perhaps brought the attendance of a couple of women, who appeared just before the opening bout, dressed in riding costumes, over which they wore heavy automobile coats and covered their heads with soft hats of the prevailing fashion. Their seats were on the Fourth Avenue side of the Garden, and their appearance in the amphitheatre was detected at once by sharp eyes of the throng that packed the galleries, and they were escorted to their seats by their rather shamefaced escort to a chorus of catcalls and shouts such as only the gallery boys can indulge in. Once the boxing began they were forgotten, however.

With the two preliminary rounds out of the way, the first one a joke and the second a lively bout of ten rounds between Ed Morgan of England and Eddie Wallace of Brooklyn, which was won by the local boy, the principals in the main event bounded into the ring exactly at 10 o'clock, which feature of the evening contributed to the satisfaction of the crowd, who registered a mental vote of thanks to the new interests that recently took over the big arena for boxing exhibitions.

"Ad" Wolgast, the "Michigan wildcat" and a former holder of the lightweight title, was first to appear, and was greeted with a most enthusiastic round of applause, as he was from the first a manifest favorite with the crowd.

Stripped of his brown bathrobe and standing in his gray trunks and American colors for a belt he weighed 135½ pounds and took the northwest corner of the ring. There was a sure-enough bear-like, eat-'em-alive cast to his features as he glanced up when Welsh leaped through the ropes nimbly and took his seat in the opposite corner. The champion's green bathrobe covered a figure that was that of a perfectly trained athlete. The back of dead green covered a muscular trunk devoid of everything but bone and muscle, and as he stripped and showed his clear, clean skin he was greeted with the cheers of those who recognized the athlete trained to the minute. His weight was announced as exactly 135 pounds. His smile was one of confidence, and it was a sort of continuous performance all through the grim meeting, in which he not only gave but received stinging welts that should have taken the smile from any one's countenance.

That Wolgast was out for blood was shown when the men stepped to the centre of the ring for the first round. Wolgast was the aggressor and as was expected began to rush and got in a good welt on Welsh's body with which the latter replied with three rapid blows—left, right, left—on Wolgast's rudy countenance. After an exchange of love taps in Welsh's corner there was a clinch in the centre of the ring, with Wolgast getting in a smart upper cut and then a body blow with his left before Welsh got away. Welsh accepted the slugging features of this round by sending in short-arm blows in close quarters in return for those he received, apparently determined to show that he could fight as well as box. But it was the sort of tactics at which Wolgast was his superior and at which he excelled. Welsh got two good body blows just before the bell sent the men to their corners. Wolgast had the better of the round.

Sharp, close work marked the opening in the second round, Wolgast crouching low and getting blow after blow in the face in the exchanges in which he landed on Welsh's wind and made the champion wince as they struck home. Wolgast was using his right more effectively at close quarters, though the way in which he plied his left at intervals showed that he was no one-handed worker. Welsh aimed at Wolgast's head continuously, and his pre-eminent skill as a boxer made him land almost at will except when the men were at close quarters, when Wolgast would get in his powerful punch, playing tattoos against the ribs of his lighter rival. The Michigan boy got in one uppercut that sent Welsh's head back with a jolt that made it snap like a whip, to which Welsh replied with three more of his long-arm blows in lightning succession. The round ended just after Wolgast, goaded to desperation by his inability to break Welsh's guard, rushed him for a couple of stinging blows, the first a right swing and the second a left-half uppercut. If force of blows told, Wolgast had a trifle the better of it, but if boxing points were the measurement Welsh had a trifle the better of it in this round.

Welsh showed more than his skill as a dancer and ability to get away from punishment in the third, when he relied more on his skill than on the force of his blows. Wolgast was still trying to make brute strength count. There were repeated clinches as a result, and the referee had to break them so repeatedly that it was plain that the round was meant by Welsh as a breathing spell. But just at its end Wolgast managed to rush things and shoved Welsh to the ropes on three occasions, banging at his wind, and as Welsh slipped on one attempt to sidestep Wolgast landed a terrific uppercut that brought Welsh's teeth together with a snap and for an instant wiped the theatrical smile from his face. It was this blow that Wolgast says was the direct cause of his quitting, though he did not feel its full effect until he had gone two rounds longer.

That Wolgast was suffering much pain was shown in the next two rounds, for he slowed up perceptibly and ceased in a measure his aggressiveness. He clinched his teeth, rushed in in bull fashion as usual, and showed a tendency in the fourth to go easy with his right hand and depend on his left. But at the conclusion of the round he made no complaint, though to those in his corner it was plain that his arm was puffed just above the wrist.

In the sixth, Wolgast could do little but accept without much effective return the swings and jabs that Welsh sent at him in showers, landing almost at will when the pair were not in their frequent clinches.

Wolgast's aggressiveness was there, but his viciousness was gone, and though he drove his left repeatedly at Welsh's ribs and chest, and tried to get up at his chin, his right hand was of no service.

In the seventh and eighth Wolgast worked almost entirely with his one hand, and, of course, at such odds with so sprightly an opponent, who had not been weakened by punishment, the affair became a farce so far as fighting went. Wolgast was game and accepted the punishment as it came. Welsh said after the bout that in the last three rounds he did nothing but box a trifle and ward off Wolgast's blows and savage rushes as best he could as he felt certain from Wolgast's failure to use his right that his hand or arm was out of commission and that he had not the heart to continue to punish so game a rival as Wolgast was showing himself to be.

At the end of the eighth round Wolgast told his seconds that it would not be safe to go on any longer, as he knew that either his arm or wrist was broken, and so the bout came to an end, an inglorious one for the crowd, that wishes to see one or the other settle the question of supremacy with a knockout blow.

UMPIRE SHERIDAN DEAD.

Heart Failure Ends Long Career of Dean of All "Arbitrators."

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 2.—"Jack" Sheridan, dean of the umpiring staff of the American League, died here today from a sudden attack of heart failure following a three weeks' illness. He was 62 years old and had been an umpire thirty years. His illness followed a sunstroke suffered in the course of a game in August. Sheridan and William Klem accompanied the Giants and White Sox around the world as umpires last Winter.

HIGH SALARIES MUST GO.

Baseball Peace Will Wipe Out Fabulous Demands of Players.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—Representatives of organized baseball and the Federal League have reached an agreement on the subject of players' inflated salaries even though they are not yet ready for a general peace proclamation, according to a statement tonight by Charles Weeghman after a long session with August Herrmann, President of the National Commission.

"Club owners have tired of putting up small fortunes in order to hold their stars. Take, for instance, Walter Johnson's case. Demand that he be paid $20,000 for a signature on a Federal contract. That means $700 a game, assuming that he would appear in thirty full games.

"The baseball men I have conferred with are opposed to these high salaries. Not only will the new contracts of the stars contain lower figures, but the clubs will cease to number as many players as last year."

Glimm First in Columbia Run.

W. F. Glimm, a senior, won the second Van Amringe cross-country run at Columbia University yesterday afternoon, covering the six-mile course in the actual time of 30:13. The course was lengthened a mile, but in spite of this fact a big field started, and only two of the runners dropped out. L. G. Smith, a senior, and Captain of the Varsity cross-country team, finished eleventh, after winning the first Van Amringe run with ease. Smith ran from scratch. The order of finish follows:

1—W. F. Glimm, '15, (4 minutes.) 34:13. 2—W. H. Diekmann, (4½ minutes;) 3—R. L. Hunt, '17, (5 minutes;) 4—T. W. De Buhl, '16L. (5 minutes;) 5—R. F. Shepherd, '17, (3 minutes;) 6—H. W. Look, '17, (4½ minutes;) 12—L. G. Smith, '15, (scratch;) 13—M. Shiffman, '16, (4 minutes;) 14—R. A. Thompson, '17, (5 minutes;) 15—W. Blecker, '15, (6 minutes.)

Levy Victor in English Billiards.

Play in the amateur English billiard championship tournament for the Dewar Challenge Trophy started at Doyle's Academy, in Forty-second Street, last night, when Sylvester Levy scored an unexpected victory over Fred Ridgeway by a score of 250 to 175. Levy took forty-six innings to run off the necessary points. Ridgeway was eliminated from the tournament because he played a game far below his usual standard. He missed many easy attempts to tally, and otherwise helped Levy to victory by invariably leaving the balls in good position for the opponent. Twenty men will take part in the tournament. Tonight Howard Jones will play John Knight. Score by innings:

Another Saddle Record for Uhlan.

C. K. G. Billings of this city, who now uses the champion trotter Uhlan as a saddle horse, amused himself on Sunday at his farm on the James River, just outside of Richmond, Va., by trotting Uhlan under saddle against time. Mr. Billings tipped the scale at 191½ pounds as he weighed out for the trial, which was merely a dash of an eighth of a mile. Over the Saratoga track during the August racing, Mr. Billings rode his famous black gelding an eighth in 0:13⅘, which was a world's record for the distance. On Sunday the big horse did the trick in 0:13, with "Ed" Tipton and C. G. Wilson of this city, Fred W. Stevenson of Chicago, Capt. Thomas Parrington of Lexington, Ky., and W. J. Careter of Richmond acting as timers. One watch caught the performance at 0:12⅘, but the others stopped at 0:13 flat, and that was accepted as the record.

In case Direcum succeeds in his attempt to beat Uhlan's harness mile record of 1:58½ this week, Mr. Billings has announced that he will have Uhlan sent against time to sulky, though he has been retired from harness efforts for the past two years.

JIM BLUEJACKET REPENTS TOO LATE

Giants Will Not Take Back Indian Pitcher Who Jumped to the Federals.

Jim Bluejacket, the Cherokee Indian pitcher, who jumped the Giants to join the Brooklyn "Feds" last season, is sorry now and wants to come back to the New York team. President Hempstead and Secretary Foster both said yesterday that they would have absolutely nothing to do with the jumper and that he would not be taken back under any consideration.

Bluejacket was purchased by the Giants last season from the Bloomington, Ill., club. When the purchase was announced the Indian pitcher was besieged by Federal League scouts, and, despite the fact that the New York club had assumed his Bloomington contract, Bluejacket ignored it and signed with the Federals for a big salary.

Bluejacket was not a whirlwind success with the Brooklyn "Feds," although he pitched several high-class games and for a time was quite an attraction. His work, however, did not impress the Brooklyn club so very much, and it is stated that the salary which he has been offered for next season was not as large as he expected. Like several other players, Bluejacket is afraid of the Federal League's future, and wants to line up with organized ball again before the break comes.

"We don't want any deserters in our club," said President Hempstead yesterday. "Bluejacket broke his contract with us and now he can go his own way. We don't want him."

Secretary Foster remarked also that while the Brooklyn Federal club owners have stated many times that it was against their policy to harbor contract jumpers, they nevertheless knew that Bluejacket's contract with the Bloomington club was also binding with the Giants, and yet they did not hesitate to countenance his breaking this contract.

Bluejacket's case is typical of many others which will come before organized ball before next season. The major leagues are fully determined not to take back any of the players who jumped to the Federals, and the jumpers are in a position now where they must stick at any salary which is offered them or not play ball at all. They have no redress whatever, if they are dissatisfied with conditions imposed upon them by the outlaw league.

Secretary Foster has in his possession one of the Federal League contracts, which was offered Pitcher Bill Ritter, and he stated yesterday that this contract was drawn up in such a way that the Federal League could sever it at any time under certain conditions. Secretary Foster said that all the talk about the "Feds'" contract being fairer to the ball player than the contracts of organized ball was all bosh.

President Hempstead said yesterday that he had heard nothing officially about any plan of organized ball to discuss peace terms with the Federal League. He did not believe the story sent out from Cincinnati that August Herrmann had admitted that he had been treating with the Feds.

Secretary John Heydler of the National League said that there had been no meeting of the National Commission in Chicago, and that Johnson and Herrmann had been in conference it was an unofficial affair, as Governor Tener had no part in it whatever.

As to the reported mysterious conclave of the American League in Chicago next Friday, President Frank

SUBSCRIBE TO STOCK OF RESERVE BANK

VOLUNTEER STAFF FORMED

City Banks Lend Employes to Handle Deposits Stored Temporarily in Clearing House Vaults.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York received yesterday $3,229,290 on account of subscriptions to its capital stock, in answer to the call sent out by the Federal Reserve Board for the first installment, amounting to 1 per cent. of the capital and surplus of each member bank. The membership consists of all the national banks in the State, numbering 474, and the aggregate payments will be about $200,000 more than was received yesterday. The members outside of this city sent their money by express and registered mail, and it is expected that the balance due will arrive tomorrow.

As the Federal Reserve Bank has no vaults of its own, it had arranged that the money should be sent to the Clearing House, the vaults of which had been put at its disposal. There a counter was rigged up and a force of men from various banking institutions was put to work, under the supervision of B. W. Jones, Assistant Secretary of the Bankers' Trust Company, who was designated Acting Assistant Cashier of the Reserve Bank.

The largest payments were made by the national banks in this city and these were brought in by officials of the banks. Deliveries by express and registered mail were received throughout the day. Payment had to be made in gold or gold certificates and Mr. Jones and his assistants were kept busy counting the $20 gold pieces that came in, although most of the payments were made in certificates. These had to be counted, too, but they could be handled more quickly and were in large denominations. It was nearly 6 o'clock before all the money had been counted and stowed away in the Clearing House vaults.

The member banks in the interior were urged to make their payments from money in their own vaults rather than to ask their correspondent banks here to pay out of balances maintained by the country banks, and in almost every case they did so. One of the largest banks was called upon to pay less than $10,000 on behalf of its country correspondents and another had but three requests to make payments. There were some cases in which the city bank was called upon to make the payment merely to save time, the country bank stating that it would forward the amount in gold or certificates to restore its balance.

The Directors of the Federal Reserve Bank made public this circular sent to member banks yesterday by Pierre Jay, Chairman:

The Directors have received from the Secretary of the Treasury a telegram dated Oct. 26, in which he expresses his intention of formally announcing the establishment of the Federal Reserve Banks in each of the Federal Reserve districts on Nov. 16, 1914. In view of the shortness of the time between the receipt of this telegram and the proposed date of opening, it is obviously impossible for the Directors and officers of this bank to assemble a permanent organization adequate to receive the volume of reserves to be deposited by member banks and transact such business as may be undertaken at first. The staff of the bank at its opening must, therefore, of necessity be largely temporary, drawn from the banks in this city, until the permanent staff can be gradually selected. The spirit of co-operation shown by those banks which have already been asked to contribute to this temporary staff is evidence that the member banks reciprocate the earnest desire of the Directors that the Federal Reserve Bank of New York shall be conducted with due regard to efficiency and security and in such manner as to be of service to its member banks.

On Nov. 16 payments on account of the part of their reserves which the members are required to keep in the Reserve Bank will be due. These will be about $100,000,000, so that the force, temporary or permanent, will have a much bigger job than it had yesterday. In their circular the Directors ask that these payments be made in gold so far as possible. The circular says:

In order that the Federal reserve system may from the outset become the main depositary of the gold reserves of the country, the Directors desire most earnestly to urge upon member banks in the district that they should prepare to make their transfers of reserves in gold or gold certificates as far as practicable. They are, however, requested to postpone making definite arrangements to transfer their reserves until they receive more explicit advices, which will be contained in a circular soon to be issued.

No State institutions have yet become members of the Federal Reserve Bank and in general they have shown no desire to do so at present. There are, however, two exceptions in this city, the Broadway Trust Company and the Hudson Trust Company. They made application some time ago, but these have not yet been passed on by the Federal Reserve Board. It was expected yesterday that such action would be taken soon, and possibly in time for the two trust companies to become members by the time the Reserve Bank is established, two weeks from now.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The first assessment upon the Federal Reserve Banks for the maintenance of the Reserve Bank system was announced to all member banks today. The assessment is four-tenths of 1 per cent. of the capital stock allotted to applying member banks, which has been estimated to be at full face value $110,000,000. This covers all banks in the system, and means a levy of about $440,000.

The levy is made to defray all expenses of the system for the first half year. The Reserve Board has been unable to estimate the cost of its maintenance with exactness, owing to the fact that the entire staff of the office has not been organized. A part of the force employed for the eight months since the work of organization began has been lent by the Treasury Department.

CALL RATE COMING DOWN.

Controller Williams Gets Reassuring Reports from National Banks.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Controller of the Currency Williams received information today that led him to believe that the rate of interest on call loans was coming down. The record of New York banks has been particularly good, and from other large cities reports have come equally gratifying to the Treasury Department, though some banks in Chicago and Boston have held out for rates materially higher than the 6 per cent. level which the Controller thinks is ample.

The fear that in the present period of financial stress national banks might be generally striving to keep up a high rate of interest on call loans prompted the Controller to send out a telegram of inquiry today to ascertain the actual practice as far as possible.

National banks in this city received telegrams yesterday from John Skelton Williams, Controller of the Currency, asking them to wire him what was the highest rate of interest charged last week on call loans; the highest rate charged yesterday; when they intended to reduce all such loans to 6 per cent., and what justification they had for charging more than 6 per cent., when most of the banks, large and small, in the city recognized that as the prevailing rate.

Call loans at more than 6 per cent., it was said yesterday, were as a rule of a special character, and in such cases the borrower could have the rate reduced by greater diversification of collateral or changes in other respects.

REJECT ROCK ISLAND OFFER.

Protective Committee Unable to Accept Bond Compromise.

N. L. Amster of Boston, who holds 4 per cent. collateral trust bonds of the Rock Island Railroad Company and who opposed the sale at foreclosure of the collateral back of these bonds, now offers to withdraw his objections and join the Bondholders' Protective Committee if one of his suggestions is followed. The collateral in question consists of $74,000,000 in stock of the Rock Island Railway Company.

Mr. Amster says that he will unite the $6,000,000 bonds he represents to the $40,000,000 deposited with the committee provided "all the pledged stock is bought for the benefit of all the bondholders."

"In addition to this," said he yesterday in a circular, "I am sure that I will get $8,000,000 or $10,000,000 more of the bonds to join in that request—in fact, I believe that most of the outstanding bonds will join, for, through that, every bondholder will be sure to get his pro rata of the pledged stock, and I do away with the need of obtaining cash to pay undeposited bondholders, and without incurring further expenses."

Albert Rathbone, counsel for the Protective Committee, said yesterday that it would not be possible to follow Mr. Amster's plan because it would necessitate the compulsory exchange of bonds by all the bondholders for the railway company stock, a step that was not provided for in the trust agreement when the bonds were issued.

N.Y.C. SYNDICATE DISSOLVES

Members Will Consult Committee of Seven Before Entering Market.

The syndicate, headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., which underwrote last April $40,000,000 New York Central refunding and improvement 4½ per cent. bonds, will be dissolved on Nov. 11. The original life of the syndicate was to end on Oct. 11, but was extended, subject to termination on ten days' notice to members.

When the extension was taken the offering price of the bonds was dropped from 95¾ to 89½. It was said yesterday that no price would be fixed for the syndicate members when they take up their share of the bonds, but the recommendation will be made that they consult with the Committee of Seven, which has charge of bond dealings, before entering the market broadly.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Our Growing Credit Trade Balance—Foreign Demand for Our Securities.

Quieter conditions prevailed in the bond market yesterday, but there was no abatement of the demand for short term securities and no lessening of the more optimistic spirit which has lately been created by the evidence of substantial progress toward the establishment of more normal conditions in the financial and business world. The course of events bearing on business and finance at large is well reflected in the preliminary report of the country's foreign commerce for the month of October. The returns are incomplete, particularly in respect to exports, but the figures as they stand show a credit merchandise trade balance for the month of more than $33,000,000. This is double the credit trade balance shown by the complete figures for the month of September. Prior to that for several months imports had exceeded exports. This change in our trade since the outbreak of the war has brought substantial relief in that it has played an important part in causing the exchanges to move more in our favor, thus greatly simplifying the problem of meeting our obligations abroad.

The growth in our exports is noteworthy, but it is evident from the information coming to hand that in several directions, particularly in South America, it would be much larger than it is, if more ample banking facilities were available for the financing of trade to those parts. This is work which branches of American banks in Latin American countries will be able to perform with great advantage to exporters in the United States. This again emphasizes the fact that the expansion of our trade in old fields, or its extension to new fields, will call for the employment of additional capital in banking as well as for the financing of new undertakings through which may come orders for supplies on a large scale. This field of foreign trade, in other words, is one which must be cultivated with all the helps which were given to it by the countries of Europe whose commerce we are attempting in part to inherit.

Further evidence was afforded yesterday of the pronounced tendency toward easier money market conditions. There is little doubt that the money market would be easier than it is were it not for the fact that a very large amount of funds are immobile as a result of the absence of a recognized market for stocks. It is now easier than it was to obtain loans on those classes of securities which have been released from trading restrictions, and it would be natural to expect a similar result to flow from a re-establishment of a natural market for stocks. The advisability of a practical exchange of views among all the interests concerned, including the Stock Exchange and the banks, can hardly be doubted, and there are reasons for believing that if the problem is approached as it should be ways could be found to start the stock market on the road toward a natural market.

The bond market has been started on that road and has traveled so far already that to a large extent it has been found possible to remove price restrictions. It would not be at all surprising when the question is put to a practical test if it is found that the volume of the foreign selling of our securities will be much smaller than has heretofore been thought likely. Each day recently has brought fresh evidence that European investors are inclined to look upon American securities with favor because of their being free to a larger extent than the securities of Europe from the disastrous effects of the war. Three or four recent instances were cited in banking circles yesterday of the investment of funds here by foreigners in blocks of $100,000 or more and a number of purchases in smaller amounts for European accounts are coming to notice. These few instances which came to public attention in the financial district are probably symptomatic of a movement of much larger proportions.

Announcement was made yesterday that the New York Central underwriting syndicate would be dissolved on Nov. 11, and it was learned that the company stands ready to purchase the balance of the Lake Shore minority stock at the same terms at which a large block of this stock was lately bought from a committee of minority stockholders. The placing yesterday of a short term loan of the city of Newark at 5 per cent. was indicative of the improvement which has lately taken place in the market for this class of security.

$1,500,000 IS READY FOR COTTON BROKERS

Fifteen Banks and Trust Companies in the Relief Syndicate.

TO FINANCE "LONG" COTTON

Refunds by Tax on Dealings When Exchange Opens—Tart Answer to Liverpool Exchange.

Fifteen banks and trust companies of the city have subscribed $100,000 each to the syndicate formed to finance "long" cotton contracts that have held over from the day the Cotton Exchange closed. It is expected that $1,500,000 will be sufficient to cover the needs of those brokers who cannot themselves provide funds for marking down their commitments from 10 cents to about 6 cents—the latter quotation being the present level of spot cotton—when the Cotton Exchange reopens. With all important obstacles now out of the way, the belief is general that the Exchange will renew business around Nov. 16.

The syndicate members are the City National, the Chase National, the First National, the Hanover National, the American Exchange National, the National Bank of Commerce, the Park National, the Bank of New York, the Bank of America, the Bank of the Manhattan Company, the Mechanics and Metals National, the Corn Exchange, the Central Trust Company, the Bankers Trust Company, and the Guaranty Trust Company. The committee which prepared the financial plan to be followed was composed of William Woodward, President of the Hanover National; Walter E. Frew, President of the Corn Exchange, and H. R. Eldridge, Vice President of the National City Bank.

The refunding to the syndicate of funds borrowed by brokers is provided for through a tax to be placed on dealings after the Exchange gets under way again. Each purchase and sale of 100 bales will carry an impost of $1.25 to be paid by the broker out of his commission. It is estimated that, even with indifferent trading on the board, the loans will all be paid off within three years, while with an active flow of transactions a short time only will be required to liquidate the obligations.

The banks have additional security for the return of the money advanced in the shape of a guarantee by some of the larger brokerage houses acting jointly.

The syndicate will include in its underwriting operations the 80,000 bales held on contract by the firm of S. H. P. Pell & Co., which failed the day the Exchange closed. Including this block, the total of cotton to be cared for is figured at not more than 300,000 bales.

TART ANSWER TO LIVERPOOL.

Sharp Messages Between New York and British Cotton Boards.

The strained relations that have existed between committees of the New York and Liverpool Cotton Exchanges for several weeks over efforts made to reduce the "straddle" account left between the markets when the Exchanges closed took expression yesterday in the exchange of somewhat acrimonious cablegrams. The committees agreed at their meeting in this city that cotton involved should not be marked down to a level lower than about 8 cents a pound. Subsequently, the brokers here said that Liverpool transactions had been done at prices as low as 7 cents a pound.

E. M. Weld, Chairman of the local committee, has been in charge of recent negotiations between the cotton centres. The committee's activities were criticised in a message from the President of the Liverpool Exchange to President E. K. Cone of the New York Exchange in these words:

I am requested by the Directors to address to you formally as President of the New York Cotton Exchange a strong protest against the present charge of Weld's Committee that Liverpool has broken an agreement, although the committee and our delegates interpreted cables differently to the Liverpool Board. Our delegates recognize now that there has been a bona fide misunderstanding, and Weld's reiteration of broken pledges is entirely misplaced and unworthy the dignity of our association.

To this message President Cone replied:

Our board has carefully read cables exchanged since Aug. 31 and is unanimously of belief that position taken by our committee is justified.

Members of the Exchange here have the Exchange to consider the "straddle" been asked to meet on Wednesday at account and efforts to be made to reduce it.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Sentiment in the wheat market continues to oscillate from the bear to the bull side, and, while there is much to be said on both sides, the bulls had the better of the argument during yesterday's operations, and prices at the close of the day were ⅝c to 1c net higher. Yesterday's figures showed an increase in the United States visible of 2,774,000 bushels, bringing the total to 65,923,000, which compares with 55,105,000 last year. In the local cash market No. 2 red Winter wheat was quoted at $1.17¾; No. 2 hard, $1.16½; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.15½; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.23, all nominal, cost, insurance, and freight, Buffalo.

CORN.

Favorable weather over the corn belt and the fact that we are on the eve of the new crop movement had a tendency to offset some of the bullish features in the market, but prices during the day ruled firm, and at the close were ¼c to ⅝c net higher. The visible supply in the United States increased 40,000 bushels for the week, but the total is only 3,114,000, compared with 6,206,000 a year ago. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 83c, to arrive, and prime Argentine at 78c, nominal, delivered.

OATS.

The oats market was firmer, in sympathy with wheat and corn and on report of export sales of 150,000 bushels. The visible supply increased 408,000 bushels for the week. The local cash market was steady; standard being quoted at 53½@54c; No. 2 white, 54@54½c; No. 3 white, 53@53½c; No. 4 white, 52½@53c; fancy clipped white, 54@56½c; ordinary clipped, 53½@55c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was firm and higher on active covering, due to reports that the Government had imposed a quarantine against the Chicago and St. Louis stock yards owing to reports that the foot-and-mouth disease had been discovered and that the yards would have to be closed for disinfection. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 38,000, estimated for Tuesday, 22,000; Kansas City received 9,000, and Omaha, 3,200.

BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday...6@6½ per cent. for the best names.
Saturday...6@6¼
The quotation is for six months' paper.

More Uniform Orders Coming.

It was said yesterday by a representative of one of the largest uniform houses in the city that the firm was now figuring on contracts for the nations at war abroad. He would not say with whom this negotiating was being done, saying instead that it had not yet advanced to a stage where details could be made public. It was intimated, however, that the orders in negotiation call for the expenditure of a considerable sum of money by the nations in question.

Men's Neckwear in Demand.

Considering general business conditions, the men's neckwear manufacturers are doing unusually well. Goods designed for the holiday trade are moving briskly, the impression being that more will be sold during the coming season than last year. The demand at present is of a well-distributed character and runs to figured effects in greens and browns. The manufacturers will soon be busy making up their Spring lines, and the prediction is made that stripes will play a prominent part in the offerings for Spring and Summer. Crochets, it seems, are not destined for much more than their usual popularity.

The Claflin Settlement.

It was learned yesterday that nine banks have not deposited their claims with the Noteholders' Committee in the Claflin reorganization. The holdings of these nine banks, of which five are out of town and four are in this city, total about $1,500,000. Omitting these, the total deposits of note claims to date are somewhat more than $30,000,000. Deposits with the General Creditors' Committee, consisting of cash deposit and merchandise claims, amount now, it is understood, to well over $5,000,000. While nothing definite was given out yesterday, it was intimated that both committees would close their books late this week. It was said that there is little chance of the reported general meeting of creditors of the Claflin Company before George C. Holt as Special Master, being held within the next three weeks.

Will Make Their Own Garments.

Domestic producers are beginning to realize that if the warring nations can in any way arrange it so that the goods they require can be made at home, they will do so. No better illustration of this can be found than in the change which has occurred where flannel shirts are concerned. At first, large orders were placed by the foreign agents for the manufactured article. Now contracts are being let out for flannel shirtings. The quantity of goods on contracts here is said to amount to over 2,000,000 yards. One domestic concern has already received a large order of this kind, and another house was reported yesterday to have closed a contract for 750,000 yards for Dec. 3 delivery. Fairly large amounts of this fabric are carried in stock, and the purchasers for the foreign Governments will not experience as much trouble in getting what they need in this line as they might in others.

Silversmiths Not Worried.

Though dealers in gems and makers of gold jewelry and trinkets are a bit cast down because of the present state of trade with them, the silversmiths in the Maiden Lane district seem optimistic enough. The demand has been good for these wares, both plated and solid, considering the general condition of things in the last three months and, by one big firm, it is estimated that the year's falling off, as compared with 1913, will not exceed 10 per cent. The October returns of this firm compared quite well with those of October, and it was said several of the biggest months in the year for this trade were yet to come. The South is a weak spot, but it is reported by buyers in town that business in the Middle West is bracing up finely. Elsewhere things are said to be pretty good. Bar silver is now lower than in the last twenty years or so, which will give the manufacturers an opportunity to cover themselves at prices that will mean real profit for them in the not far distant future.

Sheetings Moved Better.

There was a better call for sheetings in the gray goods market yesterday than had been the case for some time, and the only thing that was unsatisfactory to the mills was the prices at which the goods had to be disposed of. That prices on these goods are low is admitted both by buyers and sellers, the former admitting it by their desire to trade at current figures. But, however, buyers will not admit what sellers contend: that prices are too low with cotton moving upward and the cost of production remaining unchanged. It is for this reason that sellers are having trouble in getting prices up to what they say are profitable bases. There is a feeling, however that the upturn in printcloths will, in the near future, pull the price of wide sateens and other gray goods along with it. Yesterday some good lots of wide sateens were made for delivery up to March, 1915, but here also the prices were not all that was desired by the mills. There was no notable movement of either twills or drills.

Men's Wear Demand Slackens.

The demand for heavy weight materials in the men's wear market suffered a relapse yesterday because of the mildness of the weather. The sellers find that business picks up for a day or two only to slacken when the mercury starts climbing again. There is some talk of sending out salesmen to see if more in the nature of lightweight business cannot be obtained, but, even if this is resorted to, it is not generally believed that the situation can be improved materially. Business waits on the weather. Reports were going the rounds yesterday that, in addition to a Baltimore house, which has closed its factory ostensibly to make improvements, several large clothiers in Rochester had decided on a similar course in order to minimize overhead charges while the dull period endures. While such rumors persist, selling agents can scarcely be expected to express optimistic views. So far no contracts for army cloth are known to have been placed, and the decision is beginning to gain ground that England will be able to take care of both herself and her allies in this respect.

Printcloths Sell Freely.

There was no apparent cessation of activities on the part of printcloth buyers in this market yesterday. Prices were again firmer, though no really important changes occurred. In the day's business were some good sales of 39-inch 68-72s at 4¼ cents for delivery during the balance of the year, as well as a good movement of 38½-inch 64-60s at 3⅝ cents for similar shipment. Not many of these goods are left now at this price, they having had to go to 3¾ cents for contract sales, some of which were reported for January-April delivery, but not confirmed. There was a fair movement of four-yard 80 squares at 5⅝ cents for immediate delivery, but several of the mills were asking 5¾ cents for any delivery. A good business was done on 38½-inch 60-48s at 3¼ cents for January-April shipment. Though narrow goods continued quiet the demand for the wider constructions was good enough, and it was more a question of delivery than price that held up many prospective transactions. The quotations:

Bank Stock Tax Act Again Upheld.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 2.—The Supreme Court today sustained its decision of last week upholding the constitutionality of the Bank Stock act. The opinion was given today in a second test suit brought by the Merchants' National Bank of Jersey City.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Pencils Decided to be Articles of Personal Adornment.

The personal adornment provision of the Tariff act of 1913 came up for construction yesterday when the Board of General Appraisers handed down a decision in the protest case of Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher overruling claims for lower duty on fancy metal pencils. This decision is probably the forerunner of many others, although the provision in the existing law has been greatly simplified compared with Paragraph 448 of the act of 1909, which was fruitful of more tariff controveries than any other paragraph of the old law.

The merchandise in the case decided yesterday consisted of pencil holders in chief value of metal, known as prorepel pencils, which permit the lead to move in and out so as not to soil the clothing. As they are designed to be worn on apparel or carried on or about the person, the Collector taxed them at 60 per cent., under Paragraph 356, providing for articles of personal adornment. The importers claimed the goods dutiable at only 20 per cent. as manufactures of metal. Judge Sullivan holds that, as the articles are valued at above 20 cents per dozen pieces and are used about the person, they were properly assessed at the higher rate.

The board sustained several protests relating to the duty rate on goat skins or mocellons imported from the present law. The Collector held them dutiable at 30 per cent., ad valorem, as dressed skins. The importers claimed a rate of 10 per cent. as goat skins. The importers, whose claims are sustained, include Jacob Stein & Sons, W. Ellington & Co., Cohen & Walker, Gottlieb Brothers, and A. Cohen.

Peck & Velsor lost in a contention dealing with the customs tax on horsemint, hyssop, wild marjoram, and bittersweet stems. They were returned for duty as drugs advanced in value and condition under the old law, at one-fourth of 1 cent per pound and 10 per cent. ad valorem. The claim was for 10 per cent. duty under the provision for crude drugs.

BIG CHICAGO YARDS AVOID MEAT TIEUP

Quarantine Order Brought Fear for the Country's Chief Source of Supply.

AFFECTS ONLY LIVE CATTLE

Authorities Interpret Sweeping Injunction to Permit Meat Shipments —Four States Under the Ban.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2.—Orders issued at Washington quarantining cattle, sheep and hogs in Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, and Pennsylvania on account of hoof and mouth disease caused consternation at the Union Stock Yards today. It was feared that there would be an absolute embargo on the great cattle centre. There were apprehensions that the country's meat supply might be tied up. There were many conferences over the situation, and as a result the situation was cleared up tonight. There will be no embargo on meat from the Chicago yards. The Federal authorities tonight made this interpretation of the order:

"Cattle, sheep and hogs from any State not under quarantine may be shipped into Illinois for immediate slaughter at Chicago, Peoria or East St. Louis and the dressed meat therefrom, subject to the usual food inspection, may be shipped anywhere."

An order to this effect was issued at the Stock Yards after Federal officials had announced the quarantine. The Illinois State Live Stock Commission also issued an order that shipments could be made from any point within the State for immediate slaughter at Chicago, Peoria and East St. Louis. As understood at the Stock Yards the quarantine situation remains about the same as it was on Saturday, that is, no live stock may be shipped into the quarantined districts and then shipped out again as live stock. It must be immediately slaughtered at the places designated. Heretofore about 50,000 cattle and 200,000 sheep a month have been shipped through the Union Stock Yards as stockers and feeders. This, according to officials, is the only business that will be affected by the order, except the cessation of shipments from other quarantined States.

The Chicago stock yards immediately are to be disinfected and all the cattle there inspected.

Dr. R. A. Ramsey, chief of the field inspection of the Bureau of Animal Industry, after conferring with Dr. O. E. Dyson, State veterinarian, and A. G. Leonard, President of the Union Stock Yards, recommended the modified form of quarantine over Illinois because, he said, he had found that affected cattle had passed through Chicago from an affected area in Michigan. Mr. Leonard said the quarantine would not cause any serious handicap to the full operation of business at the stock yards. Meat prices or employment would not be affected, he said.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—After a day of conferences among officials here this explanation of the Government's action as to the quarantine was issued at the Department of Agriculture:

"The quarantine of live stock on account of outbreaks of the foot and mouth disease has been extended to cover the entire area of the States of Michigan, Indiana, Illinois and Pennsylvania. In addition, restrictions have been placed upon shipments of stock from Ohio. The order extending this quarantine was signed by the Secretary of Agriculture on Nov. 2, and goes into effect immediately.

"The provisions of this quarantine are practically the same as previously announced for a few counties in Michigan and Indiana. No cattle, sheep, or swine can be shipped from these States in interstate commerce, and all fodder and animal products of every sort which might possibly convey the disease must be thoroughly disinfected.

"The quarantined States are not only prohibited from shipping cattle to uninfected areas, but they cannot even send shipments of stock from one infected area to another. No cases of foot and mouth disease have as yet been discovered in Ohio, but on account of the fact that shipments from infected areas have been made to this State it has been found necessary to place practically the same restrictions on interstate shipments from Ohio as on those from the four other States.

"One instance of foot and mouth disease has been found among the stock exhibited at the National Dairy Show in Chicago. In order to prevent the spread of the infection, the other animals are now guarded by sheets saturated with disinfectants and inclosing the stalls, in much the same way as human patients are isolated in hospitals."

The present epidemic, it was said, originated in Southern Michigan in August, but was not discovered until Oct. 15. Department officials explained today the spread of the disease was wonderfully rapid. It is so highly contagious that cattle passing through pens and alleyways where infected livestock have preceded them, acquire the infection. Many Federal inspectors are at work in Michigan, Indiana, and in Illinois. More will be sent to Pennsylvania and Ohio. These men will make farm-to-farm inspections.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 2.—The Union Stock Yards here, one of the main gateways through which Western cattle reach the Atlantic Coast, was put under quarantine today and disinfection will be completed tomorrow. All the cattle and swine in the yards are for local consumption, and no large shipments are expected. Only one case of the foot and mouth disease was discovered, and it was immediately isolated. N. B. Critchfield, Secretary of Agriculture of Pennsylvania, and C. J. Marshall, State Veterinarian, spent the day here. Stock yard officials say they have the situation well in hand.

As a large part of the fresh meat consumed here is slaughtered locally, dealers fear a meat famine if the quarantine against shipments of cattle into the city is prolonged.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 2.—State Commissioner of Agriculture J. W. Newman today issued an order prohibiting the importation of livestock into Kentucky from Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, and Pennsylvania.

BAD WHISKY KILLS 14.

40 Drank Drug Store Concoction and Others May Die.

Special to The New York Times.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Nov. 2.—In two days fourteen residents of Bristol, a village thirty miles from here, have died as a result of drinking liquor purchased at the drug store of Dr. D. A. Bisbee. Several more are in a critical condition and death is expected. It is known that at least forty persons drank the poison.

Dr. Bisbee, who has twice been arrested for selling liquor illegally, is nearly 70 years of age. The whisky which caused the fatalities was purchased on Sunday, and the autopsies, performed by Dr. B. H. Stone, State Director of Hygiene, indicate that wood alcohol instead of grain alcohol was used as the basis.

The first case which attracted the attention of the authorities was that of Fred O'Brien of Bristol. He was attacked with cramps and became blind about 1 o'clock on Sunday afternoon and died soon afterward. A little later Wallace Manner of Bristol and Ernest Tuprey of New Haven died. All three said they had drunk liquor purchased at the drug store. Eleven more men died today with the same symptoms. All said that they had drunk Dr. Bisbee's whisky. Those who died today were Phillip Tatro of St. George, Cyrus Curry, Patrick Welch, Lester L. James, Francis McBride, Charles Hines, Lewis and George Booska, Samuel Klag and Wallace Hammer of Bristol, and Aldice Jackman of South Lincoln.

Dr. Bisbee has been arrested and is now in jail on a charge of selling liquor illegally. Bail is refused awaiting a further investigation. It is understood that Dr. Bisbee's method was to tell customers to help themselves, and they would leave the money on the counter while he sat a window to watch for policemen. It will probably be his defense that the men helped themselves to the liquor. Bristol for several years has been a prohibition town.

NEW BATTLESHIP DISABLED.

Argentine Dreadnought's Turbines Crippled on Trial Trip.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.—The $11,000,000 dreadnought Moreno, built for the Argentine Republic by the New York Shipbuilding Company, has been disabled through an accident to one of her turbines while on a trial trip off the coast of Maine. The vessel was forced to put in at Rockland, Me., where more than forty of the observers, sent out by the builders, were landed and shipped back to Camden, N. J., by rail. The crippled dreadnought then made her way to the Fore River shipyard at Quincy, Mass., where she is now undergoing repairs.

Men who were aboard the big battleship state that engine trouble was experienced almost from the start of the trial trip. First the port engine went bad and repairs to this were made while at sea. Then the starboard engine caused a day's delay, and after this had been repaired the centre engine broke down completely. Efforts to put the big turbine back in commission failed and a quick run for the coast was made.

While President Samuel Knox of the New York Shipbuilding Company has issued a statement stating that the mishap is not considered serious, the fact that the employes of the yard who were aboard have returned home is taken to indicate that it will take a long time to make the necessary repairs. President Knox's statement was:

"The New York Shipbuilding Company does not consider the accident that disabled one of the turbines of the battleship Moreno to be a serious matter, and it is possible that the necessary repairs can be made while she is being tested in other directions than for speed. She was taken to the Fore River shipyard because it was that company which built her engines. The fact that some of our men were returned from Rockland by rail was simply due to matters of office expediency."

The Moreno is the largest battleship ever built on the Delaware River.

PAY GOLD DEBTS IN TRADE.

American Financial Conferees Expect Problem to Solve Itself.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Several members of the committee appointed to confer regarding foreign exchange and the cotton situation with Sir George Paish and Mr. Blackett, the representatives of the British Treasury, are absent from Washington and no further conferences will be held until later in the week.

The statement made last week that a tentative agreement had been reached in the conference on Friday, which had been telegraphed to London for consideration by the British Government, was pronounced today at the Treasury Department as perhaps somewhat stronger than the actual circumstances warranted. It was said that the statement sent to London was not a final agreement, but a series of interrogations contingent on certain possible situations in the money market and was preparatory to the ultimate solution of the problem.

Sir George Paish's prediction that the reopening of the Stock Exchanges would not be accompanied by the dumping of securities on the market is doubted in some quarters. It is also regarded as advisable to ascertain the scope of trade movements which just now seem to be assuming an unusual volume and tending to produce a large balance in favor of the United States within a short time. The American conferees take the view that it would be unnecessary to ship any considerable amount of gold abroad to meet maturing obligations when they might be paid with a transfer of credits for supplies now going across the seas.

SECOND MISSING GIRL FOUND

Two Men Arrested After Runaways Tell of Abduction.

Emily Weishart, 15 years old, who ran away from home a week ago last Sunday with Martha Weyer, 16, of 307 Tenth Avenue, Astoria, both intending to become motion picture actresses, returned to her home, 368 Tenth Avenue, Astoria, on Sunday evening. She was found by her father and Detective Teeven crouching in the hallway, ill and despondent.

Miss Weyer returned home late Friday evening, and told of having met two young men in Manhattan who promised to obtain positions for them, and took them to a resort in Tenth Street, near Third Avenue, Manhattan. There they were made prisoners, she said, until Miss Weyer escaped, partly clothed, by climbing down a fire escape.

Miss Weishart said she was maltreated and finally thrust into the street with only enough money to pay her carfare home when the story of Miss Weyer's escape and return home appeared in the morning papers of Sunday. On information obtained from the two girls the police arrested two men, who said they were William Burke of 307 East Tenth Street and Harry Iscovitch of 237 East Ninth Street. They were held in $1,000 bail, pending examination.

FLAGG CONVICTED OF STOCK FRAUDS

Speculator Who Promised Customers 52% Profit Found Guilty on Six Counts.

MONEY WAS THROWN AWAY

Prosecutor Rebukes ex-U. S. Treasurer Morgan — A Frame-Up, Says Counsel for Defense.

Jared Flagg, who advertised that he had a plan by which his customers could earn 1 per cent. a week on their investments in Wall Street, was found guilty last night of six of the seven counts against him in the Federal District Court before Judge Rudkin. The trial had been in progress for two weeks. Flagg was permitted to continue his $25,000 bail until Friday, when a motion for a new trial will be argued.

In summing up for Flagg, John M. Coleman made a great point of the fact that the Government had not been able to produce a single one of his client's 871 customers to file a complaint, and that it could not show that one of them had ever closed out his account. There was, he asserted, no complainant except "this little, hallowed, sacred group supposed to represent the Government."

The whole charge, Mr. Coleman said, was a frame-up. Flagg was running a conservative margin business and was consistently beating the market, and so he asked the jury to understand that there were certain interests in the Street which desired to see him closed up. As for the 52 per cent. a year, Mr. Coleman said that was not the profit Flagg made on the stocks he purchased. On those he only cleared 5 per cent., a very conservative figure. The 52 per cent. was made because he was only putting up margins.

Assistant District Attorney Thompson, representing the Government, attacked Flagg by bringing the evidence of his books to counteract the satisfaction of his customers. They showed, he said, that Flagg had not only thrown his customers' money away in Wall Street but had also charged them double commissions. The Government's auditors had drawn up monthly statements of Flagg's business and these showed losses.

Flagg had never used more than $100,000 margin in Wall Street, Mr. Thompson said, and had never followed the system he professed to use. If it were true that he had earned in Wall Street the $600,000 profits he paid out to his customers, how was it, the prosecutor asked, that when his office was raided only $190,000 was found? There was another $1,200,000 which customers had paid in, but, he said, was not accounted for.

Mr. Thompson also referred to the part that Daniel N. Morgan, Treasurer of the United States under President Cleveland, had taken in Flagg's scheme and said that he regretted that the former Treasurer had been induced to sell an honored name for a paltry one-half of one per cent. commission.

Judge Rudkin in his charge ruled that there was nothing in Flagg's scheme if honestly and fairly conducted, which could be called a fraud, but the jury must consider whether the representations he made about it were fraudulent.

The jury retired at 5:30 P. M., and after dining began its deliberations at 7 o'clock. It reached its verdict at 10:15. It is believed that when Mr. Coleman moves on Friday to set aside the verdict of guilty he will make reference to the action of the Government in seizing Flagg's books in the raid and will contend that the constitutional rights of his client were invaded by his records being held for three years by the Government.

ARTISTS SHOW GENEROSITY.

Their Pictures Sold Regardless of Value to Aid War Sufferers.

Prominent artists are showing great generosity in the disposal of their pictures at the exposition and sale of paintings and sculpture that is now going on at the Pietro Studios, 630 Fifth Avenue, for the benefit of the war sufferers. The artists have given permission to have the pictures sold quite regardless of their real value and the reputation of the artists, that during these hard times money may be obtained for the Red Cross work. Visitors make bids for the pictures, and the highest price takes them.

Artists are still coming in to offer their pictures, and Francis Richter, the blind pianist, pupil of Leschetizky, a refugee from Paris, plays for the pleasure of the guests.

SEEKS $440,000 COMMISSION

Assignee of H. B. Walmsley Sues on $11,000,000 Hotel Deal.

Marion Shaeffer, assignee of Hardie B. Walmsley, began suit in the Supreme Court yesterday against Benjamin F. Norris and Morris A. Hulett for $440,000, said to be due for commissions for the sale of a hotel to be built on the east side of Times Square between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth Streets. The complaint said that about June 1 Mr. Walmsley was employed by the defendants to procure a purchaser for the hotel and site for $11,000,000. Mr. Walmsley was to receive 4 per cent. commission.

According to the complaint, about June 15 Mr. Walmsley made a contract with C. M. Higgins of 26 Broadway and Frederick A. Wallis of 111 Broadway and their associates, for the purchase of the hotel at the price set. A company was to be organized with a capital of $11,000,000, of which $1,000,000 was to be paid in cash, $7,000,000 in first mortgage bonds, and $2,500,000 in second mortgage bonds. On taking title $500,000 was to be paid. The complaint said that after these arrangements had been made the defendants notified Mr. Walmsley that an effort to borrow $7,000,000 to put the project into effect had failed, and that as no more than $4,000,000 could be procured it had been decided to drop the matter. The suit is for 4 per cent. on $11,000,000.

PRESIDENT AIDS A SAILOR.

Smooths Way for Vera Cruz Hero Seeking Department Job.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—President Wilson today signed an Executive order under which Edward A. Gisburne of Washington, an enlisted man of the navy, who distinguished himself and was wounded in the attack on Vera Cruz, will be appointed to a place in the classified service "without regard to his physical condition," and without entering a competitive examination. The Executive order contains this explanation:

"Mr. Gisburne was a messenger boy in the classified service of the Navy Department from Sept. 14, 1908, to Feb. 7, 1910, when he resigned to enlist in the navy. He was honorably discharged from the navy on Aug. 29, 1914, by reason of disability resulting from wounds incurred in the line of duty, and was awarded a medal of honor for attempting to save a comrade while wounded himself. Under the law he is entitled to preference in original appointment if found, upon examination, to possess the required business capacity.

"This action is taken upon the request of the Postmaster at Boston, Mass., and the Executive order is recommended by the Civil Service Commission.

PART 1, ELECTION NEWS.

VOL. LXIV...NO. 20,738. NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1914.—EIGHTEEN PAGES. ONE CENT In Greater New York, Jersey City and Newark. Elsewhere TWO CENTS.

CONGRESS DEMOCRATIC BY 19 MAJORITY; REPUBLICAN LANDSLIDES IN THE EAST

DEMOCRATS WIN ELSEWHERE

Massachusetts Goes Democratic for Walsh, but by a Reduced Plurality.

INDIANA DEMOCRATIC, TOO

Illinois Probably Defeats Sullivan—"Uncle Joe" Cannon Back in Congress

Woodrow Wilson will have a Democratic Congress to sustain him to the end of his term. It will be Democratic by a greatly reduced plurality, but the House has enough of a majority to work with, and there is no change in the Senate.

The Democratic plurality in the House, which is 163, will be reduced in the next Congress to 19. The figures are: Democrats, 227; Republicans, 199; Progressives, 7; Socialist, 1; Prohibitionist, 1.

This victory in the nation is supported by Democratic victories in many States, but in three States—New York, Pennsylvania, and Connecticut—there has been a violent revulsion against the Democratic Party, and Republican landslides have swept over all three.

The great Republican landslide in New York was reflected in Connecticut and Pennsylvania, but there it stopped. There was no national landslide. There were Republican victories in some States and Democratic victories in others, but taking the field as a whole it was a drawn battle. Outside of the little block of the Union including these three sister States the appeal to support the President in this time of war did not go unheeded.

Even Massachusetts elected a Democratic Governor, returning Gov. Walsh to office, though by a greatly reduced plurality. His plurality of 53,000 a year ago slumped to 8,000, but he was elected, despite the fact that his Republican opponent, Samuel W. McCall, is a national figure and one of the strongest men in the State. The rest of the Democratic ticket appears to have been defeated.

In Indiana one of the Wilson leaders in the Senate, Benjamin F. Shively, was returned to his old post by 30,000 plurality after an extremely hard fight. This stands out from among other Senatorial elections as a distinct Administration victory.

The Republicans, according to early returns, have lost Tennessee, where Gov. Ben W. Hooper has been defeated for re-election by Thomas C. Rye, Democrat.

But in Pennsylvania, Boies Penrose swept the State for United States Senator, and Brumbaugh, the Republican candidate, for Governor.

In Connecticut there was a landslide of New York proportions. The Republicans carried everything. A Congressional delegation of five Democrats became one of five Republicans. Senator Brandegee, Republican, was re-elected by from 12,000 to 15,000, defeating Gov. Simeon E. Baldwin. The whole Republican State ticket was elected, as well as the Legislature.

Roger C. Sullivan, the Chicago boss, who was nominated for Senator by the Illinois Democrats, seems to have been defeated by a small plurality by Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman, Republican. His big lead in Cook County was cut down to the vanishing point downstate, and at 3 o'clock A. M. it seemed to have vanished altogether. Sullivan encountered bitter opposition, and two United States Senators of his own party appealed to Democrats in Illinois to bolt him.

Senator Newlands, a Democrat of long service in the Senate, has been defeated for re-election in Nevada.

In Wisconsin, La Follette's State, the Republicans are still in control. Their candidate, Philipp, is elected Governor, though he is a standpatter and not a La Follette Republican. McGovern, the candidate for Senator, who quarreled with La Follette two years ago and supported Roosevelt, is apparently elected.

SUFFRAGE REJECTED IN WESTERN STATES

"Antis" Get Big Majorities in Ohio and Missouri—Other Defeats Probable.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 3.—Suffrage was defeated overwhelmingly in Missouri today. On the face of the returns available up to 11 o'clock the proposal to give women the ballot had been beaten by 5 to 1. Returns coming in from up-State indicated the extent of the defeat would be even greater. In St. Louis, Kansas City, and Jefferson City the proposed amendment was rejected almost 10 to 1.

The suffrage defeat by such majorities was a surprise. The women of Missouri expected the first fight for the ballot in this State would be close, but the indications were that the "wets," guided by their experience in Illinois, went after the suffrage question with an axe.

The suffrage leaders were in evidence during the day, but the rank and file of party workers who were expected to aid at the polls was lacking.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 3.—Suffrage was defeated by from 25,000 to 75,000 majority in the Ohio election. Leaders of the movement admitted this tonight, but declared they expected the loss and would continue their campaign without a halt.

PIERRE, S. D., Nov. 3.—Scattering returns indicate the defeat of the woman suffrage amendment.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 3.—A fight in school board matters, on which women vote in Nebraska, brought many women to the polls in Omaha, in addition to those who were working for the suffrage constitutional amendment.

HELENA, Mon., Nov. 3.—Meagre returns so far received indicate that the suffrage amendment in Montana is lost.

Special to The New York Times.

FARGO, N. D., Nov. 3.—Woman's suffrage failed to carry in North Dakota. Under the provision of the Constitution, a majority of the total vote cast at the general election must favor the plan. As the vote on the suffrage issue was so much smaller than on the general ticket, it was necessary to get an almost unanimously favorable vote on the ballots cast.

The first returns received tonight indicated that the plan not only failed to secure a majority of all votes cast, but also fell short of a majority of the votes cast on that question alone. The advocates were undaunted and predicted they would win on the Constitutional amendment at the next general election.

If the coming legislative session indorses the movement of two years ago a Constitutional amendment will be up again with the next general election, and at that time will have to receive only a majority of the votes actually cast on the amendment.

TENNESSEE.

Tennessee voted for Congressmen, Governor, and a Legislature which will elect a State Treasurer and Controller. Vote for Governor in 1912: Democratic, 114,369; Republican, 123,823.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 3.—The election of Thomas C. Rye, Democratic candidate for Governor of Tennessee, was conceded at 11 o'clock tonight by managers of the campaign of Gov. Ben W. Hooper, Republican-Fusionist candidate for re-election. Complete returns from sixty-three counties out of ninety-six gave Rye a lead of 14,185.

Indications are that all Congressmen are re-elected and that Tennessee will have a Democratic Legislature.

OHIO "WETS" PILE UP MAJORITY OF 50,000

Close Vote On Prohibition Issue in Colorado—Princeton, N. J., Goes Dry by 800.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 3.—Ohio went "wet" by a majority of 50,000 for the home rule amendment today, according to its leaders. Prohibition was defeated by a narrow vote, but Wayne B. Wheeler, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, protested such a victory as the home rule backers claimed. He declared their estimates were based on returns from the big cities and that the figures would be cut down as the small towns and country districts reported. Home rule won by about 20,000 in Cuyahoga County, according to Mayor Newton D. Baker, in a message he sent to Gov. Cox, following the predictions made at "wet" headquarters.

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 3.—The Statewide prohibition issue is so close at 10:30 o'clock tonight that it is impossible to determine whether Colorado has gone "wets" or "drys." Precincts in all parts of the State, including sixty in Denver, give the "wets" 15,288 and the "drys" 13,212. The "drys" are claiming the State by 10,000 majority, but in the face of the returns the Rev. A. J. Finch, leader of the Anti-Saloon League forces, issued a statement declaring that the State would go "wet" by 30,000. Both these statements are believed to be excessive, as the result either way will be exceedingly close.

Pueblo County, which defeated Prohibition two years ago by 4,000, appears to have turned in a "wet" majority of 1,000. Greeley, a "dry" town, is rolling up a majority for the "wets." In the southern coal fields, where the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company is charged with controlling the election machinery, the "wets" are leading by a large margin.

The proposed amendment to the Constitution prohibits the manufacture, importation, purchase, or intoxicating liquors for sale or gift, and, if adopted, the saloons will go out of business on Jan. 1, 1916. The liquor interests initiated a second amendment providing that a rejected measure cannot be submitted to the voters within six years.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 3.—This city voted license or no license today, and the drys won by 800.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 3.—The chief issue in Kent and Sussex Counties was the "wet" and "dry" question. The "wets" most likely will have a majority of the General Assembly. This probably will mean another election next year on this issue in these two counties, which are now dry.

WISCONSIN.

Wisconsin voted for United States Senator, Congressmen, Governor, and other State officials, and on amendments providing for recall of any elective officials, except judicial officials, &c. Vote for Governor in 1912: Democratic, 167,316; Republican, 179,360.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 3.—United States Senator La Follette's candidate for Governor, John J. Blaine, was badly defeated in the election in this State today, running a weak third. His total vote will be about 30,000, or less than the estimated 35,000 plurality of E. L. Philipp, the Republican, over John C. Karel, Democrat. La Follette tried to elect Blaine as a fusion of the Progressives of both the old parties, who resented the primary victories of Philipp and Karel, both avowed conservatives.

Gov. F. E. McGovern, whom La Follette particularly opposed in the primaries for United States Senator, is running behind Philipp, but is undoubtedly elected.

The outcome of the election means a new deal in Wisconsin politics, with the old conservatives, represented by Philipp, and the anti-La Follette progressives, with Bull Moose sympathies, in a merger of political interests, dominated by the conservatives. Philipp's candidacy was independent of the State Republican platform, and was radically anti-Progressive. He has the Legislature with him in this county, but the other State officers are McGovern men, with H. A. Dithmar, Lieutenant Governor, a La Follette man.

The Socialists have probably elected W. R. Gaylord to Congress over W. J. Cary, Republican, but the Republicans have gained two Republican seats now held by Democrats, in the Sixth and Ninth Districts.

Republicans Win Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Split Bay State; Illinois Race Close

Pennsylvania voted for United States Senator, Congressmen, Governor, and other State officials. Vote for Governor in 1910: Democratic, 129,895; Republican, 412,658; Keystone, 382,127.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 3.—Senator Boies Penrose swept Pennsylvania today by a plurality estimated at not less than 150,000, and Dr. Martin Brumbaugh, Republican, was elected Governor by a majority approaching 165,000.

Complete returns indicates a Republican landslide that may increase the majority of the Republican candidates to 200,000. It is estimated that the Republicans carried fifty of the sixty-seven counties.

The unprecedented return to the Republican Party carried to victory almost all the Republican candidates for the State Senate and House of Representatives. The Republicans will have the largest majority in the Legislature in many years and will have complete control of the State Government.

The commanding lead of the Republicans indicates that the Democratic delegation in the National House of Representatives will be reduced from twelve to seven, the Progressive delegation reduced from seven to two, and the Republicans increased from 17 to 27.

Until late tonight, Democratic State leaders claimed the election of Vance McCormick, Democratic candidate for Governor, by 135,000, despite the all-apparent Republican victory. Progressive State leaders admitted defeat shortly before midnight.

A. Nevin Detrick, State Chairman of the Progressive Party, said tonight:

Returns indicate an overwhelming victory for Penrose and Brumbaugh. I attribute this vote to a revulsion against the Democratic Administration and the belief on the part of the electorate that the Republican Party is the instrument through which there will be a revival of prosperity.

State issues seem to have been lost sight of by the voters, and the entire result is apparently based on national traditions. Returns from over the State are too meagre to predict as to the district, Congressional, and Legislative candidates, but there is little doubt that the returns for the head of the ticket will prevail throughout the list.

Gifford Pinchot, Progressive candidate for United States Senator, said:

During the campaign just ended, I made the statement that, win or lose, I would keep on with the fight for the conservation of natural resources for the use of the people, against the monopolies and special interests, and in particular against the kind of government that Penrose represents. I reaffirm that statement now.

A. Mitchell Palmer, Democratic candidate for United States Senator, ran second, with Pinchot, Progressive, third. Palmer commanded a much larger vote than had been conceded by the opposition leaders.

The four Republican Congressmen at large, Scott, Crago, Lafean, and Garland, were elected.

Latest returns from this city indicate that Brumbaugh carried Philadelphia by a majority of 115,000 and Penrose by 100,000. Republican leaders in Philadelphia asserted that this sweep meant that the full Philadelphia delegation of six Congressmen had been won by the Republicans.

The vote throughout Pennsylvania was exceptionally heavy, and it is estimated that upward of 1,000,000 citizens went to the polls.

While no estimate of the complete Pinchot vote is yet possible, it is believed that Col. Roosevelt's recent invasion of Pennsylvania aided little in bringing support.

Promptly on the heels of Dr. Brumbaugh's success, a boom was started for him as the next Republican candidate for the Presidency. State Senator Vare said:

"From the start I was convinced Dr. Brumbaugh was the favorite with the people. He is their idol. Of course we in South Philadelphia are not surprised at this landslide. The doctor is not only responsible for his own success, but also for the success of the rest of the ticket. To him alone and to the activity of party workers is this victory due. And the same qualifications which fit the doctor for Governor will fit him for President. In all the wards in which the Vares have any influence we will at once start an active campaign to obtain delegates for him to the next Republican national convention with the object of having Pennsylvania present Dr. Brumbaugh's name to the convention."

CONNECTICUT.

Connecticut voted for United States Senator, Congressmen, Governor, and other State officials. Vote for Governor in 1912: Democratic, 78,264; Republican, 67,513; Progressive, 31,020.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 3.—David E. Fitzgerald of this city, Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, at 9 o'clock tonight said that the election of the Republican candidates for the United States Senate and House of Representatives was conceded. It was also conceded that the Republican nominees for State executive offices had been elected, and that the State Senate would be Republican. The control of the Connecticut House of Representatives he regarded as doubtful.

J. Henry Roraback of Canaan, Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, on the other hand, claimed both branches of the Connecticut Legislature by easy margins.

Early returns made the plurality of Senator Frank B. Brandegee of New London over Gov. Simeon E. Baldwin, in the contest for United States Senator about 12,000. This is Senator Brandegee's third election.

Five Republican Representatives in Congress were elected, displacing the solid Democratic delegation which was chosen two years ago. The Representatives elected are: First District, P. Davis Oakey, Hartford; Second, Richard P. Freeman, New London; Third, John Q. Tilson, New Haven; Fourth, Ebeneser J. Hill, South Norwalk; Fifth, James P. Glynn, Winsted. In no case were the pluralities indecisive, averaging about 1,000.

Judge Marcus H. Holcomb, (Rep.,) of Southington, who retires from the State Superior Court this month, was elected Governor, defeating Lieut. Gov. Lyman Tingier of Rockville by about 20,000 plurality. The full Republican State ticket, with pluralities slightly less than that of Judge Holcomb, was elected. While the Republican vote was kept up to its average, there was a heavy falling off in the Democratic vote, and apathy was shown throughout the State.

The Progressive vote was about 8,000, as compared with 30,000 at the last biennial elections. Indications late tonight were that the Socialistic would lead the Progressive State vote.

Bridgeport, Hartford and Waterbury showed decisive Republican pluralities. The home city of Gov. Baldwin, New Haven, gave him a plurality of nearly a thousand in his contest for Senator, but went Republican for most of the other candidates. It was estimated late to-night that the Republicans would have about twenty members of the next State Senate, to sixteen Democrats, and that the House of Representatives would be Republican in about the same proportion. Candidates on the Republican State ticket won by 15,000 to 25,000.

ILLINOIS.

Illinois voted for United States Senator, Congressmen, State Treasurer, and Superintendent of Public Instruction. Vote for Governor in 1912: Democratic, 443,120; Republican, 313,469; Progressive, 393,401.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 4.—Returns compiled at 2 o'clock this morning indicated Lawrence Y. Sherman, Republican candidate for United States Senator, had a plurality of about 70,000 outside of Cook County. Roger C. Sullivan, (Dem.,) seemed to have a plurality of about 60,000 in Cook County. On the basis of these figures the indications were that Sherman was elected by about 10,000 plurality, but this was not conceded by the Sullivan managers.

With less than two-thirds of the 102 counties of the State having reported at midnight, the Senatorial contest was in doubt. Raymond Robins, (Prog.,) was eliminated beyond doubt.

The Sullivan managers insisted, when the vote was counted, which might not be for twenty-four hours, Sherman's down-State plurality would not exceed 25,000 to 30,000, and that Sullivan would be elected by a plurality of from 37,500 to 40,000.

At a later hour The Associated Press forecast of the State said:

"Estimated returns from 98 counties out of 101 in Illinois outside of Cook County give Sherman a net plurality of 29,000 over Sullivan." On pluralities in sixty-four counties The Associated Press estimated Sullivan's plurality at 30,000 or more.

Robins got about 60 per cent. of the Progressive vote cast two years ago in Cook County, and outside ran much further behind. The first figures indicated that he drew outside of Cook County largely from Democrats opposed to Sullivan, those allied with Secretary of State Bryan. Robins formerly was a Democrat allied with Gov. Dunne.

Headed by Joseph G. Cannon, a small flock of the "lame ducks of 1912" was sent back to Congress. Six of the Republican members of the "Old Guard" who were victims of the landslide two years ago, sought to regain their places. Five of them apparently were successful. They were Charles E. Fuller, Twelfth District; John A. Sterling, Seventeenth; William W. Wilson, Third; William B. McKinley, Nineteenth, and Joseph G. Cannon, Eighteenth. James R. Mann, Republican leader of the House, was also successful.

The Republican gain in the Twelfth District was a loss to the Progressives. Fuller defeated William Hinebaugh of Ottawa, Chairman of the Progressive National Congressional Committee.

Democrats won an overwhelming victory in Cook County. Incomplete returns indicated that every Democratic candidate for county office was elected. Peter Reinberg, candidate for President of the County Board, led the local ticket with a plurality of approximately 65,000 votes over A. A. McCormick, Progressive, and present President of the board.

The Democrats will control the next State Senate, but in the House the Republicans made gains which probably will result in that body being deadlocked.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Massachusetts voted for Congressmen, Governor, and other State officials, and on proposal to abolish party enrollments at primary elections, and other amendments. Vote for Governor in 1913: Democratic, 183,267; Republican, 116,705; Progressive, 127,755.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 3.—Massachusetts, a State of big majorities, has reversed her form, and it was hours later than usual before the result of the election for Governor and members of the Legislature was known.

It then became evident that David I. Walsh, the present Democratic Governor, who last year had 66,000 plurality, would be re-elected by some 8,000 over Samuel W. McCall, the Republican candidate. Indications are that the remainder of the State ticket is Republican.

The smallness of the Progressive vote, which last year gave the party second place in the State, was a feature of the election. In many small towns the Progressive vote for head of the ticket fell off from 50 to 75 per cent., and in the first 856 election districts compiled the total for Joseph Walker, the party nominee for Governor, was only 22,916, as against 92,510 for Charles S. Bird, who headed the ticket a year ago.

The Republicans made a significant gain in Congressmen, displacing three Democrats. The election of Dallinger, Republican, candidate in the Eighth District, over Frederick S. Dietrick, Democrat, who appealed for support for President Wilson's Administration, is the most significant gain for the Republicans, and in the Cape Cod district Joseph Walsh of New Bedford defeated Congressman Thacher. The business depression in the textile centres in this district, in connection with Mr. Thacher's votes on all the tariff schedules were turned against Thacher. In the Lynn district Congressman Michael F. Phelan was elected, although Cabot Johnson of Nahant gave him a close race. In the Eleventh, Boston district, George Holden Tinkham, Rep., is elected. This is the district hitherto represented by Andrew J. Peters, now Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Allen T. Treadway in the First District, Frederick H. Gillett in the Second, Galvin De W. Paige in the Third, A. P. Gardner in the Sixth, and William S. Greene in the Fifteenth, all Republicans, were re-elected by substantial majorities.

In the Legislature the Republican victory was complete. The Senate, with one district to be heard from, will have 32 Republicans, seven Democrats, and two Progressives. The incoming House of Representatives, with seven districts missing, stands: Republicans, 144; Democrats, 86; Progressives, 2; Socialists, 1, as against 117 Republicans, 105 Democrats, 16 Progressives, and one Socialist in the present House.

WHITMAN ELECTED GOVERNOR BY 133,000; WADSWORTH SENT TO SENATE BY 60,222

Republican Victory Is Overwhelming Throughout the State.

SWEEP IN LEGISLATURE

All State Candidates Carried In with the Heads of the Ticket.

SULZER CASE A BIG FACTOR

"Rock-Ribbed Schoharie" Goes Republican for the First Time in Her History.

Charles S. Whitman was elected Governor of New York yesterday by 133,000 plurality over Martin H. Glynn; James S. Wadsworth Senator by 60,222 over James W. Gerard.

It was a landslide. The Legislature was carried overwhelmingly by the Republicans, and the whole Republican State ticket is elected.

The Assembly stands 96 Republicans, 52 Democrats, 2 Progressives; Republican majority, 42. One of the Progressives, Hamilton Fish, Jr., was elected with a Democratic indorsement.

Tammany stood by its Old Guard, and, despite the falling off in the city vote, elected 45 of them to the Assembly and 7 to the Senate, counting the McCooeyites and other allies.

The resentment over the scandal of 1913, known as the Sulzer impeachment, gave Mayor Mitchel his plurality of 122,000 in New York City last year. That resentment has not died down. It played a great part in the landslide of yesterday. Up the State the evidences of its continuing potency as an obstacle to Democratic victory were numerous and striking.

The most dramatic proof of it is the fact that Schoharie County, nicknamed "Rock-Ribbed Schoharie" because it has never gone Republican in the whole course of its history, lost the rock from its ribs yesterday and went Republican; and Sulzer polled a greater vote in Schoharie than did Glynn, who ran third in the county.

The Progressive Party ran not third, but fourth. Sulzer beat Davenport for third place. He polled a vote over twice as large as that of the Bull Moose candidate. In this city Davenport's vote was 15,226 and Sulzer's 20,235.

Sulzer's vote in the State was 98,787 and Davenport's less than half that—48,516. Sulzer is claiming that his vote defeated Glynn; it did not, as far as the votes cast directly for Sulzer are concerned, for Whitman would have been elected without them. That many men, however, voted directly for Whitman because of their resentment over the Sulzer impeachment and against Glynn as its beneficiary there are many evidences in the returns.

Sulzer supporters indulged in a celebration at his Broadway headquarters when they heard that Glynn had been defeated. They gave all credit for Whitman's victory to their leader, and the former Governor expressed the same view, thus:

"The verdict of the people speaks for itself. Without money, without newspaper support, and without organization, I have elected Whitman, beaten Glynn, and made Roosevelt look like 30 cents."

Whitman had nothing to say except that "the result speaks for itself." He left his headquarters early with Mrs. Whitman.

The only word forthcoming from Gov. Glynn was his telegram to Mr. Whitman, sent from Albany.

"How can I give the reason until I have performed the post-mortem?" William Church Osborn, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, inquired. "I have as yet not put the knife to the corpse."

The vote in the city was a severe disappointment to the Democrats. They had counted on it to overcome Mr. Whitman's up-State lead, no matter how big that might be; but New York gave Glynn only 54,114. It is curious that with such a slump Tammany and its allies should have been able to save forty-five Assemblymen and seven State Senators.

Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, admitted defeat of the ticket by 9 o'clock.

"By their vote the electors of the State have signified their choice for Governor," he said. "There is no more to be said, except to wish Mr. Whitman a satisfactory and successful

MICHIGAN.

Michigan voted for Congressmen, Governor, and other State officials, and on four Constitutional amendments. Vote for Governor in 1912: Democratic, 194,017; Republican, 169,963; Progressive, 155,372.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 3.—Gov. Ferris, Democrat, has been re-elected, probably by 40,000 plurality. Frank E. Doremus, Democratic Congressman of the First District, has been re-elected by a reduced plurality, but the Republican candidates in all other Congressional districts probably have been successful.

Returns on Congressmen were very light up to 10 o'clock. The Progressive vote was so small everywhere that it seemed impossible that either of the two present Progressive Congressmen, Roy O. Woodruff of the Tenth District and William J. McDonald of the Twelfth, could be re-elected.

As the Progressive vote of two years ago returned in great part to the Republican Party, the Republican candidates were successful. This same trend defeated Representative S. O. Beales, Democrat, of the Second District.

The vote on Governor was a distinct slap at the judicial recall and other doctrines of Chase S. Osborn and at the man personally because of his policies when Governor in 1911-12. Thousands of old-line Republicans repudiated him during the campaign and carried their repudiation to the polls.

RHODE ISLAND.

Rhode Island voted for Congressmen, Governor, and other State officials. Vote for Governor in 1912: Democratic, 32,725; Republican, 34,183; Progressive, 8,457.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 3.—On the basis of returns from 134 voting districts out of 196, giving R. Livingston Beeckman, (Rep.) 28,603 and Col. P. H. Quinn, (Dem.) 21,616, the election of the Republican Governor and State ticket was conceded tonight by the Democrats.

The Republicans will get two out of three Congressmen, Representative Kennedy having been apparently re-elected in the Third District. Walter R. Stiness (Rep.) has defeated Congressman Gerry (Dem.) in the Second. In the First District Democrats claimed the re-election of Congressman George F. O'Shaunessy.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 3.—Governelect Beekman was serenaded by the leading citizens of the Newport colony, who came up before his residence about 10 o'clock tonight, accompanied by a band.

Many inquiries came to the newspaper offices about the result in New York, many of the interested ones being personally acquainted with District Attorney Whitman, who is a Summer resident here.

WHITMAN CARRIED MONROE.

His Plurality in County Unprecedented—Carried County Ticket.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Rochester is simply wild with enthusiasm tonight because of the remarkable Republican victory in the city and county. Not only have Whitman and Wadsworth carried the county by a tremendous plurality, but the organization has elected both Congressmen, both State Senators, and five Assemblymen. The Republicans have also elected all of the county officers.

A supreme effort was made by heads of the labor organizations to bring about the defeat of Senator Argetsinger and Assemblyman Adler, both of whom pointed out certain defects in the Workmen's Compensation bill.

To the south of the city it was alleged that farmers were about to resent the alleged unfair treatment of Gov. Hughes by Speaker Wadsworth and his friends. Wadsworth ran strongly in all the country districts.

Whitman's plurality in Monroe is unprecedented.

In Wayne, Orleans, Livingston, and Ontario immense pluralities are reported. Progressives have everywhere gone back to the old party and left earmarks of their former existence by casting complimentary votes for Chauncey Hanlin of Buffalo for Lieutenant Governor.

The tremendous Republican majority in Monroe and adjoining counties is regarded as a repudiation of the methods adopted by the last two Democratic Administrations in their treatment of the barge canal and State highway propositions in these parts.

YONKERS 691 FOR WHITMAN.

Progressive Vote Falls from 4,200 Two Years Ago to 835.

YONKERS, Nov. 3.—Yonkers complete, gives Whitman 6,404, Glynn, 5,713; Whitman's plurality, 691. Wadsworth's majority over Gerard for United States Senator is about 250, Gerard running about 400 ahead of his ticket.

This city gave Roosevelt, two years ago, 4,200 votes. Davenport today received only 835. Sulzer got 576.

In the First Assembly District of Westchester County, of which Yonkers is the centre, George Blakely, (Republican,) is elected over John L. Hayes. Blakely received 6,007; Hayes, 5,476; Blakely's majority, 531.

William Forster, Republican, is elected to Congress in the Twenty-fourth District by about 3,000. He received a majority of 467 in this city. The district comprises this city, Mount Vernon, the Pelhams, East Chester, and part of the Thirty-second and Thirty-third districts in the Bronx.

REPUBLICANS CARRY ULSTER.

Sulzer Sympathizers Voted for Whitman, Refusing to Waste Ballots

Special to The New York Times.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Ulster County went heavily Republican today, giving Whitman over 3,700 plurality. Sulzer received over 1,800 votes, and Davenport ran a poor fourth with 350 votes.

A strong Sulzer sentiment manifested by Democrats changed when his sympathizers went to vote. They announced afterward that they considered their votes would be thrown away, and, as they wanted to protest against Tammany influence, they could best do so by voting for Whitman.

Gov. Glynn's veto to appropriations to pay farmers for their cattle and horses killed during the last three years by Agricultural Department agents influenced the rural vote. The farmers were disgusted with scandals in connection with the State roads.

The religious issue was overshadowed by others, and many Catholics believed it was raised by politicians for political purposes only, refusing to regard it as being conducted sincerely against the Catholic Church.

Charles B. Ward, (Prog.,) of Monticello, Sullivan County, who was defeated two years ago for Congress in the Twenty-seventh District, carried Ulster by 2,500.

Both Republican Assemblymen were re-elected. Hasbrouck.

Jefferson County Vote Indicates Return to Republicans.

Special to The New York Times.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Today's vote in this city, giving Whitman 2,856 to Glynn's 1,263, indicated that the Progressive vote in this section had returned largely to the Republican Party, and that the Sulzer vote had been drawn from the Democrats.

Jefferson County, incomplete, went for Wadsworth, while all Republican candidates for Congress, Senate, and Assembly appeared elected beyond doubt.

CAYUGA GAVE BIG PLURALITY.

Wadsworth Ran Slightly Behind Whitman—Onondaga for G. O. P.

Special to The New York Times.

AUBURN, N. Y., Nov. 3.—In the Whitman landslide, Cayuga County returned an old-time Republican plurality, James W. Wadsworth running slightly behind Mr. Whitman. The religious issue, which was raised in the last few days of the campaign, did not influence the vote very much, the weight of Tammany being blamed mostly for the Democratic defeat.

When John A. Hennessy came here in his campaign for the Democratic nomination he made a deep impression among independents. The Sulzer impeachment also tended to weaken the Democratic ticket.

In the City of Auburn a hot fight was waged on the question of a change of the city charter to the Plan B form of commission, under the new State law for optional charters. Commission government advocates, favoring the city manager plan, and those opposed to any commission form, voted against Plan B, and it was defeated by 1,200 votes.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Onondaga County contributed its share to the sweeping Republican victory in the State by electing a Republican State Senator, three Republican members of the Assembly, and by piling up a big vote within its confines for the State and Congressional tickets.

Owing to "splits" there was congestion in the count for delegates to the Constitutional Convention, which in numerous districts had not been completed at midnight. The indications are that the Republican wave carried the nominees of that party to success.

In Syracuse and the towns of the county heard from Bensel and Sohmer ran well up to the head of the ticket. Bensel is popular in this city, the home of Duncan W. Peck, Commissioner of Public Works.

ONEIDA SWAMPED DEMOCRATS.

Big Republican Vote in County Put Up to Tammany Hall.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 3.—The Democrats were swamped in Oneida County, losing a member of the State Senate, all the county nominees, and their representative in Congress. They retained only one member of the Assembly.

Whitman has carried the county by more than 2,500 plurality. The whole State ticket will go through at about the same figure.

Explanation is made tonight that the results are put to Tammany Hall. The defeat of Congressman Talcott is due to the campaign that was carried on against him because of his stands on the tariff.

Plurality for Whitman, 121,606.*

SCHOHARIE GOES REPUBLICAN.

Democratic County Gives G. O. P. Plurality for First Time.

ALBANY, Nov. 3.—Schoharie County went Republican for the first time, twenty-seven of the thirty districts of the rock-ribbed Democratic county giving Mr. Whitman 2,010, Sulzer 1,981, and Glynn 1,130.

The Republicans claim the election of their entire county ticket. Morton, Republican, is elected State Senator in the Third District, which comprises Schoharie, Schenectady, and Montgomery Counties, over Loren H. White, Democrat, by over 5,000.

Schoharie is the home county of ex-Chairman George M. Palmer, who was promised the Secretaryship of the Workingmen's Compensation Commission.

Schenectady Result a Surprise.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Schenectady County experienced a complete Republican landslide here today. The majority of the State, district, and county candidates won by pluralities of 2,000 or more. The outcome was somewhat of a surprise, as it was predicted that Whitman would probably win by 500 at the most, and that the Socialists would elect their Assemblyman and other county officers.

BIG SULZER VOTE IN BROOME.

Republican Plurality Cut Because of Hinman's Defeat in Primaries.

Special to The New York Times.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 3.—When the returns from the county began to come in this evening it became evident that the supporters of Harvey D. Hinman, who comprise the Republican organization, had resented the defeat of their candidate in the primaries by casting their votes for Sulzer. The town of Union, the strongest Republican town in the country, gave Sulzer a strong plurality. Former Republican pluralities of 3,000 and 3,500 were thereby reduced to 1,000.

There was little rejoicing among the Broome County Republicans tonight over the victory. William H. Hill, the Republican candidate for State Senator, was elected by a majority which will greatly exceed the one received by Whitman. Simon Peter Quick, Republican, will, from all indications, be returned to the Assembly, but his plurality will be small.

Indications are that Gerard may win the county by a small margin. The vote in the rural districts is coming in slowly, but indications are that Wadsworth will run far behind Whitman.

Fairchild, Republican, is returned to Congress by a normal Republican plurality.

SULLIVAN COUNTY CLOSE.

Indications Are That G. O. P. Has Elected State and County Ticket.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTICELLO, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Most accurate figures obtainable give Whitman a plurality of 500 in Sullivan County. Sulzer cut an important figure in the result in this county by polling more than 1,000 votes. Wadsworth has carried the county by 350.

John D. Sivers, Republican State Senator, was re-elected. Charles Ward, Republican, was elected Assemblyman.

WESTCHESTER FOR WHITMAN.

Gives Him Plurality of 7,350—Mt. Vernon Defeats Commission Plan.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Late returns indicate that there has been a Republican landslide in Westchester County, Whitman winning over Glynn by 7,250. The Republicans elected four Assemblymen, two Congressmen, a Senator, Sheriff, County Register, County Treasurer, two Coroners, and a County Controller.

The main fight in Mount Vernon was over the plan of the civic association to adopt the commission form of government there. Mayor Edwin W. Finke announced late tonight that the plan had been defeated by a vote of 150 and that he will still continue to be the chief executive.

MISSOURI.

Missouri voted for United States Senator, Congressmen, Judge of Supreme Court, and Superintendent of Education, and on woman suffrage, county unit local option law, full crew law, and other amendments. Vote for Governor in 1912: Democratic, 337,019; Republican, 217,817; Progressive, 109,146.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 3.—Missouri returns show that William J. Stone, Democrat, has been re-elected to the United States Senate by a modest majority.

Indications are that woman suffrage has been overwhelmingly defeated.

The Democrats apparently elected fourteen or sixteen Congressmen, but only two are certain—Champ Clark in the Ninth District and William P. Borland in the Fifth.

Early returns indicate the re-election of Speaker Clark by 3,000 to 5,000. John C. Brown, his Republican opponent, conceded defeat tonight by from 2,000 to 3,000.

OKLAHOMA.

Oklahoma voted for United States Senator, Congressmen, Governor, and other State officials, and on amendments changing legislative system, &c. Vote for Governor in 1910: Democratic, 120,218; Republican, 99,527.

Special to The New York Times.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Nov. 3.—Incomplete returns up to 10 o'clock showed that Robert L. Williams, Democratic candidate for Governor, had a small lead over John Field, (Ref.) Fred W. Holt, (Soc.,) was running close to Field. Striking Republican and Socialist gains were shown.

United States Senator Thomas P. Gore was running far ahead of the Democratic ticket, and his re-election seemed assured by a heavy majority. Democratic State Chairman Samuel claimed the election of entire State ticket by pluralities ranging from 15,000 to 20,000.

The re-election of Congressman Carter, Democrat, in the Third District, William H. Murray in the Fourth, Joseph B. Thompson in the Fifth, and Scott Ferris in the Sixth, was assured. The election of W. W. Hastings, Democrat, in the Second District, and J. V. McClintic in the Seventh for Congress seemed certain. In the First Congressional District the vote was close between Congressman James Davenport, Democrat, and Joseph A. Lee, Republican.

IOWA.

Iowa voted for United States Senator, Congressmen, Governor, and other State officials. Vote for Governor in 1912: Democratic, 182,441; Republican, 184, 151.

Special to The New York Times.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Nov. 3.—Indications late tonight point positively to the re-election of Senator Albert J. Cummins, Republican, by a plurality estimated at 50,000 over Maurice Connolly, Democrat, and Casper Schenck, Progressive. Enough of the vote is in hand to make certain the senior Iowa Senator's return. Schenck, the Progressive candidate, fell far behind what was estimated to be his strength.

In the Governorship race George W. Clarke, (Rep.,) had a lead of slightly more than 4,000 votes over John T. Hamilton, (Dem.) It was estimated that Clarke's plurality would be close to 15,000. It was practically certain that Republican candidates for Congress had been elected in all districts except the Second and Third.

NEBRASKA.

Nebraska voted for Congressman, Governor, and other State officials, and on woman suffrage, workmen's compensation, and other amendments. Vote for Governor in 1912: Democratic, 123,997; Republican, 114,075.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 3.—With half the precincts in Douglas County, Omaha, to hear from and only meagre returns from other parts of the State, there seemed little doubt at midnight that John H. Morehead, (Dem.,) had been re-elected Governor by a decisive majority. In Douglas County his plurality over R. Beecher Howell, (Rep.,) was more than 1,700 in the precincts reported, and it was estimated his lead in the county would be between 3,000 and 3,500.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

New Hampshire voted for United States Senator, Congressmen, and Governor. Vote for Governor in 1912: Democratic, 34,203; Republican, 32,504; Progressive, 14,401.

Special to The New York Times.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 3.—The Republican Party made a clean sweep in New Hampshire from top to bottom today. Senator J. H. Gallinger was re-elected for a fifth consecutive term by 3,000 plurality over Congressman Raymond B Stevens, Democrat. For Governor Roland H. Spaulding, Republican, probably will win by 8,000 over A. W. Noone, Democrat. The Progressive vote almost entirely disappeared.

The Legislature will be strongly Republican and the members of the Lower House of Congress will be ex-Congressman Cyrus A. Sulloway and Representative Edward H. Wason, Republicans, to succeed two Democrats.

UTAH.

North Dakota voted for United States Senatorship, Justice of Supreme Court, and State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Vote for Governor in 1912: Democratic, 26,076; Republican, 12,532; Progressive, 23,591.

Special to The New York Times.

SALT LAKE, Utah, Nov. 4.—At midnight, with straight ballots counted on almost half the vote of the State, Senator Smoot (Rep.) leads Moyle (Fusion) by only 90 votes. It is believed the vote of Salt Lake County, which casts about one-third the total vote of the State, will determine the result.

Unusual scratching makes it probable that the result will not be known definitely until late. Howell (Rep.) appears to be elected Representative in the First District, and May (Fusion) in the second.

OREGON.

Oregon voted for United States Senator, Congressmen, Governor, and other State officials, and on prohibition and other amendments. Vote for Governor in 1910: Democratic, 54,858; Republican, 48,731.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 3.—Oregon seems to have gone Democratic for United States Senator, returning George E. Chamberlain, Walter Lafferty, first a Republican, then a Progressive, and lastly an Independent, is probably returned to the lower House, as have been Willis C. Hawley and Nicholas J. Sinnot from their districts. This makes two Republicans, one Independent, and two Democrats representing Oregon in Congress for the next two years at least. The State has gone Republican for Governor, electing James Withycombe.

There are no returns at hand yet to indicate whether or not the State has gone dry.

LEGISLATURE WON BY REPUBLICANS

G. O. P. Will Control Both Branches by Almost Two-thirds Majority.

TWO PROGRESSIVES CHOSEN

Tammany Hall and McCoey in Brooklyn Elect Old Standbys Despite Democratic Slump in City.

The next Legislature will be controlled by the Republicans in both its branches.

The next Senate will be composed of 34 Republicans and 17 Democrats, as against 33 Democrats and 18 Republicans in the present Senate.

In the Assembly the Republican majority will be even more pronounced. Returns received up to an early hour this morning indicated that the lower house in the next Legislature will have 96 Republicans, of whom nine were elected with Progressive indorsement; 2 Progressives, one elected with Republican and the other with Democratic indorsement, and 52 Democrats.

Only two Progressives were elected. One surprise was furnished by the election of Hamilton Fish, Jr., the youthful Progressive Assemblyman from Putnam County, over John R. Vale, the Republican boss of Putnam, who was a candidate for the seat and who for a dozen years was a member closely allied with the inner ring in the Assembly during the Black Horse Cavalry days.

Senator Elon R. Brown of Jefferson County, who was minority leader in the present Senate, was given a very close race by his Democratic opponent, George R. Lawyer.

New York City will be represented in the next Senate by 15 Democrats and 8 Republicans. All the New York City Senators at present are Democrats. Of the 63 Assemblymen from New York City, 18 will be Republicans or Progressives. Tammany did pretty well by its old war horses, returning a majority of them to the lawmaking body, and the same holds true about the Democratic organization in Kings, which is so closely allied with Tammany.

With the marked Republican trend in the elections to the Legislature, the result in the Twenty-third Assembly District in Manhattan, which takes in the Washington Heights section, furnished a startling surprise. Regarded as the banner Republican district in Manhattan, and represented in the Lower House by S. Clinton Crane, an active and effective legislator of a progressive type, who was a candidate for re-election, the Twenty-third turned about and elected D. C. Oliver, his Democratic opponent. The Nineteenth Senate District, which includes the Twenty-third, also returned a Democrat, George W. Simpson, the present Senator, to the upper branch of the Legislature.

Here are tables showing the make-up of the next Legislature:

INDIANA.

Indiana voted for United States Senator, Congressmen, Secretary of State, and other State officials, and on question of holding a constitutional convention for adoption of new Constitution. Vote for Governor in 1912: Democratic, 275,275; Republican, 162,805; Progressive, 166,054.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 3.—There were two surprises in the election in Indiana today: the unexpected strength of Hugh Miller, the Republican candidate for Senator, and the poor showing of the Progressive candidate. Politicians had figured the race was between Senator Shively and Albert J. Beveridge, the Progressive candidate. The returns from the outlying counties seemed to indicate that Senator Shively would be re-elected.

Merrill Moores (Rep.) easily defeated Congressman Charles Korbley (Dem.) in this (the Seventh) district.

The outcome of the State ticket is in doubt, and it will probably be tomorrow before it is known whether the Democrats or Republicans win.

The Republicans made a clean sweep in this (Marion) county, Miller leading Shively by nearly 3,000 votes. Friends of Senator Shivley said he would carry the State by 30,000. Beveridge was running a poor third.

COLORADO.

Colorado voted for United States Senator, Congressman, Governor, and other State officials, and on prohibition and other amendments. Vote for Governor in 1912: Democratic, 114,044; Republican, 63,061; Progressive, 66,182.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Nov. 3.—At 10 o'clock tonight, with about one-third of the Denver vote counted and scattered returns from all parts of the State, indications are that George A. Carlson, Republican, has been elected Governor over Thomas M. Patterson, Democrat, and E. P. Costigan, by a majority that will run all the way from 5,000 to 25,000.

Charles S. Thomas, Democrat, appears to be re-elected United States Senator over Ben Griffith, Progressive, and Dr. Robert M. Work, Republican, although Work is making a very strong showing in some districts.

For Congress the Democrats seem to have elected three out of four candidates, with one district in doubt. On the face of available returns Hery C. Hilliard has been elected in the First (Denver) District, Edward Keating in the Third, and Edward Taylor in the Fourth. H. H. Seldomridge, Democrat, seems in danger of being defeated by C. B. Timberlake, Republican, in the Second District.

DELAWARE.

Delaware voted for Congressmen, State Treasurer, and Auditor of Accounts. Vote for Governor in 1912: Democratic, 21,460; Republican, 22,745; Progressive, 8,019.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 3.—Due to a Republican landslide in Wilmington and rural New Castle County, Secretary of State Thomas W. Miller, Republican, son of Gov. Miller, was elected Representative in Congress today. His plurality over Franklin Brockson, Democrat, the incumbent, was about 1,500. Kent and Sussex Counties went Democratic by pluralities respectively of about 500 and 300. William J. Swain, Republican, was elected State Treasurer and Charles J. Luff, Republican, was chosen State Auditor by pluralities the same as Miller's.

VERMONT.

Vermont voted for United States Senator, Congressman, Governor, and other State officials. Vote for Governor in 1912: Democratic, 20,001; Republican, 26,237; Progressive, 15,029.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Nov. 3.—Indications at midnight were that William P. Dillingham, Republican, would be returned to the United States Senate by a large majority over Charles A. Prouty, former Interstate Commerce Commissioner, who was indorsed by the Democrats, Progressives, and Prohibitionists. Returns from 224 out of 246 election districts in the State gave Dillingham 33,207 and Prouty 25,355. The total vote on the State ticket was running about 3,000 behind that for Senator. At midnight, with sixty-six towns missing, the returns for governor stood: Charles W. Gates, Republican, 25,764; Harland B. Howe, Democrat, 10,560, and W. R. Aldrich, Progressive, 4,469. This showed a falling off of about 11,000 in the Progressive vote from that of 1912. The Republicans will have a large majority in the Legislature.

KENTUCKY.

Kentucky voted for United States Senators, Congressmen, and Judge of Court of Appeals, and on amendments providing for uniformity and classification of taxes and employment of convicts on public roads, &c. Vote for Governor in 1911: Democratic, 226,771; Republican, 195,436.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 3.—Scattering reports indicate the election by large pluralities of J. C. W. Beckham and J. N. Camden, Democrats, to the United States Senate. Beckham is elected for the full term and Camden will fill out an unexpired term.

These representatives in Congress have been elected:

First District—Alben W. Barkley, Democrat.

Second District—David H. Kincheloe, Democrat.

Third District—Robert Y. Thomas, Jr., Democrat.

Fourth District—Ben Johnson, Democrat.

Fifth District—Swager Sherley, Democrat.

Sixth District—Arthur B. Rouse, Democrat.

Seventh District—J. Campbell Cantrill, Democrat.

Eighth District—Harvey Helm, Democrat.

Ninth District—W. J. Fields, Democrat.

NEVADA.

Nevada voted on United States Senator, Congressmen, Governor, and other State officials. Vote for Governor in 1910: Democratic, 8,798; Republican, 10,486.

RENO, Nev., Nov. 3.—Indications are that Samuel Platt (Rep.) has been elected United States Senator over Newlands, (Dem.,) and that the Republican Congressmen have been re-elected. Emmet Boyle (Dem.) apparently is elected Governor over Oddie, (Rep.) The count will not be finished for twenty-four hours.

Returns from 58 out of 240 precincts in the State give, for woman suffrage, 1,011; against, 873.

CALIFORNIA.

California voted for United States Senator, Congressmen, Governor, and other State officials. Vote for Governor in 1910: Democratic, 154,835; Republican, 177,191.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 3.—Scattered returns from all parts of the State indicate a landslide to Gov. Hiram W. Johnson, (Prog.,) candidate for re-election, over John D. Fredericks, (Rep.,) and John D. Curtin, (Dem.) Every precinct reporting up to 11 o'clock gave Johnson a plurality. In Los Angeles, Fredericks's home county, Johnson was far in the lead.

For United States Senator, the early returns were too close to hazard a forecast.

At anti-Prohibition headquarters it was asserted that prohibition had been defeated, more than two to one.

$25 Overcoats!

Don't gauge the value by the price. $25 is little for a Stein-Bloch, but it buys a pure-wool, smart-style Overcoat in exclusive patterns.

The shapely softness of a Stein-Bloch never leaves it, because it's finger-tailored, not machine-stitched.

NEW JERSEY SHOWS REPUBLICAN GAINS

Indications That Eight Out of Twelve Seats in Congress Have Been Carried.

CONTROL STATE SENATE

Prof. Prince Wins in the Sixth Over Democratic Incumbent — Returns Much Delayed.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 3.—The Republicans made a great sweep in New Jersey today. Returns up to midnight indicated the election of eight Congressmen, but it is likely that the Democrats when full returns are in may win one of these seats. There was much delay in tabulating the returns.

State Chairman Bugbee at midnight said that the Republicans would have a majority of one in the State Senate. Salem County was in doubt at that hour, but was expected to go Republican, too. Mercer County went solidly Republican, and the Fourth Congressional District, including Hunterdon, Somerset, and Mercer Counties elected Elijah C. Hutchinson over Allan B. Walsh, the Democratic incumbent.

The entire Republican ticket was elected in Mercer County. J. Warren Fleming is the new Sheriff; Surrogate Bullock was re-elected by a handsome majority, and the Assembly ticket, Hammond, Oliphant and Weart, were also named.

CAMDEN, Nov. 3.—Representative William J. Browning carried Camden County by over 5,000, and Gloucester by 600.

HACKENSACK, Nov. 3.—Dr. John G. Prince of Columbia University apparently has defeated Representative A. C. Hart for Congress. Dr. Prince will have something like 1,500 majority in this county and in Sussex County.

The vote in Newark showed strong Republican gains, and the Republicans claim that they carried the city and the county.

Newark was the centre of interest in the local contests, where the Democratic machine, led by James Nugent, worked hard for the re-election of Mayor Haussling. Pitted against Mayor Haussling was

CITY GAVE GLYNN 54,114 PLURALITY

Gerard's for Senator About 105,648, Almost Double That of Governor.

UP-STATE VOTE BEAT BOTH

Dix's City Plurality in 1910 Was 105,282, and Sulzer Carried It by 109,521.

OTHER REPUBLICAN GAINS

In City Congressmen, Senators, and Assemblymen—Tammany Re-elects Its Justices.

Martin H. Glynn, when he lost the Governorship, carried New York City by a bare plurality of approximately 54,114. His small city plurality was utterly swamped by the 187,391 plurality given to Whitman above the Bronx.

The total vote in the city, with even election districts missing, was: Glynn, 291,065; Whitman, 236,951; Davenport, 15,218; Sulzer, 29,235.

Glynn's city plurality is surprisingly small. In 1910 Dix carried the five boroughs by a plurality of 105,282 over Stimson, and two years ago, in the three-cornered fight between Sulzer, Straus, and Hedges, Sulzer carried the city by a plurality of 109,521 over Straus, (Progressive,) and 192,370 over Hedges, (Republican.)

In its first direct vote for a United States Senator the city gave Ambassador James W. Gerard a plurality almost double that given to Glynn for Governor. The city vote was: Gerard, 267,365; Wadsworth, 161,717; Colby, (Prog.,) 18,914, thus giving Gerard a total plurality of 105,648.

The Congressional and legislative delegations show a distinct Republican gain. The Congressional delegation gains at least three Republican Representatives, and at midnight three more seats were still in doubt.

The city Senate delegation, which was solidly Democratic, now includes seven Republicans.

In the Assembly contests in the city Tammany took care of its own. Practically all the old Tammany standbys are returned, but in some of the other Assembly districts, where the Republicans had fused with the Progressives, the result was a Fusion victory. From New York County there will be 7 Republicans, and 24 Democrats; Kings will have 11 Republican Assemblymen out of 23. Queens, the Bronx, and Richmond return solid Democratic delegations.

Tammany re-elected its two Supreme Court Justices, Messrs. Dugro and Weeks. But, all in all, there were solemn faces about Tammany Hall when the city returns were scrutinized last night.

GLYNN'S CONGRATULATIONS.

Sends Telegram to Judge Whitman —Refuses Comment.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 3.—Gov. Glynn declined to comment on the election, but late in the evening sent the following telegram to District Attorney Whitman:

"I congratulate you on your victory."

The Governor, who did not complete his campaign in New York until early this morning, arrived in Albany less than half an hour before the polls closed. He went straight to an election booth and voted Ballot No. 305.

At 10:20 o'clock last night this message was sent:

Hon. Martin H. Glynn, Governor of New York, Albany, New York:

Many thanks for your congratulations, which I heartily appreciate.

CHARLES S. WHITMAN.

Among the several hundred congratulatory telegrams received by Mr. Whitman last night was one from Charles W. Fairbanks, which read:

"I heartily congratulate you on your magnificent victory."

George W. Aldridge sent this:

"Accept my most hearty congratulations."

Robert Grier Cooke sent this message:

"Heartiest congratulations and best wishes for successful Administration."

AMENDMENTS BEATEN.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 3.—Early returns indicate that ten Constitutional amendments, providing initiative, referendum, recall, State insurance, and other similar doctrines, have been beaten despite the combined La Follette and Socialist advocacy.

Republican Chiefs Rejoice at Sweeping Victory and Declare Democracy Is Rebuked.

WHITMAN SILENT ON RESULT

"It Speaks for Itself," His Only Comment on Hearing of His Election.

DEMOCRATS ARE DOWNCAST

"The People Have Spoken," Murphy Admits—Osborn to Hold a Post-Mortem.

It has been many years since there has been so much jubilation at Republican State headquarters in Thirty-ninth Street as there was last night. State Chairman Frederick C. Tanner and the other officials of the State Committee as well as several of the candidates gathered there early and from the time the first returns began to come in at 6 o'clock until after midnight several clerks were busy chalking up Whitman pluralities on a big blackboard amid cheers from the crowd.

District Attorney Whitman received returns in his own headquarters at 37 Madison Avenue. His secretary, Lloyd D. Willis, told him shortly before 7 o'clock that his election was assured, and Mr. Whitman and wife quietly disappeared to take dinner at an uptown restaurant. Asked if he cared to make a statement the successful candidate said:

"The result speaks for itself. That is all I care to say at this time."

At Republican State headquarters Chairman Tanner gave out this statement shortly after 8 o'clock:

"This sweeping victory indicates the return to public confidence of the Republican Party as the best means of effective government. The victory is the more remarkable because it was won against the combined efforts of Murphy, Roosevelt, Hearst, and the Wilson Administration."

Result Known Early.

Mr. Tanner said that covered everything that he cared to say at this time. Although early returns indicated that Mr. Whitman had won, it was not until after 8 o'clock that the up-State returns showed the victory was a landslide. At 8:30 o'clock Secretary Lafayette B. Gleason said that the returns indicated that Whitman had won by about 200,000 plurality and Wadsworth by at least 150,000. There was a big cheer when it was announced that Democratic State headquarters had conceded that Whitman had carried Albany County, the home of Gov. Glynn, by 12,000 plurality. The results from Buffalo, Rochester, and Syracuse were also cheered loudly.

When it became certain that Mr. Whitman had carried everything interest centred upon what the other candidates were doing, and particularly James W. Wadsworth, the Republican candidate for United States Senator. Mrs. Wadsworth, wife of the candidate, is ill in Washington, but she telephoned to State headquarters asking for news regarding her husband. She was told that Mr. Wadsworth's plurality was estimated to be at least 100,000. Mr. Wadsworth left Washington to vote in Genesee County and hurried back to the Capital without stopping in this city.

All through the evening telegrams of congratulation poured in at Republican State headquarters, and at Mr. Whitman's own headquarters. One of these was from William Sulzer, and read:

> If you finish the work of reform that I began at Albany, you will win the congratulations and deserve the commendation of all good citizens.

"Rebuke to Mismanagement."

County Chairman Samuel S. Koenig made this comment on the result:

"The result is a rebuke to the Democratic State administration because of the mismanagement of the State since 1910. In addition to this, it emphasizes the desire of the people to return to power at the earliest possible moment the Republican Party, in order to restore confidence and the return to prosperity enjoyed under Republican administrations. That this significant result should have been achieved against the united efforts of the Democratic leaders, backed by the full power of the national Administration and the personal intervention of President Wilson, is the clearest proof that Democracy in the whole nation has been repudiated."

At Republican headquarters it was said that never before at an election, State or otherwise, had the results been indicated so early. This, said Chairman Tanner, was due to the Massachusetts form of ballot and the use of voting machines up-State.

Jacob A. Livingston, Chairman of the Republican Executive Committee of Kings County, made this statement:

"Unquestionably the disclosures of conditions at Sing Sing Prison, particularly the joy-riding trips of David A. Sullivan, the convicted Brooklyn banker, contributed largely to wiping out the normal plurality of the Democratic Party in Kings. In East New York, where many of the depositors of the wrecked Union Bank lived, Sulzer got a comparatively small vote. This shows that most of the Union Bank depositors voted for Whitman rather than for Sulzer.

"While the disclosures at Sing Sing provided one cause, there were two others. The first was that voters of New York State would not tolerate interference by the President. The second was the maladministration of Dix and Sulzer. The result of the election sounds the death knell of the Progressive Party in the State."

Late last night Mr. Livingston claimed the election of three Congressmen, four State Senators, and thirteen Assemblymen. The Congressmen were Frederick W. Rowe, Sixth District; Reuben L. Haskell, Tenth, and Oscar W. Swift, Ninth. This represents a gain of two. The State Senators were Charles C. Lockwood, Fourth District; Charles F. Murphy, Sixth; Alvah W. Burlingham, Jr., Eighth, and Alfred J. Gilchrist, Tenth.

Result Pleases Cropsey.

District Attorney James C. Cropsey of Kings County said last night:

"I am not surprised at the results of the election in Kings County. I knew the revelations of Sullivan's joy rides at Sing Sing would be a big factor. The issue had had tremendous and potent influence in this city, and I am certain that the widespread publicity given to it throughout the State has had more to do with the surprising results up-State than many persons had dreamed of down here.

"It is evident that most of the incensed Union Bank depositors of all political convictions voted for Whitman. They wanted to make their protest count. They apparently saw that the investigation carried on at the eleventh hour by Baldwin, confined as it was to the acts of Warden McCormick, was artificial and indicated no willingness to go further in the direction of the man higher up. Whether the present administration intends to probe to the core of this scandal now is immaterial. Mr. Whitman will administer justice to the ruined bank depositors by a thorough housecleaning of the State Board of Parole. There are at this time any number of closed banks throughout the State, and the Sullivan scandal hit them all. It opened the eyes of the State."

Theodore P. Wilsmark, manager of the Republican Campaign Committee in Queens County said:

"The vote for Mr. Whitman was more than 20,000 in Queens. We are pleased at this vote because it is about 5,000 more than the enrollment of Republicans. It shows that the appeals made by Mr. Whitman were effective in this Democratic stronghold. We succeeded also in holding our own in the Republican section of the county, and while we did not carry the county, we helped swell the splendid majority that Mr. Whitman has received throughout the State."

A telegram suggesting that Mr. Whitman was now a Presidential possibility was received by Mr. Whitman from William Ziegler, Jr., President of the Whitman College Men's League. It said:

"The league congratulates you on your splendid victory. We are confident your administration will be successful, and that you will go to Washington in 1916."

Moose Headquarters Dreary.

Things were dark and dreary about the headquarters of the Progressive Party, at 32 Washington Square West, last night. State Chairman Theodore Douglas Robinson and County Chairman Francis W. Bird received returns there, and when asked if they had any statement to make they shook their heads gloomily. No word was received from Col. Roosevelt.

NO EXCUSES TO OFFER.

Murphy and Other Democratic Leaders Say People Have Spoken.

Deep gloom prevailed at Tammany Hall and Democratic State headquarters in Thirty-fourth Street last night. Tammany was prepared for disquieting news, but not even the oldest follower of the Fourteenth Street organization believed for a moment that it was to be a Republican landslide. Even when the polls closed at 5 o'clock there wasn't a smile visible anywhere about the wigwam. Charles F. Murphy was at his desk and had a short conversation with Bartow S. Weeks, Democratic candidate for Supreme Court Justice. Mr. Murphy did not look at all happy.

Returns, as usual, were received in the Speakers' Bureau, and a corps of clerks were on hand to tabulate the figures. At 6:30 o'clock, when the returns began to come in and those from Erie County indicated the way things were going, Mr. Murphy decided it was dinner time and departed in search of his evening meal. After that the Tammany men of importance began to drop in from time to time. Supreme Court Justices Erlanger and Weeks were on hand early, and were joined later by Edward E. McCall and William Sohmer, the Tammany candidate for Controller. The big hall in the building upstairs was thrown open to the public, but only a small crowd took advantage of the accommodation, although a band was trying to liven things up.

Result Makes Murphy Gloomy.

It was about 7:30 o'clock that Thomas F. Smith, Secretary of Tammany Hall, conceded the election of Mr. Whitman and said that Glynn's plurality in the city would be around 50,000, while Whitman's plurality in the State would be around 150,000. About 8:30 o'clock Mr. Murphy returned and was applauded by the twoscore Tammany men in the speakers' room. He smiled acknowledgment of the reception, and sat down to converse with Mr. McCall and Mr. Sohmer. Mr. Murphy's face became gloomier and gloomier as the evening wore on, and when he was asked if he had any statement to make he said:

"By their votes the electors of the State have signified their choice for Governor. There is no more to be said, except to wish Mr. Whitman a satisfactory and successful administration. I hope that he will fill the great office as conscientiously and as worthily as his efficient predecessor, Gov. Glynn."

Mr. Murphy went away a few minutes later. The band also gave up its job, the lights were put out, and the building became as dark as was the outlook a short time before.

At Democratic State headquarters State Chairman William Church Osborn and one or two of his assistants received the returns. Gloom settled down early, unlightened by a ray of hope. When the returns from Buffalo and the rest of Erie County came in Mr. Osborn gave it up. Asked if he thought the election was a rebuke to President Wilson, Mr. Osborn said he had not had time to analyze the result. Asked if he thought the county organization had been loyal, he said:

No Disloyalty, Osborn Says.

"I haven't the slightest idea that there was any disloyalty. I cannot say what the result was due to until I have had a chance to make a comparison with other States. I was hopeful that President Wilson's peaceful policy would have had an influence on the result here. No, I do not think the tariff had anything to do with the result. Gov. Glynn made a most remarkable campaign. It was magnificent in every particular. I felt sure that Ambassador Gerard would be elected, and the result is very disappointing to me."

"Do you believe the religious issue had much to do with the result?" Mr. Osborn was asked.

"I think it was greatly exaggerated," replied Mr. Osborn. "I don't believe it made a difference of more than 25,000 or 30,000 votes.

"I cannot give any reason for the result until I have performed a post-mortem. As yet I have not put the knife into the corpse."

John H. McCooey, Tammany leader in Kings County, declined to make any comment on the outcome of the election when asked to do so late last night. He merely said that the results spoke for themselves. Earlier in the evening Mr. McCooey, when informed of the first returns, said the indications were that the contest between Mr. Glynn and Mr. Whitman in Kings County had been very close, but that Mr. Gerard apparently would have a good majority.

Capt. Daniel F. Shea, ex-Chairman and leader of the Democratic Party in Queens County, said:

"We carried Queens County by between 6,000 and 7,000 for Gov. Glynn. The organization in the borough stood solidly by the Governor, and his appeal to the workingmen was very effective. This is shown by the fact that in the First Assembly District, which includes the industrial district of Long Island City, he was successful, almost two to one, against Mr. Whitman, and in the Ridgewood district, where there is a large labor population, Mr. Glynn won out over Mr. Whitman by more than 2,000 majority. We have been successful also in electing our local candidates, including Congressmen, State Senators, District Attorney, and three Assemblymen. All these have been elected by large majorities. It shows that the organization is stronger now than it has ever been."

Glynn Conceded Defeat Early.

At Gov. Glynn's personal headquarters in the Hotel Vanderbilt last night defeat was conceded an hour after the polls closed. As the returns came in there was much discussion over the falling off of the Tammany vote in the city and the big Republican vote up-State. At 8 o'clock George Henry Payne, the manager, sent a telegram to Gov. Glynn which read:

"There are some things that know no defeat, and the greatest of these, character and integrity, are yours. I am proud to have been associated with you."

"UNCLE JOE" CANNON GETS HIS 20TH TERM

W. B. McKinley and Two Other Old Guard Republicans Also to Regain House Seats.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 3.—Returns from the Eighteenth Congressional District returned to Congress "Uncle Joe" Cannon, who defeated the incumbent, Frank T. O'Hair, by 3,500 plurality and carried Vermilion, his home county, by 1,500.

Six members of the Old Guard who were victims of the Democratic landslide two years ago sought to regain their seats. Incomplete returns indicate that four, and probably five, of these have been successful.

William B. McKinley, campaign manager for William H. Taft in 1912, apparently has recaptured the seat in Congress he lost two years ago. Returns from the Nineteenth District are incomplete, but they indicate McKinley has been elected safely.

Special to The New York Times.

DANVILLE, Ill., Nov. 3.—"Uncle Joe" Cannon has "come back," as he said he would. He will take his seat in Congress next March for the twentieth time, and the cigars he will smoke, he says, will be as long and black as the ones he puffed on his front porch this beautiful November day, when the voters of the Eighteenth District elected him over Representative Frank T. O'Hair.

President Wilson pleaded with the voters for Mr. O'Hair's return; Col. Roosevelt, in his Illinois speeches, trained his heaviest howitzers on the Danville statesman; Albert J. Beveridge took special shots at him; Raymond Robins, Progressive candidate for Senator, predicted his defeat, and every Chicago newspaper strongly opposed his return to Congress.

Mr. Cannon was elected first to Congress forty-two years ago, and served continuously till 1911, except the two years from 1891 to 1893. Mr. O'Hair defeated "Uncle Joe" by 800 votes two years ago, when the Bull Moose was at the zenith of its power in Illinois. Samuel T. Busey, an old soldier, was the man who beat "Uncle Joe" in 1890.

Mr. Cannon tonight made the following statement:

"The returns give evidence of the intent of the people of the United States to return the Republicans to full control, and in 1916 the voters will have a Republican House and Senate and a Republican President. I gather that we have made substantial gains throughout the country. While we may not have elected a majority in the House, the people have shown their desire to return to Republican policies and Republican prosperity."

Congressman O'Hair declared he was gaining in Vermilion County, Mr. Cannon's stronghold, and also in Iroquois and Kankakee Counties.

"I stand a good chance of being elected. I will not concede the election until the returns are all in," he said.

BUFFALO VOTES FOR COMMISSION PLAN

New Government Was Bitterly Opposed by Democrats—Big Plurality for Whitman.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 3.—The Republican wave hit this Democratic county a real jolt today. Complete returns for the city give Whitman a plurality of 12,712, and, of the nineteen districts in the county yet unheard from, the indications are that Whitman's plurality will be increased to at least 15,000.

Lockwood, for Lieutenant Governor on the Democratic ticket, won by 6,522, this being his home city. Chauncey Hamlin, Progressive, ran ahead of Schoeneck, the Republican candidate, this also being Hamlin's home town.

Wadsworth received a plurality of 2,323 in the city and a total in the county of nearly 4,000.

The Democrats have elected a Sheriff in Erie County by a plurality of less than 700, Edward Steni winning over John J. Price, Republican, and John H. Price, Progressive.

THE TIMES FLASHED NEWS AT 6:20 P. M.

Record Crowd Packed Broadway and Seventh Avenue for Election Merrymaking.

NEW TRAFFIC ORDER ISSUED

Bonfires Few and Scattered—Large Throngs Out in Harlem and in the Bronx.

New Yorkers in every thoroughfare in the city in which the lights shone brightly last night surged and swayed up and down, back and forth by the thousands, in some places, notably Times Square, by the tens of thousands. The apathy of the public toward the election this year had been generally remarked, but no previous election night, not even any New Year's Eve, brought out more people than were on the streets last night. In the estimate of Police Inspector Myers, who has had many years' experience with Coney Island crowds, there were 100,000 persons at one time in Broadway and Seventh Avenue, between Fortieth and Fiftieth Streets.

The good weather helped bring the hosts out, and long after the election had been decided the crowds stayed in the streets. Indeed, the election lost importance an hour or two after the searchlight on the Times Building tower sent its beam of light north at 6:20 P. M., indicating the victory of Mr. Whitman.

When this early announcement was flashed the streets had not filled, it being evident that the people did not expect the decisive returns so soon. As far as could be judged, the crowd was about evenly divided between the two principal candidates. At no time during the evening was there any general demonstration in favor of either.

And, save for those who held their places against the general pushing in front of THE TIMES's bulletins in Broadway, both candidates seemed forgotten. The night became as New Year's Eve after 9 o'clock. It was then that Broadway began to fill, and horns, cow bells, confetti, ticklers, and all the other noise and amusement makers appeared. From then until after midnight the thoroughfare was a scene of revelry.

When the theatres poured their thousands out the crowding and noise and merrymaking were at their height. Shortly afterward many had disappeared into restaurants and cafés, but they were hardly missed from the great throng that remained out.

But, though a minority, thousands were really interested in following the count of the votes, and these were packed in Broadway and Forty-second Street watching each announcement flashed on the screen on the Times Building. There was little cheering among them and little argument. They seemed only curiously interested. Now and then there were exclamations of surprise at Mr. Whitman's majorities, and "I told you so" was frequently heard, but there was little more than this to indicate that it was election night and not New Year's Eve.

Noticeable in the throng that moved in all directions about the Times Building was the group in front of the war bulletin board that did not move. The faithful followers of the war news remained faithful. Many of them were not voters. They were the friends and relatives of soldiers fighting where the names of Gov. Glynn and Mr. Whitman have never been heard. All night, after the merrymakers had tired and gone home, the group in front of the war bulletins remained, as usual, at its post. Election night seemed to have come and gone without their realizing it.

The police arrangements were excellent. Inspector Myers was in charge of 125 men, whom he stretched out in Broadway and Seventh Avenue between Fortieth and Fiftieth Streets at short intervals of space. The movement of the crowds was facilitated by the Inspector's order requiring all persons on the east side of Broadway to move north and all on the west side south. Last night was the first time this had been done, and the plan worked with distinct success, and much congestion and disorder were prevented. Also vehicular traffic was suspended in Forty-second Street between Sixth and Seventh Avenues and in Broadway between Forty-second and Forty-third Streets, except for street cars and vehicles having business in the closed streets. This made greatly for safety and ease in moving the crowds.

And though the police were busy directing the movement of the people, they had little difficulty in maintaining order. No flagrant violation of the law occurred, and there were scarcely any arrests. Up to 10 o'clock there was none in Times Square. The good behavior of the people was commented upon by Inspector Myers several times during the night. "They are just out to have a good time and make a lot of noise," he said to a TIMES reporter, "and we don't care how much noise and fun they have."

Bonfires, in times past seemingly inevitable on election night, were noticeably few and scattered last night. Commissioner Woods took special precautions against them, for last year, according to his estimate, $100,000 worth of property was destroyed through election bonfires. Two hundred mounted patrolmen were withdrawn from their regular service to patrol the streets in automobiles, all of the Police Department cars and as many as could be borrowed from other municipal departments being used. In addition lines of hose were laid at various corners, and as soon as a bonfire was started within reach a stream of water was turned upon it.

One of the most enthusiastic crowds that ever gathered in Harlem on an election night drifted up and down 125th Street all the way from Third to St. Nicholas Avenue. Though not so large as the throngs of a Presidential year, the crowds were swelled by many visitors from Morningside and Washington Heights, and from the Jersey towns connecting with the Fort Lee Ferry.

The dwellers of the Bronx also turned out in great numbers. At 149th Street and Third Avenue thousands passed in a steady stream for hours.

More than fifty youths were arraigned in the Men's Night Court last night for starting bonfires, and about as many boys under sixteen years of age were taken to the Children's Society. In the court Magistrate Levy dismissed most of the offenders with a reprimand, and fined others $1 each. A dozen or so young men were arraigned in the court for using ticklers and each was fined $3. One young woman who, in the opinion of the police, became too lively with her tickler was fined $1. These minor offenses occupied almost the entire time of the court. There were no serious charges incident to election night.

HOW CITY'S PRESS VIEWS THE RESULT

Murphyism Has Broken Back of Democratic Party in New York, Says World.

A REPETITION OF 1884 VOTE

Rebuke to Wilson, Asserts Tribune —Herald and Sun See Roosevelt Eclipse.

Here is some of the editorial comment in other New York newspapers this morning on the elections in State and country:

Wrecked by Murphyism.

From The World.

Last year Murphyism broke the back of the Democratic Party in New York City.

This year Murphyism has broken the back of the Democratic Party of New York State.

The people of New York will no longer tolerate Tammany Hall government at Albany. They have said it in the great vote polled for Mr. Whitman. They have said it still more emphatically in the vote polled for William Sulzer. Discredited and disgraced, a bankrupt in reputation as well as in character, Sulzer has again proved himself the political Nemesis of the boss who impeached him and removed him from the Governorship not because he had pocketed campaign contributions, but because he had refused longer to take orders from Charles F. Murphy.

A sorry implement of political justice, perhaps, but William Sulzer has nevertheless done his work and done it effectively.

Gov. Glynn is the victim of conditions which he did not create, but which, unfortunately, he had taken no strong measures to remedy.

Even Mr. Roosevelt with all his skill and with all his vindictive hatred of the Republican organization of New York, which blocked his third-term ambitions, could not check the popular determination to drive Murphyism out of Albany, no matter who suffered and who benefited.

The Democrats of New York have been beaten because they tolerated Charles F. Murphy as the boss of their party organization. They learned nothing from the disastrous defeat that they sustained in the city last Fall. Will they learn nothing from the disastrous defeat that they sustained in the State this Fall?

Whitman and Wadsworth.

From The Herald.

Irrespective of considerations of broader national politics, it is very likely that a good many men in this State voted for Mr. Whitman because they felt that after experience with three Democratic Governors at Albany a Republican Governor would come as a relief. This feeling has doubtless been greatly promoted by the splendid impression Mr. Whitman has made in his campaigning through the State, and by the fact that Mr. Whitman is Mr. Whitman.

Of Mr. Glynn it may be said in all charity that his defeat is due not so much to any doubt of his own good intentions as to his failure to accept the warning of one far wiser than he to "beware of entangling alliances," which in his case applied to alliances journalistic as well as to alliances political.

The Progressive "slump" in his own State is hardly less significant of the Roosevelt eclipse than is the waning of Progressive strength in other parts of the country. In spots it has cut enough of a figure to contribute to the defeat of a Republican nominee, but as a party the "Bull Moose" need no longer be reckoned with.

The Republican Turn.

From The Sun.

The salient feature of the voting yesterday throughout the United States, or rather throughout that part of the country which is reasonably indicative of political change, was the compelling evidence of Republican reunion. The Progressive advance is not only checked, the Progressive forces are almost annihilated. * * * The main fact so far transcends in importance the local developments in this State or in any other State that even the landslide by which Mr. Whitman and Mr. Wadsworth benefit so conspicuously seems this morning a minor incident.

The marked readjustment yesterday in the relative voting strength of the two great parties merely emphasizes the now almost forgotten conditions under which Mr. Wilson and his party originally attained to power. Two years ago Mr. Wilson's vote lacked more than a million and a quarter of the combined vote of the Republican Party, split into two factions by Col. Roosevelt's individual enterprise of hatred and ambition. He is a minority President.

A Repudiation of 14th Street.

From The Tribune.

The Republican landslide in this State is attributable to two things—an abhorrence of Tammany Hall's game of grab and graft, and a desire to rebuke a reform President who, for the sake of his own Administration, about to be judged on its questionable achievements, cast his lot with Tammany and induced so-called anti-Tammany Democrats here to swallow a Tammany ticket. There can be no mistake about the intent of the voters. All the Democratic apologies and explanations will avail nothing. If the result had been fairly close they might have had some worth. As it is, Murphy and President Wilson may mingle their tears, for the voters of this State have spoken their mind to both of them with emphasis.

It is a fitting rebuke to the cynical dishonesty and disregard of the public interest which have characterized the State administration for the last four years, and the hypocrisy which induced Washington, for shallow, selfish reasons, to give its approval.

Against that Mr. Whitman's record of splendid service in the District Attorney's office here was a shining light. He had been an anti-boss official. He had prosecuted grafters and sent them to jail. He had been balked in jailing more of them by Gov. Glynn, his opponent. He represented precisely the combination of qualities the voters desired in office to clean out the "merry firm of Grab and Graft" from its headquarters in the Capitol.

Against Mr. Whitman.

From The Press.

Mr. Whitman did not carry this State for Governor; the people of New York carried it. Mr. Wadsworth did not carry this State for Senator; the people of New York carried it. Mr. Penrose did not carry Pennsylvania; the people of his State carried it.

Other Republican candidates for Governor, for Senator, and for Representative did not carry their States and their Congress districts.

The American people carried them—carried them not so much for this or for that candidate, elected often overwhelmingly, but against the policy and programme of Mr. Wilson's party in control of the national Government.

Yesterday in New York, for example, was exactly twenty years ago over again.

In 1894 the 150,000 for Morton was the verdict of the voters of New York against Mr. Cleveland and his economic policy. In 1914 the 150,000 for Whitman was the verdict of the voters of New York against Mr. Wilson and his economic policy.

ERROR AIDS HEARST LEAGUE

Thousands of Democrats Put Cross Under Wrong Emblem in Voting.

That there was a possibility of thousands of votes being counted for the Independence League which were meant for the Democratic Party in the vote for Governor yesterday became known last night when it was found that in many districts voters had put their cross mark in the space under the Independence League emblem, the scales, instead of in the space allotted under the black star, the emblem of the Democrats.

On the official ballot for Governor the emblems of the Democratic and the Independence League Parties appear side by side, as the latter party indorsed the Democratic Gubernatorial candidate. Under each emblem there is a small vacant place for the voter to register his cross. Thousands of voters put their cross mark in the space beneath the Independence League emblem, leaving the space beneath the Democratic emblem blank.

These votes, it was said last night, would be counted for the Independence League, although in most cases probably they were meant for the Democratic Party.

While the error will make no difference in the count for Governor, there is a possibility of the Democratic Party losing its position on the ballot should it be found that, throughout the State, a majority of the Democrats voted under the Independence League emblem.

In Queens alone, it was said, several thousand Democratic voters had unwittingly put their mark under the Independence League emblem.

VINDICATED, SULZER SAYS.

Deposed Governor Thinks Result Means Murphy Must Go.

William Sulzer and a score of his admirers received the returns last night at the Sulzer headquarters in the Broadway Central Hotel. As soon as he was sure that Mr. Whitman had won, Mr. Sulzer sent him a message of congratulation, and then gave out this statement:

"The verdict of the people reverses the verdict of the Murphy court of infamy. It means also that Murphy must go. Glynn plotted with Murphy to steal my office, but the voters refused to confirm the theft. It will be a long time before Tammany removes another Governor because he would not be a party to the looting of the State. Without organization it was impossible for me to win, but I console myself with the knowledge that I have elected Whitman, beaten Glynn, made Roosevelt ridiculous, and have driven from public life the conspirators who stole the Governorship.

"I am content. My usefulness in the struggle for reform and for better things has only begun. My fight will go on. I have not reached the end of the rope and I am going to the end. A long time ago I said no man could destroy William Sulzer but himself. That is true now. I thank the men who voted for me. They will never regret it. I congratulate Judge Whitman. Now he has the opportunity. I longed for to beat the bosses, get the grafters, and finish the work of reform that I began. If he has the courage to do it thoroughly and conscientiously in the interest of all the taxpayers, he is destined to write a large chapter in the annals of New York."

GERARD MEN HOPEFUL.

Believe Ambassador's City Vote Will Offset Up-State Losses.

At the headquarters of Ambassador Gerard in the Hotel Martinique, the force in charge of his campaign expressed hope last night that their candidate was elected, notwithstanding the estimates from up-State giving James W. Wadsworth, the Republican, big pluralities.

Thomas McCarthy, manager of the Gerard campaign, early this morning said he did not concede the election of Mr. Wadsworth. He said that, while estimates give Wadsworth a plurality of about 150,000 above the Harlem River, the plurality of Ambassador Gerard in Greater New York may offset that, as figures indicate that Ambassador Gerard's plurality in this city is about 150,000, which is about 125,000 more than Gov. Glynn's.

Riverhead, L. I., to Stay "Wet."

RIVERHEAD, L. I., Nov. 3.—Two years ago Riverhead, after several years of strict prohibition, went wet. This year the question was submitted again to the voters and the early indications are that the town will be wet for two years more. The indications are that the proposal to erect a county hospital for tuberculosis patients has been defeated.

JUSTIFIABLE PRIDE

It is justifiably a matter of pride with us that our being selected of recent years to construct the greatest buildings of modern times, has been due entirely to the fact that the Owners of these great enterprises found, upon investigation, that they could not consistently do otherwise.

VOTES, DIDN'T REGISTER.

Court Holds Law Does Not Apply to Small Places.

Michael J. Ryan, a manufacturer of this city, voted yesterday in his home town of Cedarhurst, L. I., although he did not register in October and did not register and vote in the last general election. Mr. Ryan intended to register last month, but his election district had been divided within the last year, and he was not informed of the place of registration in time to get himself on the rolls on the first registration days. Before the second opportunity offered he was called to the Pacific Coast on business and left word with Democratic leaders asking that they register for him.

When Mr. Ryan, who had returned hurriedly from the West in order to cast his vote, went to the polls yesterday he was challenged. William P. Langevin, his attorney, and George M. Bode, counsel for the Democratic Central Committee of Nassau County, applied at once to Justice Van Siclen of the Supreme Court, at Mineola, for a writ of mandamus against the Board of Elections. It was proved that Mr. Ryan had been a resident and property owner in Cedarhurst for three years, and that he had intended to register in October and had been prevented for the reasons given.

Justice Van Siclen, in his decision referred to the decision of the Court of Appeals, which ruled that the law requiring personal registration did not apply to election districts of less than 5,000 population, and said that under the circumstances he would grant the writ. Mr. Ryan voted just two minutes before the polls closed. Justice Van Siclen said last night that the case could hardly be said to establish a general precedent, as the peculiar circumstances made it very evident that Mr. Ryan not only intended but had a right to register, and that under the conditions he was given the benefit of the doubt.

CROWDS AT SUFFRAGE SHOP

Controller Prendergast and John A. Hennessy Address Meetings.

Crowds were inside and outside the Society Suffrage Shop, at 663 Fifth Avenue, all day yesterday. Controller William A. Prendergast and Mrs. V. G. Simkhovitch spoke in the morning. Mlle. Dorziat, the actress, was present, but did not speak on account of a cold.

Mrs. Charles Beard, who spoke in the afternoon, told the audience, which was composed largely of men, that if the women should win the vote in the seven campaign States they would have sixty-three electoral votes, and all the parties would fall over one another to please them.

John A. Hennessy told the women that it was not public opinion, but the individual leader, that influenced the vote; that it was the personal following of a political leader which did the work. He told the women to get the influence of men all over the State to work for them, and he would be glad to do his part.

WOMAN KILLED BY DANCING.

Mrs. Curran Is Taken Ill at a Ball and Dies on Getting Home.

To excessive dancing is attributed the death yesterday of Mrs. Mary Curran, 22 years old, of 251 Driggs Avenue, Williamsburg. The young woman with two friends, Miss Nellie Doyle of 957 Grand Street and Miss Florence Young, who lives at 706 Grand Street, attended a reception on Monday night in a hall at Grand and Havemeyer Streets. She danced four dances in rapid succession and at the close of the last became ill. After trying to revive her, her friends put her in a milk wagon and took her home. She died there a few hours later.

Industrial Attaché Sails Today.

Albertus H. Baldwin, the first of nine attachés appointed by the Federal Government to study industrial conditions abroad, will sail today on the Lusitania for Liverpool. He has just returned from a trip through the Eastern States on which he interviewed manufacturers on the export trade of the United States. Mr. Baldwin said that he would make his headquarters in London.

HOW VOTE WAS CAST IN NEW YORK CITY

Nearly Half the Total Was Polled by 9 A. M.—Little Trouble with New Ballot.

300 DEPUTIES ON THE JOB

Former Football Stars Acted as Watchers—Suffragists Busy at Polling Places.

The fair weather and the fact that the new modified Massachusetts ballot gave the voters little trouble made ideal conditions yesterday for rapid voting.

Voters began to crowd polling places within five minutes after the polls opened at 6 o'clock. They voted in steady streams until 9 o'clock, when the first lull set in, and a tabulation of figures revealed the fact that nearly half the votes were cast.

It was a record for early voting for any election in recent years. By noon 65 per cent of the total vote was in, and at 4 o'clock reports indicated that the late afternoon rush would be inconsequential, as 85 per cent. of the vote had already been cast. The total vote was recorded in several election districts more than an hour before the polls were scheduled to be closed.

Trouble had been expected from the new ballots, but as voter after voter emerged from the voting booths within a minute after entering, the watchers began to gain confidence that the day would pass without serious confusion.

In the districts near Columbia University some voters took as long as nine minutes to vote, their extreme deliberation indicating that they were splitting their tickets with much care. In the downtown districts political parties set up sample voting places as near to the polls as the law would allow. With sample ballots and the aid of instructors they taught the voters who had not had the opportunity to familiarize themselves with the new ballots earlier, how to vote in the normal amount of time.

The "place of stay" voters were conspicuous by their absence. Watchers for the Honest Ballot Association, who were employed in squads of 100 members each, scoured the city with warrants for the arrest of men who were suspected, but they went empty-handed for the most part, although they challenged a few suspects.

Shows Fight When Challenged.

One young man became very indignant and wanted to fight when challenged. He rushed into the office of Supt. of Elections Voorhis, denouncing everybody in general connected with the election, and demanding that an escort be given to him to see that he got his legal chance to vote. He was asked where he voted last year and he said in New Jersey, insisting, however, that he had lived here a year since that time. Supt. Voorhis with a smile informed the young man that the election last year was on Nov. 4, so that if he swore in his vote this year he "would be taking a pretty long chance." He changed his belligerent mood at once and left, with thanks for Mr. Voorhis's warning.

The only serious quarrel of the day occurred at the opening of the polls in the Fourteenth Election District of the Eighth Assembly District at 180 Eldridge Street. A Democratic Captain objected to Joseph Struiowitz as a member of the Board of Inspectors. Struiowitz was supported by Misha Hymowitz, Chairman of the board, and a seventeen-minute argument ensued that sometimes grew so warm that bystanders had to separate the contenders.

Dispute Held Up Voting.

While it lasted not a single vote could be cast, and it was finally settled by the protests of more than 100 voters, who urged that they had to be on their way to work and couldn't afford to stand about just to see a row. Struiowits finally was permitted to take his place. Supt. Voorhis had to send a Special Inspector to a Brooklyn election district on receiving a report from a Deputy that only three Inspectors instead of four, as provided by law, were on duty.

Mr. Voorhis sent out 300 Deputies in a search for election frauds. Upon receiving reports from them as to the speed and quietness of the voting throughout the city Mr. Voorhis announced that it was the quietest and most smoothly working Election Day he had ever known.

The entrance of former football stars into the business of watching the polls provided in some districts an element of interest that almost overshadowed the voting. L. Bigelow, Jr., Captain of Yale's football team in 1907, led the football forces who had volunteered as watchers. He was the centre of admiring throngs of boys when he visited voting places in lower Fifth Avenue. With him were Walter Logan and John Kilpatrick, ends on the Yale team in 1910; "Pop" Foster, a Yale tackle in 1908; Arthur Howe, an All-American quarter back, selected from the Yale team of 1910; S. D. Baker of Princeton, and "Big Ed" Farley of Harvard.

250 College Men as Watchers.

The football squad worked with 250 college men, who were registered as members of the Volunteer Watchers' League and were under the direct control of Assistant District Attorney Weller. Some of them remained in automobiles at the Criminal Courts Building ready to respond on an instant's notice to any call for help.

A bit of humor that enlivened the day in the upper east side was contributed by the fact that four Election Inspectors, a ballot clerk, and a poll clerk, and a policeman had to remain on duty all day at an election district where the entire vote was cast at 9 o'clock, and there was no possible prospect of getting any more votes through the long day's wait. The voteless watch occurred at the Forty-seventh Election District of the Nineteenth Assembly District at McGowan's Pass Tavern in Central Park. At 8:58 o'clock 50 per cent. of the district's vote was cast when Max Boehm cast his vote and the other 50 per cent. was cast when Max Boehm's son Bertrand emerged from the booth two minutes later. They were the only two registered voters in the district.

Women from the Women's Political Union visited the different polling places distributing suffrage literature. The women were on duty, some of them, from 6 A. M. and they remained until the close. Hundreds of women passed in and out of the headquarters of the union at 25 East Forty-fifth Street during the day to get literature and directions for distribution. Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch, the President, was at 623 Columbus Avenue, her own district, with her daughter and little granddaughter, the latter distributing literature with her elders. Mrs. John Winters Brannan was at the polls in the cigar shop, 103 West Forty-sixth Street, and Miss Anna Constable at 631 Park Avenue. Polling places on the lower east side were thoroughly covered by the women.

Up to 11 P. M. no report of any trouble in the counting of ballots was received at the office of the State Board of Elections, 47 West Forty-second Street. Superintendent John R. Voorhis remained until late at the office with several assistants, but no demand was made for their services in any part of the city.

WHERE CANDIDATES VOTED.

Whitman and Sulzer Cast Ballots Here—Other Notables.

Two of the candidates for Governor, Mr. Whitman and Mr. Sulzer, voted here.

Mr. Whitman went to the polling place at 412 Fourth Avenue, accompanied by George L. Genung, the Republican captain of the district. He found a battery of moving picture machines and a large camera squad ready for him, while Election Inspector William Bergren was waiting to hand him the ballots. It required just two minutes for the Republican candidate for Governor to mark his ballots inside the booth.

As he emerged he shook hands with all the election officials and handed them a box of cigars. He then returned to his home, where he remained until the returns came in.

William Sulzer voted at 27 West Eighth Street at 11 o'clock. He emerged from the voting booth with a declaration that the race was between himself and Mr. Whitman, with Gov. Glynn as a poor third. He said that up-State farmers who had not voted for twenty years, would be out in force to see that Gov. Glynn did not get back into office.

Mayor Mitchel voted at the polling place in West Ninety-eighth Street, between Broadway and West End Avenue. He walked to the polling place from his home in the Peter Stuyvesant Apartments in Riverside Drive at Ninety-eighth Street. Election workers questioned him as to his view of the race, but he refused their requests that he predict the results, saying it all depended upon the unknown quantity of Sulzer and Davenport.

President McAneny of the Board of Aldermen strolled up to the polling place at 24 East Forty-ninth Street at 12:45 o'clock with the greeting, "It's a fine day for voting, boys," to the election officials. He took two minutes to mark his ballots.

Charles F. Murphy, when he appeared at the polling place at 297 First Avenue, had the greeting, "It's lovely weather we're having," for all who approached him. He took three minutes to mark his ballots, and then shook hands with friends, who called him "Chief." He would not answer any questions from reporters.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who registered from his town residence at 10 West Fifty-fourth Street, voted at a barber shop at 936 Sixth Avenue. As he was leaving the booth he said he had been too keenly interested in the suffering of non-combatants in the European war zone to follow the course of the political campaign. He said he thought the European war was responsible for the unusually quiet election. He intimated, without actally saying so, that he voted for Mr. Whitman.

Henry Clews, who voted from the same polling place a few minutes before Mr. Rockefeller, said he was voting for Mr. Whitman because he was a man "who would do a day's work for a day's pay, and do it with integrity." He said he was voting for Whitman on his record as District Attorney.

Ex-Senator Thauncey M. Depew, who voted at 924 Sixth Avenue, remarked after casting his ballot that he had put it on the winner, as he could not see any possible chance for the candidates other than Mr. Whitman.

Col. Roosevelt voted at Oyster Bay. He arrived at the polling place in company with two gardeners from Sagamore Hill, who rode with him in the family carriage, which was driven by James Lee, the family coachman. Lee and the two gardeners prepared their ballots and voted ahead of Col. Roosevelt. The Colonel was greeted at the polls by Robert Duval, a Progressive leader.

ELECTION ORDERLY; FEW CASES IN COURT

Columbia Students Suffer Most from the Activities of the State Board.

MANY CALLED FROM BED

And Then Haled to Police Courts —Whitman Closes "Instruction" Booths.

All of the courts and the District Attorney's office were ready yesterday for prompt action in election cases, but there was not very much for them to do. The cases that did come up were unlike those of a few years ago, when assaults often preceded arrests, and many of those who came to court brought battered faces with them. One hundred and thirty-five men were haled to court yesterday in Manhattan. One hundred and seventeen were accused of illegal registration, sixteen of illegal voting, and two of disorderly conduct.

District Attorney Whitman's automobile squadron, organized for duty at the polls, found little work outside of closing a few saloons and ferreting out instruction bureaus run in violation of the law within 100 feet of a polling place.

Such an instruction booth for the guidance of Tammany voters was uncovered next to the polling place at 462 Grand Street by Arthur Howe, the ex-Yale football captain, who was a volunteer watcher for the Honest Ballot Association. According to one of the men in Howe's detachment money was being passed, but the watcher admitted later that there was a dim light, and he could not be sure as to the nature of the transaction. Inspector Schmittberger was notified, and he sent a policeman to the place to close it.

Warned Voters from Polls.

William Zeigler, in charge of one of the autos, found that in some of the downtown districts telegrams purporting to be from the Honest Ballot Association had been circulated. They were addressed to Republicans chiefly and read:

"Avoid trouble. Stay away from the polls. We have necessary information."

The original telegram was traced to a branch telegraph office at 854 Broadway. A subpoena has been issued for the manager's attendance at the District Attorney's office, and Assistant District Attorney Weller will try to find out where the telegrams came from.

Assistant District Attorney Groehl found a saloon at 178 Forsyth Street open in violation of the law. Detectives Flood and Armstrong of the District Attorney's office closed the place, and did the same to another saloon at the Bowery and Rivington Street.

Patrolman McGerald, on duty at the polls at 103 Third Avenue, reported to Assistant District Attorney Weller that Joseph Rosenberg, whom he arrested at the polls on a warrant charging false registration, had escaped. Rosenberg told the policeman that he had the right to swear in his vote in, and McGerald took him back to the polling place. Rosenberg got the ballots and started toward the booths, and that was the last McGerald saw of him.

Early yesterday morning policemen served subpoenas in the dormitories of Columbia University on students who were awakened for the purpose. The calls to court had been sworn out at the instigation of the Board of Elections, which charged the students with illegal registration. Seventy-five of the students who were served crowded into the Mulberry Street Court, where Chief Magistrate McAdoo and Magistrate Freschi were sitting. The matter was disposed of in a bunch. The Chief Magistrate said that the course pursued by the Superintendent of Election was improper and that its apparent purpose was to annoy the students.

When the Magistrate asked how many of the students had been summoned before on a similar errand many hands were put up. Then it was learned that some of the students had been summoned to court at every election in the last few years. Of the men who had been troubled in this way was William Cullen Bryant Kemp LL. B., L. L. M., A. B., A. M., who is still seeking other degrees. He has been a student for twenty-seven years and has spent most of these years at Columbia, which is his real home. He has the income of a trust fund, amounting to $5,000 a year, which is to be paid him as long as he stays at the university and which is to stop when he leaves it. Another student, J. A. Vaughn, had appeared in court on four previous occasions.

John R. Voorhis, State Superintendent of Elections, said last night in answer to the criticisms of Chief Magistrate McAdoo in regard to the action of the board in arresting the Columbia students, that it was not the place of the Chief Magistrate to criticise him for carrying out the functions for which the board was created. Whether the board was at fault in its attitude toward the student voters would be decided later by the courts, he said.

Other students were arraigned before Magistrate Deuel in the Harlem Court on summonses issued on the complaint of Frank Larkin, an Inspector of the Board of Elections. The contention was that the university was not a place of stay, but Larkin did not press the complaint. The Magistrate said that if the summonses were served for the purpose of making a test case they should have been served on Monday, so that the students could have been prevented from voting if they had no right to vote. In reply to a question the students said they had cast their votes before coming to court.

Students and Watcher Arrested.

Three more students were challenged at the polling place at 1,092 Amsterdam Avenue by a Democratic watcher. Patrolman Carroll arrested them and also arrested the watcher on the complaint of the Republican representative. All of the prisoners were discharged by Magistrate Deuel. Six more students came to the bar, and these were followed by three others, all of whom were discharged. Some of the men had been arrested on a charge of attempting to vote illegally because their names did not appear on the list given to the watchers at the polling places. But all of them proved that they had registered and that they had a right to vote. Among those who appeared before the Magistrate were Edgar Schlueter and Hugh Chamberlain, who gave their home as the Union Theological Seminary.

Supreme Court Justices Page, Pendleton, and Davis stayed in the court house until the polls closed to hear cases involving the right of citizens to vote. Only two cases were brought before them. Perry Lent of 181 Forsyth Street complained before Justice Page that when he entered the polling place near Stanton Street he was challenged and the stub was torn from his ballot and deposited in the ballot box. Then his name was looked up and it was found that he had a right to vote. Another ballot was refused him on the ground that he had voted. An order to show cause was issued, but when Mr. Lent got back to the polling place he was allowed to vote.

The other case was that of Louis Bressman, who applied for a writ of mandamus to compel the election officials of the Twenty-second Election District of the Twentieth Assembly District to permit him to vote. Bressman said he asked for a new ballot. The ballot he had, and which he had not completed, was dropped in the ballot box, he asserted, and the officials refused to give him another one. A writ was issued, but again the election officials settled the matter by permitting the applicant to vote.

Deputy Assistant District Attorney Weller was notified early in the day that saloons were doing business near the polling places on the lower east side. Word was sent to Chief Inspector Schmittberger and orders were issued to close these places.

Royal Kemp Fuller, Secretary of the State Department of Highways, was before Magistrate McQuade on the charge of illegal voting. Fuller said he was single and that his home was at the McAlpin Hotel, but he couldn't live there all the time because his business kept him traveling about the State. He was discharged. Louis Phillipson, a collector of 170 West Ninety-sixth Street, was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct. Policeman Mulcahey told Magistrate Herbert in the West Side Court that Phillipson demanded the right to vote without delay, and when this was denied he demanded the right to mark his ballot without entering the booth. When this request was refused he made a disturbance, the policeman said. The case was adjourned until today.

William Rose, a stenographer in the office of District Attorney, now Gov.-elect Whitman, was arraigned before Magistrate Levy in Night Court last night by Policeman Corbett, who said Rose had tried to force his way into a polling place at 101 Attorney Street and had struck at the policeman when Corbett tried to make him leave.

Rose said that he was a qualified watcher of the Republican Party and had told the policeman so. At the station he said the police had communicated with Assistant District Attorney Weller, and learning that he was what he had represented himself to be, had added the charge of striking at a policeman in order to hold him.

Magistrate Levy discharged Rose, who said he had tried to enter the polling place because he had seen the shades drawn and had suspected everything was not right inside.

BENSEL LOSES VOTE, FEARING ARREST

Honest Ballot Association's Threat Keeps the State Engineer from the Polls.

CONGRESSMEN CHALLENGED

Carew and Loft Voted Anyhow, but Their Cases Will Be Taken to the Grand Jury.

State Engineer John A. Bensel, who had been a favorite target for Whitman's attacks through the campaign, lost his vote yesterday rather than risk arrest by voting from his "place of stay" at the Marie Antoinette Hotel. Mr. Bensel had voted from the Marie Antoinette for ten years, and had registered from there this year, although he said that his family lived in New Jersey.

A threat to arrest Mr. Bensel if he appeared at the polling place of the Second Election District of the Fifteenth Assembly District, where he was registered, had been made by officials of the Honest Ballot Association, and the association had William J. Schieffelin, Jr., on duty to see that Mr. Bensel was taken into custody if he tried to cast a ballot.

At 9 o'clock an inquiry was received by Mr. Schieffelin from a member of the Tammany Hall Law Committee as to his intentions toward Mr. Bensel. Mr. Schieffelin replied that it was his intention to arrest the State Engineer if he attempted to vote here.

An hour after the first inquiry was made on Mr. Bensel's behalf Gordon Kleeberg of the Tammany Hall Law Committee appeared at the polls. He notified the representatives of the Honest Ballot Association that he proposed to bring Mr. Bensel to the polls a little later and would like to have their consent to a plan to let him swear in his vote and then make a test case of his registration, after postponement of the case for forty-eight hours. The Ballot Association refused to consent to this and Mr. Kleeberg went away and did not return again with Mr. Bensel. Late in the afternoon the watchers received word that Mr. Bensel had been called to Albany to attend a meeting of the Canal Board.

There were 243 registered voters in the district from which Mr. Bensel usually voted and 234 of them cast their ballots. In his own defense Mr. Bensel said recently that he had kept a room at the Hotel Marie Antoinette for years and that he occupied it whenever he was in New York. Vouchers from the hotel were produced showing that he had paid for a room there steadily since last January.

Congressman Carew was one of the first men to show up at the polling place in his district. Peter Cooper Bryce, one of the Directors of the Honest Ballot Association, was, however, on hand before him, and challenged him when he attempted to vote. Carew stepped to one side after being challenged.

Charles E. Hughes, Jr., son of Justice Hughes, who was acting as one of the attorneys for the Honest Ballot Association, was sent to the polling place, and there took a long affidavit from Mr. Carew in regard to his place of residence and the facts concerning his alleged residence in Rockville Centre, Nassau County, L. I., where he lives with his wife and family. After signing this affidavit Mr. Carew was allowed to vote.

Congressman George W. Loft of the Thirteenth District, who was registered from his candy factory at Broome and Centre Streets, was challenged by Grosvenor Farwell, a Harvard graduate and broker, who was acting as an Honest Ballot watcher at that polling place. Mr. Loft was charged by the association with being illegally registered from his candy factory, whereas he really has a domicile at Baldwin, L. I., where he lives with his family. Mr. Loft protested vigorously, and insisted on voting. Farwell thereupon ordered a policeman to arrest him. The policeman hesitated to carry out the watcher's order, and Farwell then attempted to arrest the Congressman himself. This started a rumpus in the polling place, and Farwell was being roughly handled when Mr. Loft went to his assistance. Then Mr. Loft cast his ballot and departed.

Farwell later signed an affidavit in regard to the case, and charges were preferred with Commissioner Woods against the policeman for failure to arrest. The ballot association announced that the cases of Mr. Carew and Mr. Loft would be taken before the Grand Jury.

SHERIFF SHOT IN RIOT.

Election Day in Terre Haute Marked by Much Disorder.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Nov. 3.—Deputy Sheriff Peter Feller was shot and seriously wounded this afternoon in a riot at a Seventh Ward polling place by William A. Mitchell, a special election deputy. Mitchell said he shot in self defense when he was set upon by a crowd of men, but others said the trouble arose when deputies attempted to take a pistol from Mitchell. Mitchell was arrested.

There were several other cases of disorder. George Klatt, Progressive candidate for Sheriff, was assaulted in a Taylorville precinct and badly beaten with a billy.

MR. WHITMAN'S VICTORY.

We should be very sorry to believe that Gov. GLYNN's failure to be elected is due altogether to his religion. That would be an evil portent, a lamentable measure of the sanity and soundness of our political decisions. Religious bigotry does not reason, it does not differentiate, when it was rife it would often elect the worse instead of the better candidate. The anti-Catholic campaign secretly carried on against Mr. GLYNN undoubtedly counts for much in the imposing majority against him. Everybody must see that. It is indicated by the fact that Mr. GERARD received a vote tens of thousands greater than the head of his ticket. It is made plain by Mr. WHITMAN's plurality of 20,000 in Democratic Erie, which was the home of the propaganda of bigotry. But there were many other forces at work against Mr. GLYNN.

The Democratic Party in this State necessarily shared in the reverse of fortune that has befallen the Democracy elsewhere. There are, moreover, local reasons why the Democrats have made so bad a showing in New York. The party is visibly disorganized. The hands of many men have been raised against Tammany. The national Administration is against Tammany, the city Administration is against Tammany. Yet Tammany is and remains the Democratic organization in the City and State of New York. Against so much opposition in the ranks of the party it was to be expected that the organization would suffer at the polls. But while so many hands are raised against Tammany, not one is the hand of a leader. Mr. MITCHEL, the Mayor, and Mr. MALONE, the Collector of the Port, are not political leaders and organizers. There are anti-Tammany workers, anti-Tammany committees without number, but it is hard for a committee to overthrow a boss. That is usually the work of one man, of a man able to be a boss himself. DAVID B. HILL easily became the leader of the Democracy in this State. He dominated Tammany. Mr. MITCHEL is not of that stamp, Mr. MALONE is not, Mr. GLYNN certainly is not. The Democratic Party went into the campaign divided against itself, and although it seemed to be united in support of Mr. GLYNN, a party torn by internal dissension is not a good political instrument.

Mr. GLYNN, too, has suffered from his own political errors. We have frankly pointed them out, the people have been aware of them. He was not quite with Tammany, nor was he detached from Tammany. A really strong man would have been one or the other. Some of his appointments have counted against him, and some of his political associations outside of Tammany have hurt him. Probably the people have felt that he showed a want of diligence in pursuing the grafters of the public highway and canal contracts. That was an opportunity Mr. TILDEN would have turned to great political advantage. These considerations have in some measure outweighed the credit justly given to the Governor for the economy of his administration, and for the business principles which have guided him. Without justice and without reason the consequences of the curious delusion that WILLIAM SULZER was unjustly and through a conspiracy forced out of the Governor's office have been visited upon Mr. GLYNN. The very large vote given to Mr. SULZER should have gone to Gov. GLYNN, and would, but for the strange idea entertained by these thousands of voters that Mr. SULZER ought to have a "vindication." Over all these elements of adversity Mr. GLYNN, with all his recognized merits, could not triumph. Any one of them in an ordinary year might have defeated him, all of them together in this year of Democratic misfortune, in this year of Republican reunion and harmony, were sufficient to make the triumph of his opponent one of the greatest his party has ever scored in the State.

Mr. WHITMAN will have everybody's good wishes when he goes to Albany. He is untried in great executive affairs, but the ability he has shown as a prosecuting officer of this county justifies the hope and the belief that he will be equal to the opportunity that awaits him. He will have good counsel, for there are men of great ability and experience in his party who will be ready to advise him. He, at least, will be unhampered by Tammany, which is the thorn in the side of all Democratic Governors. Even Mr. MURPHY is hopeful of his success. He ought to know how to win the approval and the support of the people, for he has before him a long line of examples in that endeavor, the examples of men who succeeded and of men who have failed. We hope he will be entirely successful in the high office to which he has been chosen.

THE SIXTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

The returns indicate that there will be no appreciable change in the political composition of the United States Senate. In most of the States direct election of Senators has resulted precisely as the old indirect elections would have resulted. In New York, by the old method, Mr. ROOT would have been returned to the Senate. Mr. UNDERWOOD, elected as a matter of course in Alabama, fills the place of a retiring Democrat. HOKE SMITH is re-elected in Georgia, and THOMAS W. HARDWICK, chosen for the short term to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator WEST, is also a Democrat. If Mr. SHERMAN is re-elected in Illinois his return to the Senate will not increase the Republican vote, but ROGER SULLIVAN's supporters at an early hour this morning were still asserting that they had elected him, and the figures seemed to support their contention. Generally speaking, the Senatorial elections are what might have been expected, and it is not likely that the Democratic majority of ten will be decreased by more than one vote. Mr. WADSWORTH of New York and Mr. HARDING of Ohio will replace Senators of their own political convictions.

With the House of Representatives, however, the case is different, and the Republican landslide in Connecticut, which has elected five Republican in place of five Democratic Representatives, indicates that the Republicans may have a much larger vote hereafter in the lower house. In the South the Democrats have held their own in all the States. The revolt against the removal of the tariff on sugar has not been of sufficient strength in the first three districts of Louisiana to elect Progressive candidates, and the hope of establishing a second white man's party in the State falls through. Various Congressional districts were contested by Republicans and Progressives in Florida, North Carolina, and Tennessee, but without avail. The indications are that the President's party will still have a sure control of both houses. But there are signs, in the election of Representatives in Congress, of a decidedly reactionary impulse in various parts of the country. Uncle JOE CANNON has been elected, in his old Illinois district, while the Progressives have made a very poor showing at the polls.

THE VERDICT OF THE NATION.

Mr. WILSON has not altogether escaped the penalty of success which the country so often visits upon a President in the second year of his term. Even though he has shown and maintained his mastery over a fractious Congress and has shaped its action to his will, even though he has in less than two years carried through a programme of legislation unequaled in variety, scope, and importance in the record of any other President's complete term, even though he has won and deserved the gratitude of the country for keeping us out of the war with Mexico at this most critical time, in the election held yesterday, even though Congress has been saved, the verdict is not favorable to him or to his party.

The appeal for a vote of confidence in the Administration was made at a time when the country is in the midst of serious industrial depression and when the dissension which divided the opposition party in 1913 has substantially disappeared. These are the conspicuous and sufficient reasons for Democratic reverses. Although in 1872 the Democracy was in a worse plight than that of the Republicans two years ago, hard times gave to that party a majority in the House of Representatives in the second year of Gen. GRANT's term. When times are hard, when profits fall off, when the people feel that they are not making much money, it is customary to put the blame upon the party in power—it cannot be visited upon the party out of power. The second reason is not less potent. The Progressive Party has practically disappeared. Although its vote here and there may be considerable, it may be fairly said that as a political force it is dying out. That is one of the compensations for defeat in which patriotic Democrats of a conservative turn of mind may take comfort.

It can hardly be said, moreover, that Mr. WILSON is a uniting party leader. He is self-willed, self-confident, and in many ways it has been a good thing for the country that he is so. But Mr. WILSON in the White House has not enjoyed the warm friendship of the old leaders of the party. His experience repeats that of Mr. CLEVELAND in his first term, though CLEVELAND was a great President, but he was anything but tactful in his relations with the chief men of his party. In 1888 he went down to defeat. Four years later some of the politicians remembered his faults of tactics and of management, the country had in mind only the virtues and the qualities of his high statesmanship, and he was overwhelmingly re-elected. Mr. WILSON doubtless is now suffering from the first phase of the changeful attitude of the electorate.

The country, moreover, has liked the President better than it has liked Congress, which, after all, is the usual measure of the spirit, the capacity, and the purposes of the majority party. It is only because it was guided and controlled by the strong hand of the President that the record of this Congress has been what it is. Left to itself, it would probably have gone far astray, for among the Senators and Representatives there are many men who are not at all responsive to the changed temper of the country, who are still too much possessed of the old spirit that kept the Democracy so long out of power. The President's assurance that legislation for the control and hampering of business was over and done with came too late. The unmistakable signs that the country no longer took delight in heckling the corporations have long been visible. The Trades Commission act and the act intended to supplement the Sherman law were superfluous; they were looked upon by the country as a new menace. They were accepted as evidence that the Democratic Party was still looking backward. The triumph in yesterday's election of so many conservative Republicans, of Republicans of the old school, the return to that party of the great body of men who followed Mr. ROOSEVELT in his adventure in 1912, are evidence of the change of heart. When business is bad, attacks on business, hostility to business, are not good politics.

While there is cause for regret in the country's failure to indorse an Administration which has on the whole deserved so well of it, which through the President's courage and firmness has made such a record of meritorious achievements, the result of yesterday's elections cannot be looked upon as politically unhealthful or as evidence of the unwisdom or misjudgment of the people. We have for years been traveling with somewhat a rapid step along the road toward radicalism. The consequences of further advance in that direction have come fully into view. The country is ready to turn back, not in any extreme of reaction, but toward safer and saner policies. There has been too much Government meddling, there has been a tendency to look to Washington for control regulation and help in countless matters upon which in the past the people have depended upon themselves. The country is tired of it. It made known yesterday its purpose to call a halt, to turn its back upon the doctrines of radicalism, to seek wholesome business freedom, tranquillity, and escape from continual molestation in private affairs.

LEAVE IT TO THE RESERVE BANK.

Secretary MCADOO and Controller WILLIAMS are somewhat overeager to arrange affairs which will pass out from their control within a fortnight. The interval is so short, and the conditions are so visibly improving without assistance, that they might allow themselves more leisure to deal with matters more immediately their official concern. The Secretary is forward with offers to approve cotton warehouse receipts as the basis of currency. There is no need for currency. An excessive issue of currency is a greater evil than a low price of cotton.

The Controller is eager to lessen the rates of interest. Every borrower would like to see it done. But the bankers are better judges of the rate of interest than the Controller, and that is more their business than his. No doubt some rates are high, but, generally speaking, the banks are doing more for their customers' ease than the customers are doing to relieve the banks under conditions mutually inconvenient. A little letting alone just now would be an excellent thing, preserving official authority for use when invited by those knowing what to do and how to do it.

RELIEF NEEDED AT VERA CRUZ.

Although there is ground for hope that the Mexicans are in the way of settling their domestic problems without further resort to arms, the process of pacification may be slow, and there is no authority now in sight whose acceptance of the terms demanded by the United States Government for the withdrawal of our troops at Vera Cruz can be relied upon. Washington demands assurance of the safety of all refugees in Vera Cruz, and assurance also that the customs duties and municipal taxes already paid over to the United States Government will not be levied a second time. Simpler or fairer terms could not be asked, but CARRANZA has refused to consider terms, and the new Provisional President has been appointed for only twenty days. At the end of that period there may be another temporary Government.

The indications are that our troops will remain at the chief port a few months longer. Therefore it seems desirable that the men who have been kept on duty there through the wet spring and debilitating summer should gradually be relieved. They have performed their duty well, and considering all the circumstances there has been comparatively little sickness among them. But the effect of the sojourn in a tropical country is bound to be injurious in time, and the monotony of the camp life among the sand hills wears upon the soldier's mind. Many of the men have been ill with the grippe or breakbone fever, and some of them are reported to be dispirited. A brief change to a northern climate would do them all good, and there are plenty of soldiers now in Texas who would be glad to take their places. The transfers could be made regiment by regiment, and the incoming and outgoing men would both be greatly benefited.

THE STATE ELECTIONS.

Republican Governors were elected yesterday in Colorado, Connecticut, Iowa, New Hampshire, New York, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Wisconsin. Conclusive returns are still lacking from some of the other States that the Republicans counted in their columns of prognostications. In Massachusetts Gov. WALSH, Democrat, seems to have been re-elected, although the result may be changed by later returns. The Democrats elected Governors in Alabama, Michigan, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Texas.

Though there are no complete returns this morning from Kansas, where VICTOR MURDOCK was running for Senator against Republican and Democratic opponents and there were also three candidates in the field for the Governorship, including HENRY J. ALLEN, a Progressive leader of large popularity, there is no doubt that the third party has had setbacks in nearly every State. Nearly all the candidates elected are either old-line Republicans or Democrats. The prohibition issue and the woman suffrage issue seem to have had small influence in the election, though some of the States may have voted for Constitutional amendments favoring votes for women.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Revising War's Account.

In discussing "The Cosmic Extravagance of War" The New York Medical Journal says that in modern warfare, previous to the present conflict, the average cost of killing one man has been $15,000. In the Boer war, owing to distance, the expenditure was much greater, it being $40,000 per man, while it went down in the war between Turkey and the Balkan States to the comparatively small, but still considerable, amount of $10,000 for each death.

These figures are presumably obtained by dividing the entire cost of the several wars by the whole number of fatalities, a method which is obviously fallacious, since killing, while an important part of warfare, is very far from the whole of it, and can, indeed, be regarded as an inevitable incident rather than the object to be achieved. At any rate, it is a means, and not an end, and by no fair system of accounting would all the money spent be charged to it.

Still, however viewed, the figures are impressive, and when understood can safely enough be accepted, if not as "statistics," at least as plausible guesses. The Journal is therefore justified in contrasting with them the fact that in Panama, where health conditions to start with were as bad as anywhere in the world, it cost only $2.43 to save a life. In the latter case the computation is sound, for there are available data from which can be deduced what the death rate among the thousands of unacclimated canal workers would have been had not the advancement in preventive medicine made the American sanitarians more efficient than they or any others would have been in the days when the French undertook the great enterprise.

But this $2.43 per life, aggregating a fifth of the canal's cost, probably bears about the same relation to the whole expenditure that the direct cost of killing in war does to the figures given above. A good accountant would debit about four-fifths of the total outgo to the other results than slaughter that follow military operations.

Publishing a Paper for Exiles.

A curious product of the European war, and one perhaps without precedent, is the starting in Bergen-op-Zoom, Holland, of Le Journal des Refugiés, a two-page newspaper devoted to giving to exiles from Belgium the sort of information of which they are so much in need. The first number of this publication appeared Oct. 15, and it contains, besides news as to the progress of the military operations in the shape of more or less official bulletins from the various official bureaus, a warmly enthusiastic expression of gratitude for the welcome which the thousands of fugitive Belgians who were driven from their homes have received in Holland.

The belief that the Dutch were a phlegmatic people, interested in little except the quiet and orderly conduct of their own affairs, seems thoroughly to have been dispelled by the more than kind reception received by these numerous guests, all in need of help, and the thanks of Le Journal des Refugiés are voiced in lyrical French. The most notable characteristic of the paper, however, is in its advertisements, almost every one of which reveals that cruelest result of what the Belgians have suffered—the anxiety of many of them as to the whereabouts of the members of their families. Parents have been separated from children, children from parents, as well as wives from husbands, and they are all either appealing for news of the missing ones or else giving notice of where they are themselves, in the hope that thus the parted may be reunited.

That a special newspaper should be required for the bringing of these scattered families together—that in so many cases there is doubt as to whether the absent ones are alive or dead—brings a new realization of what has happened to the Belgians and the price they have paid for resisting the violation of their neutrality by one of that neutrality's guarantors.

A Sin Not Peculiar to Germany.

One of our correspondents called attention yesterday to the well-known fact that proud as the Germans of today are of the eminent place held by their country in the annals of music, many of the men to whose genius, now of world-wide recognition, the eminence is due suffered while alive from the neglect and disappreciation of their fellow-countrymen, some of the greatest of the German musicians having fallen into a poverty that involved something close to starvation. Others were the objects of fierce antagonisms that did not cease till long after they were dead.

The arraignment was severe, but perhaps more severe than fair. In music as in other domains, the genius is apt to be an innovator, and the innovator is a critic of authority and the established. He attacks accepted standards and all the dear conventions of his time, and by implication he asserts his superiority to his revered predecessors and his respected contemporaries. Only rarely in any country does he fail to make powerful enemies, and usually his first admirers and followers have to share whatever form of persecution or ridicule he may excite.

Germany has blundered and sinned in this exasperating way no oftener than other countries, and no oftener taken credit later for what she once hotly and angrily repudiated.

A Conviction That Has Two Edges.

It is to be hoped rather than expected that the conviction of two more swindlers whose bait was books will put an end to that form of theft. Presumably the particular trick they played will be made useless for a while in this part of the country by the publicity which their trial brought upon it, but their appeal was to ignorance and greed, and that is never long unsuccessful, for those traits, unfortunately, are so common that shrewd rascals will "work" them in one way or another till the millennium comes in.

Had the victims simply been led by misrepresentation into buying books at exorbitant prices they would have deserved more pity and less ridicule than they will now receive. But in almost every instance they bought the precious volumes, not as collectors of the supposedly rare and curious, but as speculators eager to make the large and quick profits that were promised to them. The promises were obviously absurd, but they were believed by people who knew nothing of book collecting or of the peculiarities that make value in the collector's eyes.

Such persons are predestined to exploitation and they cannot be saved from it. They learn from experience alone, and the supply of willing teachers will not be appreciably diminished by the exposure that comes upon one unlucky group. Incidentally, the humiliation of the pupils is now hardly less than that of the instructors, and that is as it should be. Meanwhile, those of us who buy books as things to read and because we want to read them—who prefer last to first editions and whose interest is in literature rather than in curios—we are quite safe from schemes like those devised by the solemn FARMER and the humorous HARTLEY.

"ABSOLUTELY FIREPROOF."

Jamestown Claims to Have a Building Without an Equal.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with much interest in my TIMES recently the very pretty story of the entertainment provided by ex-Chief Croker, who set his house on fire for the amusement of his dinner party.

In our City of Jamestown, which we who live here call the home of interior metal building equipment, there has been in existence for more than five years a structure which merits the well-worn phrase of "absolutely fireproof." With the exception of the mahogany rail on the iron and slate stairway you could not find enough wood in its construction to afford material for a match or a toothpick. You could not only repeat Chief Croker's experiment in any workroom of private office of the building, but at the same time you kindled your fire inside the room you could kindle a bigger one on the outside of the building and still have no effect upon its structure.

The walls of this building are of vitrified brick, tile, and steel. Its roof is of solid concrete, and its floors of concrete to which battleship linoleum is cemented. The doors and "woodwork" are entirely of steel. You would, however, be unable to repeat Mr. Croker's experiment of burning the contents of a room because the contents will not burn—the desks and tables are all of steel. Because of this, records which are invaluable never leave the desks on which they are used by the office force.

With its fireproof roof, walls, and windows, and its unburnable contents, we believe that in the degree to which it has been made fireproof this Jamestown building is without an equal today. W. S. BAILEY.

Seizures on the High Seas.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Was not the taking of Messrs. Mason and Slidell—agents of the Confederate States sent to England to stir up sentiment against the United States during the War of the Rebellion—was not their seizure from the British steamer Trent by the United States naval officer the cause of our dispute with Great Britain, which resulted in the United States delivering Messrs. Mason and Slidell back to British authorities? And we, the United States, were made to apologize for the acts of the naval officers on penalty of having war declared on us by Great Britain during the most trying time of our existence as a nation.

Now, the case is reversed, Great Britain seizing citizens of our country from vessels flying the United States and neutral flags, putting them to the indignity of arrest and inconveniences in being taken to any port she sees fit to use.

Great Britain in 1862 declared the decks of her ships to be inviolate against seizure of passengers of warring nations, and acted accordingly, but how is she observing her declaration now? H. W. BENEKER.

Lincoln's Tariff Argument.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Criticising the alleged tariff view of Abraham Lincoln—nobody has proved that he ever expressed it—your Briarcliff correspondent assumes that in proportion as foreign lines of manufacture replace American the American worker is freed to exercise his energies in some more profitable direction. I suppose hereafter we are to speak of the jobless working man as "released American labor"—a grandiloquent title, as solace in misfortune.

At least your correspondent must admit that the money for the foreign article has gone out of the country, just as Lincoln has stated. C. G. CUBIN.

England and the Hessians.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your today's issue Mr. Chesterton derides the Teuton in uniform, among other crimes, for "shooting farmers before Saratoga." If reference is here made to the Hessians, why does the British apologist forget to mention that they were the paid soldiers of England, who also in the American Revolution did not hesitate to hire savage Indians to do worse than shoot farmers? ABRAM S. ISAACS.

Latest Irish Immigrants.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In Saturday's TIMES I see that 500 young Irishmen came over on the steamship Cedric and several hundred others on the steamship Franconia a few days ago; but how thoroughly disgusted every true-hearted Irishman must feel toward them in this country to think that so many young men can run away from home at such a time as this, most probably leaving their mothers and sisters over there in a country where [illegible]

BERNHARDISM IN GERMANY.

German Writer Cites Examples of It There and Elsewhere.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A few of my countrymen have tried to prove that there is no Bernhardism in Germany or that this Bernhardism has no influence in our Fatherland. I do not believe in the reasoning of the woman who says, "It is so, because it is so," and if I try to prove to the contrary I shall give what they could not give, namely, facts.

When Wilhelm Lamszus some years ago wrote a book about the horrors of modern war without accusing any one, he immediately was expelled from the office he held as a teacher in Hamburg. The newest example of this kind of treatment is the fate of the eminent Munich historian, Prof. Dr. Ludwig Quidde, a scientist of worldwide reputation, the leading German Pacifist and a prominent member of the Bavarian Landtag. He wrote a letter from The Hague, in which he pleaded for peace, and as the immediate result Dr. Goldschmidt of the Liberal Party of the Landtag took measures to have him expelled from the party and from all political organizations and societies on account of his endeavors for peace. If Goethe, whose name is so often used in connection with the 42-centimeter gun, where living today, he, the greatest cosmopolitan on earth, condemning national hate as an instinct worthy of savages, would perhaps be thrown into jail by Dr. Goldschmidt on account of his letter to Thomas Carlyle.

A few of my countrymen pretend that Nietzsche's ideas have left no remarkable influence in Germany. To prove to the contrary, I would like to refer to a book about the preparedness for war by the Medicinalrat Dr. Fuchs, (Berliner Militaerverlag Schweitschke,) which he concludes with the following words:

> Therefore the German claim of the day must be: The family to the front. The State has to follow, at first in the school, then in foreign politics. Education to hate. Education to the estimation of hatred. Organization of hatred. Education to the desire for hatred. Let us abolish unripe and false shame before brutality and fanaticism. We must not hesitate to announce: To us is given faith, hope, and hatred, but hatred is the greatest among them.

It is a black spot on the twentieth century that those who preach war get the highest honors, and those who preach peace are pursued and punished.

But now that I have sufficiently proved to you that I do not belong to those pseudo peace lovers, may I, without trying to be unneutral, ask why the American press only mentions the German Bernhardis and Lissauers? As a matter of fact even John Ruskin's ideas about war are not much different from Bernhardi's, but the Boston News Bureau was the only paper which was able to discover this fact, and the Paris Matin and the press of Lord Northcliffe, even in times of peace, had their Lissauers. The other day I heard in a Broadway theatre the "Wacht am Rhein," and the hundreds of Germans present had enough tact to preserve their feelings; but when five minutes later the "Marseillaise" resounded there was tremendous approval. Has it really come to that? Why not let us make peace right here? Why not demonstrate to hypnotized Europe that the melting pot of the United States knows no race differences?

The Lawyer's Duty.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was surprised to see in your issue of Oct. 25 a communication from a correspondent in Boonton, N. J., headed "The Moral Sense of Lawyers," and containing the suggestion that the legal profession be given an opportunity to express itself under the following headings: "Is it Right for a Lawyer to Do Wrong?" or "Is it Wrong for a Lawyer to Do Right?"

Whatever may be the practices of individual lawyers, the ethical tenets of the profession are an endeavor to impress upon its members the necessity of obeying the highest principles of moral law. I shall quote below from the final Canon of Ethics of the American Bar Association, which has been approved by the New York State Bar Association, and familiarity with its canons is a prerequisite under the present rules of the Court of Appeals in New York for admission to the bar of this State. The quotation from the canon entitled "The Lawyer's Duty in Its Last Analysis" is as follows:

> Correspondingly, he advances the honor of his profession and the best interests of his client when he renders service or gives advice tending to impress upon the client and his undertaking exact compliance with the strictest principles of moral law.

CHARLES H. BOSTON,
Member of Committee on Professional Ethics of American Bar Association and Chairman of the Committee on Professional Ethics of the New York County Lawyers Association.

Germany's Belgium.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will some friend of Germany kindly tell me whether that country feels mortified that the United States has had to assume so large a share of the expense and responsibility of feeding and clothing the inhabitants of the lately annexed province of Belgium? I believe if we Americans had taken possession of some part of Mexico and then had had to accept the charity of, say, Brazil, for our new subjects a good many of us would be considerably ashamed.

The larger part of Belgium has been far from the scene of severe fighting for some time, and it is in direct communication with Germany. Does it not seem a breakdown of the wonderful Teutonic efficiency that, apparently, nothing has been done to rehabilitate the Belgians in this region?

THE TORPEDO.

Death, our mother, gave us, her three
gray gifts from the sea—
(Cherish your birthright, Brothers!)—
speed, cunning, and certainty.
And mailed Mars, he blest us—but his blessing was most to me!

For the swift gun sometimes falters,
sparing the foe afar,
And the hid mine wastes destruction
on the drag's decoying spar,
But I am the wrath of the Furies' path—
of the war god's avatar!

Mine is the brain of thinking steel man made to match his own,
To guard and guide the death disks packed in the war head's hammered cone
To drive the cask of the thin air flask as the gyroscope has shown.

My brother, the gun, shrieks o'er the sea his curse from the covered deck,
My brother, the mine, lies stilendumb, agape for the dreadnought's wreck,
I glide on the breath of my mother,
Death, and my goal is my only cheek!

More strong than the strength of armored ships is the firing pin's frail spark,
More sure than the helm of the mighty fleet are my rudders to their mark,
The faint foam fades from the bright screw blades—and I strike from the under dark!

Death, our mother, gave us, her three
gray gifts from the sea—
(Cherish your birthright, Brothers!)—
speed, cunning, and certainty.
And mailed Mars, he blest us—but his blessing was most to me!

A GERMAN CIRCULAR

And Reply an American Recipient Sent Thereto.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On Oct. 22 I received from a firm in Berlin, with which I am having business correspondence, a letter inclosing a four-page circular, which my correspondent states is one of a series being prepared by the General Staff of the German Army, and sent broadcast to non-combatting nations, with the purpose of persuading them of the righteousness of the German cause in the present war, and the unrighteousness of the Allies.

Paragraphs in this circular have the following headings: "The Dumdum Bullets," "The War of Lies," "Louvain," "Russian Infamy," "French Crime in Alsace-Lorraine," "Success of the Germans," "The English Labor Party Against Grey," "Concerning the French Money Market," "The War Situation Up to Sept. 7."

In the first paragraph, on dumdum bullets, exception is taken to the alleged violation of international law by the Allies, and to their adoption of methods described as "the most barbaric ever known in history."

The second paragraph, "The War of Lies," contains this sentence: "England will tell your countrymen that German troops have burned down Belgian villages and cities; she will, however, suppress the fact that young Belgian girls put out the eyes of defenseless wounded soldiers lying on the battle ground." Why, we ask, should we believe the statements of a nation that considers its written pledge in treaty as a "scrap of paper," and refuse to believe others?

Granting that the story of the cruelty of young Belgian girls is true, what less, we ask, could you expect from women or girls, of any character or spirit, toward men who have quite probably killed their fathers, their brothers, and their sweethearts, burned their homes, and reduced their families to poverty and the verge of starvation?

May I respectfully suggest (and I voice the sentiments of 99 per cent. of my countrymen) that we are not at all interested in such details as this, reported by either Germany or by the Allies. What (I repeat) we wish to know is, why the German Army finds itself in Belgium at all. And since it is in Belgium, may we respectfully suggest that you will make a much better appearance in the eyes of all other nations if you will take your medicine and drink without complaint (much more without appeals for sympathy) and to the last drop every bitter dose the outraged Belgians offer.

May I state that my family have been natives of America for nearly three hundred years, so that, in writing as I have above, I am moved by no prejudices of a recent European nationality.

We have always admired, in high degree, the many virtues of Germany and the German, but we have no sympathy with her militarism, with her attitude toward her solemnly pledged treaties with other nations, toward her acknowledged principle that might makes right. Can the Allies—the German states in the present war would be a calamity to the world.

(Translation from the German.)

Berlin, Germany, Sept. 26, 1914.

Dear Sir: The press unfriendly to Germany is publishing mendacious reports (Luegen-Meldungen) concerning the course of the military operations, which are calculated to give neutral foreign lands a false impression concerning the situation. On this account the Bureau of German Merchants of Berlin has resolved to give out regularly at intervals a series of circulars concerning the course of the military operations, and has requested its members to send these circulars to their correspondents in neutral foreign countries.

I am complying with this request, and I beg leave, most highly honored Sir, to send you these circulars hereafter, with the sincere request that you will transmit their contents to the mostly widely read and influential newspaper of your city or Province.

I inclose the first of these circulars herewith. Statements contained in this and the following ones concerning the cause of the war have all originated in the eminent General Staff of the German Army.

I send you my sincere thanks in advance for fulfilling my request, and remain

L. SPAETH.

Oct. 22, 1914.

Dr. Phil. Hellmut L. Spaeth, Berlin-Baumschulenwes, Spaeth-Str. 1, Berlin, Germany.

Dear Sir: I am in receipt of your letter of Sept. 25, 1914, requesting my attention to the second of a series of circular letters, prepared by the General Staff of the German Army, and now being distributed by the Bureau of German Merchants of Berlin to their correspondents in foreign lands. You request me to hand these letters to the most influential newspaper in my city or Province.

Permit me, in reply, to state that it is largely a waste of money and effort for your countrymen to flood the United States of America with appeals of this kind. The opinion and sympathies of Americans concerning the horrible catastrophe that is now devastating Europe are not based upon any so-called "batch of lies" (Luegen-Meldungen) published in the public press, but upon the official correspondence ("White Papers," "Gray Papers," "Orange Papers,") that immediately preceded the outbreak of hostilities.

In view of the fundamental facts recorded in that official correspondence, we consider the anxious appeals from Germany for our sympathy as an affront to our intelligence. We are amazed at Germany's colossal egotism in proclaiming the worth of her own culture as superior to that of all other nations, and in holding that the spread of this culture over all Europe is even a partial justification for any kind of a war—great or small. The notion of "Deutschland ueber Alles," or of any other nation "ueber Alles," impresses us as a mediaeval and unworthy ambition in the year of our Lord 1914.

With particular reference to the points in your circular letter, (No. 2,) may I say that we are not in the least interested in them? What we are interested to have satisfactorily explained to us is why the German Army is in Belgium at all! We consider that Belgium is now suffering, at the hands of Germany, one of the greatest wrongs ever done to any nation in all history.

You refer in Paragraph 1 to certain alleged practices of the Allies as contrary to "the recognized principles of international law." How can any nation that drops bombs from airships on non-combatants have the face to even mention international law! You speak of the methods of your opponents as "the most barbaric ever known in history." Do you not blush to use the word "barbaric" after all the world knows of Louvain, of the bombardment of the Cathedral of Rhaims, of the profanation of churches, of your exorbitant and unreasonable taxes on Belgian cities and Provinces, of your mediaeval method of taking hostages, of your leading of Belgian prisoners to enforced labor in Germany, and to labor in Belgium in the interest of further German successes against their own countrymen?

In the face of actual photographs you brand as a lie the published statement that German troops have burned down Belgian villages, and then ask us to give full credence to your own statement that "young Belgian girls put out the eyes of defenseless wounded soldiers lying on the battle ground." Why, we ask, should we believe the statements of a nation that considers its written pledge in treaty as a "scrap of paper," and refuse to believe others?

Granting that the story of the cruelty of young Belgian girls is true, what less, we ask, could you expect from women or girls, of any character or spirit, toward men who have quite probably killed their fathers, their brothers, and their sweethearts, burned their homes, and reduced their families to poverty and the verge of starvation?

May I respectfully suggest (and I voice the sentiments of 99 per cent. of my countrymen) that we are not at all interested in such details as this, reported by either Germany or by the Allies. What (I repeat) we wish to know is, why the German Army finds itself in Belgium at all. And since it is in Belgium, may we respectfully suggest that you will make a much better appearance in the eyes of all other nations if you will take your medicine and drink without complaint (much more without appeals for sympathy) and to the last drop every bitter dose the outraged Belgians offer.

THINKS TWO MINES DAMAGED NOORDAM

Surgeon Says Holland-America Liner Was Jarred by Explosions in the North Sea.

PASSENGERS IN A PANIC

Boats Were Swung Out, but Tugs Arrived in Time to Tow Disabled Craft Into Port.

Dr. C. G. Psaki, surgeon of the Holland-America liner Noordam, who arrived yesterday on the Potsdam from Rotterdam, brought the first detailed account to this country of the accident to the Noordam in the North Sea on Oct. 17. In Dr. Psaki's opinion, the Noordam was in the vicinity of one mine or more when they were exploded. The ship was lifted perceptibly in the water by the explosion, he asserted.

"When the Noordam passed Dover," Dr. Psaki said, "the Captain asked the British authorities if it was necessary to have a special pilot through the North Sea on account of the mines, and was told that it was safe so far as the mouth of the Maas for Rotterdam. At 11 o'clock on the morning of Oct. 17, about three hours after passing Dover, I was standing on the promenade deck aft when suddenly there was a great heave under the Noordam's bow, followed immediately by a second upheaval amidships. Two columns of water rose up on either side of the ship and towered above her decks.

"The passengers were much alarmed and the Captain ordered all the lifeboats swung out on the davits ready for lowering away, and the stewards assisted the passengers to adjust lifejackets. The wireless apparatus had been lowered according to the admiralty regulations when we got to the three-mile limit at the Lizard, and the Captain ordered it to be replaced and sent out signals for assistance. In reply we got a message from the Hook of Holland that two sea-going tugs had been sent to our aid. After half an hour the Noordam was still afloat and making very little water, but her rudder would not answer and she was steered by her propellers. After sixteen hours drifting in the North Sea we were picked up by the tugs and towed into the Hook of Holland."

On account of the danger of mines in the North Sea Capt. E. C. Van Walraven of the Potsdam, which sailed from Rotterdam on Oct. 22 at 1 o'clock in the morning, had a special pilot to take the ship through the danger zone. The lifeboats were all swung out and most of the passengers sat up on deck, the officers said. The Potsdam brought 205 first, 451 second, and 273 third class passengers.

'MARY GOES FIRST' QUITE DELIGHTFUL

Miss Tempest Plays Brilliantly in a Comedy by Henry Arthur Jones.

LAUNCHING A REPERTOIRE

English Comedienne Begins Her Farewell Season Here in a Play on the Humors of Precedence.

MARY GOES FIRST, a comedy in three acts and an epilogue, by Henry Arthur Jones. At the Comedy Theatre.

Mary (Mrs.) Whichello.....Marie Tempest

"Mary Goes First," a shrewd, vigorously satirical but entirely good-humored comedy by Henry Arthur Jones, launches at the Comedy Theatre the repertoire which is described as New York's share of the farewell American tour of Marie Tempest. The play itself is deftly written and genially entertaining, but what makes the few hours spent at the Comedy so thoroughly and delightfully worth while is Miss Tempest's sparkling performance in the rôle of the mischievous Mary. A complete understanding and control of her forces of expression, a keen sense of humor, and a priceless gusto in the playing, these are her contributions to the world of fun there is in "Mary Goes First."

The rôle is one to be coveted and relished. Mary is a cat. Also she is a schemer and something of a liar. But even when she is most earnestly tweaking and tugging at the wires in one of her interminably outrageous schemes there is the gleam of suppressed amusement in her glance as if she knew that Warkinstall and all the world were something funny and foolish and obviously created to be played with by one so entirely appreciative. Mary is quite ruthless in her resolution that no other woman shall go first into dinner in Warkinstall, but her ruthlessness is accompanied by so captivating a twitch of the lips and so infectious a twinkle of the eye that there is no resisting her. You become convinced that it is both momentous and entirely right that Mary should go first.

She had always gone first until the prosperous Thomas Bodsworth gave a sanatorium to Warkinstall and was rewarded with a knighthood. The spectacle of the impossible and humorless Lady Bodsworth sweeping in ahead of her was simply more than Mary Whichello could endure. After routing Lady Bodsworth at the first dinner following the bestowal of the knighthood, she sets to work to mend matters by pushing her husband into politics, cajoling huge campaign contributions from his reluctant pocket, wheedling, flirting, threatening with the Junior Whip of the Liberals, and finally extracting from the party in power no mere knighthood but a baronetcy. You are left with the impression that all will be well in Warkinstall until some peerage is tossed that way and, whereas that suggests rueful complications, you are quite willing to leave it to Mary.

It is all a very amusingly derisive treatment of the scuffle for precedence in an English manufacturing town, but the humor is universal because Mr. Jones plays with the follies and foibles of folks the world around—scheming, willful, capricious, bustling, pert, amused and amusing, Mary adds not merely to the gayety of Warkinstall, but to the gayety of nations.

But Mr. Jones has his fun with something more than the humors of precedence and pomposity. He strikes some entertaining blows by knocking on the hollowness of political convictions generally and by sending at a lounging gait through his comedy, the always likable but always exasperating Englishman who is content with his world if his boat is not capsized, is really strong for tariff reform, (if they give leather a look-in,) who objects moodily to "ratting" from his party, (especially since his club in town is the only place where a chap can get "a decent game of billiards,") and who can be wheedled into all manner of exertions by Mary until she makes the fatal move of coming between him and his golf sticks.

And, as a shaft of light on the suffrage question, you behold Mary at work in the political field herself, relying on none of the subtleties of house-party discussion and imperceptible persuasion, after the fashion of those in some of the more stately English novels. Mary works with feminine finesse, but she is cheerfully corrupt and her idea of leadership is very literal. It has something to do with a ring in the nose.

There is a great deal of fun in all this. A generally good company helps. Particularly Mr. Dyall helps. But the abiding joy of "Mary Goes First" is Marie Tempest.

'TALES OF HOFFMANN' SUNG.

Florence Macbeth Makes Debut at Century as Mechanical Doll.

The Century Opera Company presented last night as the new production of the week Offenbach's "The Tales of Hoffmann." The presentation of the fantastic opera comique employed the services of no less than three of the company's prima donnas, Florence Macbeth as Olympia, Bettina Freeman as Giulietta and Lois Ewell as Antonia, while Orville Harrold was Hoffmann, Kathleen Howard was Nicklausse, and Louis Kreidler appeared as the three varied Manifestations of Hoffmann's evil genius.

Considerable interest centred in the first appearance here of Florence Macbeth, formerly of the Chicago Opera Company. In the rôle of the mechanical doll Miss Macbeth contributed some very clever acting, her postures and contortions hitting off the subject with admirable illusion. The tenseness of muscle that goes with the mechanical effect in this part often has a tendency to work against the best delivery of the florid music the doll sings, and Miss Macbeth by no means escaped this.

The cast in general was excellent, and the large audience seemed to enjoy the piece thoroughly. The scenic effects and costuming were in keeping. Josiah Zuro conducted ably, and under his direction the chorus and orchestra gave good account of themselves. Besides the members of the cast already mentioned, Leonora Lemos, Frank Philips, Alfred Kaufman, and Louis D'Angelo deserve mention for capable work in the smaller parts.

The New Amsterdam Theatre's annual Autumn contribution to the musical frivolity of the season is called "Papa's Darling." It is the familiar naughtiness of the familiar French farce set to the tuneful and spirited music of Ivan Caryll. What is best of it is distinctly and pleasantly reminiscent of certain of Mr. Caryll's previous efforts to entertain, for the new musical comedy at the big theatre in West Forty-second Street is a little sister to "The Pink Lady."

Agreeable memories of that earlier diversion hover about the New Amsterdam now, not merely because it was that same playhouse which for so many months housed one of the most popular musical comedies of recent years, and not merely because several of those who played in it have been recruited for its successor. The memory of "The Pink Lady" is chiefly invoked by several of the numbers in Mr. Caryll's score, and particularly by a song called "Sparkling Moselle," which harks back to the banks of the Saskatchewan.

The reassembled "Pink Lady" folk are Frank Lalor, as comic as ever in his elderly antics of a professor of psychology with lively thoughts and a dull wife; Alice Dovey, who never looked prettier or sang more sweetly than she does in "Papa's Darling," and Jack Henderson, a personable young actor, adequate singer and good dancer, who is always a good asset for any musical comedy in town. These three are the familiar best, and the array of talent further includes the good voice of Dorothy Jardon. For the rest, there is the customary lavish expenditure in settings, and in the chorus the approved total of good looks. It may be added that the chorus can sing.

The story behind "Papa's Darling," which is founded on the French play, "Le Fils Surnaturel," has been told too often, in one variation or another, to need retelling here, even if it were anything more than a not very good excuse for the business of the evening. That is the dancing, of which there is not very much, and the music, of which there is a good deal. Nowhere in the score does Mr. Caryll quite touch the best of his previous work, but "The Land of the Midnight Sun," "Sparkling Moselle," and "The Love Song" are the sort to be whistled up and down the highways hereabouts. All told, "Papa's Darling" contains in good measure precisely the sort of musical entertainment which seems to have pleased many and many an audience in recent seasons.

ANNA PAVLOWA REAPPEARS.

Displays Her Distinctive Art Also in the Modern Dances.

Anna Pavlowa, the Russian dancer, made her first appearance in America this season at the Metropolitan Opera House last night with her company, chief of whom are Ivan Clustine, A. Volinine, Mlle. Piaskovietzka, Mlle. Kuhn, and Mlle. suirskaia, with Theodore Stier as conductor. The programme consisted of a mythological ballet, "The Awakening of Flora," a feature called "The Dance of Today" and a series of eight divertissements.

The new ballet proved a gorgeously mounted affair, in which the star and the principal members of her company had full opportunity to shine. "The Dance of Today" had been put forward as though it were considered by the management the feature of the programme. It would be pleasant to be able to fall in with the idea and say that the incomparable Pavlowa had seized upon the modern dance and shown us there was real rhythmic poetry at the bottom of it.

As a matter of fact, her audiences would probably prefer that Pavlowa leave the exposition of the modern dance to those most capable exponents of it who have not lately been the feature of all vaudeville bills, as the dancer herself must have realized when the house went wild with applause after that simple but exquisitely graceful and imaginative divertissement which she dances to Saint-Saëns's "The Swan." Although it is good to see dancers like Pavlowa and her associates in the modern dances and their derivatives, the interest is bound to be more academic than esthetic.

As for Pavlowa herself, the superlatives have all been exhausted, and it remains to say only that she is still Pavlowa. There will be many to hope that she will soon cease giving up one-third of her programme to an attempt at idealizing the ballroom dance of today, and let us have just that much more of the wholly distinctive and delightful art that is hers. It will do us more good.

HAVING FUN WITH GOLF.

Frenchman Gives His Views on the Royal and Ancient Game.

"We see on the green countryside during the warm days of Summer perspiring creatures, flushed and unkempt, armed with long-handled clubs, striking the ground with frensy, as if they wish to discover rare stones or precious metals. It is golfers at work."

Thus writes a contributor to The Paris Journal in giving what he calls a "Guide du Golf." He explains some of the peculiarities of the game. First, with regard to the ground. "Any ground will do so long as it is not level. Having found your ground, you then take great care to fill up all the natural holes in it. Having done so, you make a number of artificial holes, which are all of a fixed shape and depth—the more these holes resemble natural holes the better they are.

"Golf is the direct descendant of a now unfashionable sport known as stonebreaking, which consists of breaking the stones on roads with the aid of a long hammer. The essential difference is that the golfers do not wear wire spectacles like their ancestors, the stonebreakers.

"The stones have been replaced by a small India rubber ball, which lasts much longer, being unbreakable.

"The problem is to make this ball go into the holes on the golf course without touching it with the hands. That would be much too easy. To push it into the holes you use a wooden stick with an iron butt, very inconveniently shaped so as to make the problem as complicated as possible. This stick is called a club, and its number is legion, since it is the correct thing to change the club between each stroke, just as you change forks between each course. The collection of clubs, contained in an umbrella case, is carried behind the line of fire by a youngster known as a caddy. The player having chosen with great care from among his clubs one which is likely to make a successful stroke, flourishes it with both hands, strikes—and misses the ball. There are two ways of missing the ball—one by using too much force and the other by not using enough. The stroke with too much force behind it is the easier; it consists in striking the earth a few feet behind the ball without touching it. When this stroke is well done it sends into the air a shower of earth and turf after the style of a fireworks display, with very elegant effect. The hit which misses is more delicate to achieve. In this case it is necessary that your club, after a vigorous flourish, should make straight for the ball, pass it without touching it, and return by the impetus given it to strike the player on the back of the head.

"This is how I found golf played, and I have studied it a number of years."

'SUZI" IS JUST HOPELESS.

At last the real musical comedy for the Tired Business Man has arrived. No matter how tired he may be there is nothing in "Suzi," which made its bow at the Casino Theatre last night, to disturb him in the least, and not until the very last moment of the play, when it is long past time to go home anyway, is there anything to prevent his taking a nice, comfortable sleep.

To others in the audience "Suzi" is simply annoying. The humor of this latest musical comedy from Hungary is of the stupid, inane sort that aggravates rather than offends, and the music, while pretty in spots, is not nearly strong enough to carry the dull book to anything like success. As a matter of fact, "Suzi" is a musical comedy with no comedy and very little music. Further discussion of the piece is quite useless, but if there is, in New York, a Society for the Suppression of Unnecessary Annoyances, it should turn its attention to the Casino Theatre.

Otto Hauerbach, who has given the stage some very clever musical pieces, is charged on the programme with being responsible for the "American book of Suzi" which is an adaptation of a Hungarian operetta by Franz Martos. The music is by Aladar Renyi.

The one spot in the piece which approaches being entertaining is a song which comes in the last of the three dreary acts called "Tick-a-Tick." It is, quite evidently, a number which has been supplied from some outside source. "Suzi" does nothing else, however, it shows off to advantage the delightful voice of Miss Jose Collins. Miss Collins worked very hard and supplied what little life there was to the party last night, but the whole affair is hopeless.

The principal parts, outside of Miss Collins's rôle, are played by Connie Ediss, Robert Evett, Melville Stewart, Tom McNaughton, Arthur Lipson, and Lew Hearn, the latter a comedian, so called, from the ranks of burlesque.

'MASKED BALL' WILL OPEN METROPOLITAN

Verdi's Opera to be Given on Nov. 16 with Caruso and Mme. Destinn in Cast.

"PRINCE IGOR" A NOVELTY

Director Gatti-Casazza Tells How He Assembled His Artists Scattered in War Zone.

The group of Metropolitan Opera Company singers and conductors that arrived in Boston Monday evening came to New York on a special train from Boston yesterday, arriving here in the middle of the afternoon. General Manager Giulio Gatti-Casazza went directly to the Opera House, where he outlined some of the coming season's plans in detail.

The season will open on Monday evening, Nov. 16, with a performance of Verdi's "Masked Ball," in which will be heard Mmes. Destinn and Matzenauer and Messrs. Caruso, Amato, Rothier, and de Segurola. Nothing else is announced of the répertoire for the first week except that it will see the revival of "Carmen," with Farrar and Caruso, and Amato probably singing the part of the Toreador.

Among the novelties and revivals of the season will be Giordano's "Mme. Sans Gene," which will be given during the first half of January, Giorgio Polacco conducting; Borodine's "Prince Igor," early in March, Toscanini conducting; Weber's "Euryanthe," during the fourth week, conducted by Toscanini; Beethoven's "Fidelio" in January, conducted by Hertz; "Il Trovatore," with new stage settings, in February, conducted by Toscanini, and the novelty, Franco Leoni's "L'Oraculo," a one-act opera made from Chester B. Fernald's story of the Chinese quarter of San Francisco, "The Cat and the Cherub," which is now running in an adaptation as a playlet at the Princess Theatre.

Director Gatti-Casazza claims the title now of General and Admiral Gatti-Casazza, Mobilizer on the High Seas and on the Low Lands, he told reporters yesterday in recounting how he managed to assemble his opera company in the war time and get it safely to America.

He had the plans for this season completely arranged, he said, on July 20, only to find them destroyed by the outbreak of the war. From his headquarters in Milan it took him twenty days to find the whereabouts of all the members of the company. There was a highly complicated schedule of sailing that had to be altered several times on account of various nationalities objecting to the presence of some singers of hostile nations.

Finally Mr. Gatti-Casazza had his most ticklish problem arranged, that of getting the German male singers booked on an Italian boat and the German women singers with the Italians on the English boat, when it was upset by the British steamboat company's demurrer at taking the servants of the German women artists. Thereupon the Director told the line it must carry the servants or the entire company would stay, whereupon the fact that the servants were not Metropolitan artists was discreetly overlooked.

The Director said all the nations involved in the war showed themselves anxious to put nothing in the way of the presence in America of their compatriot artists, so that the national art would be represented here, where there will be practically the only first-class opera given continuously this Winter.

$200,000 LOSS IN PIER FIRE.

Lighters Tied to Brooklyn Wharf Are Towed to Safety.

The men and apparatus which four fire alarms called out together, with the Fireboats Seth Low, William H. Strong, and George B. McClellan, fought for two hours late last night and early this morning before they quenched a fire which started, apparently from spontaneous combustion, in barrels of coloring matter stored on Pier 22, at the foot of Pacific Street, Brooklyn. The pier is owned by the New York Dock Company and is used by the Sicula-Americana Steamship Company of 17 Battery Place.

Hal fa dozen lighters weretied to each side of the pier and railroad tugboats towed them in safety out into the river, except the Stella, which was on fire in several places when it finally was hauled away.

Capt. Peter Anderson aroused from sleep, jumped overboard, and Joseph Egan of 374 Hicks Street and John Crowley of 102 Baltic Street rescued him in a rowboat. They were rowing toward the pier when the wash of a tugboat upset them. Policeman Murphy and Sergt. Brown of the Amity Street station saved all three.

The election crowds, attracted by the rush of fire apparatus through the streets, flocked to the scene and in thousands watched the flames which swept over the 1,200-foot pier, one of the longest in Brooklyn. Sheds, stocked with wines, tobacco, and fruit, the cargo of a recently arrived ship, and the damage was estimated at $200,000.

Newark Bluecoat Ends Life.

Patrolman Charles Hasbrouck, 23 years old, of 74 Ninth Avenue, Newark, ended his life yesterday by shooting himself in the head with his police revolver in the presence of his mother and father, who had admonished him for drinking. Hasbrouck was appointed to the Newark Police Department on Oct. 1, and was attached to the new Eighth Precinct, which was opened at that time. He is said to have been drinking heavily since his appointment, but the police officials say that Hasbrouck had paid strict attention to duty.

SIX TO PLEAD TODAY IN NEW HAVEN CASE

Government Hopes to be Able to Reach Directors' Conspiracy Trial Next Spring.

FOR PRISON SENTENCES

Wm. Rockefeller Likely to Enter His Plea Through Counsel Tomorrow—Outline of Prosecution.

Six or seven more of the twenty-one past and present Directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, indicted on Monday on the charge of having conspired to monopolize the transportation facilities of New England, are expected to appear today in the Federal District Court to make their formal pleas. Assistant District Attorney Robert P. Stephenson has been in communication with the defendants or their counsel to make the necessary arrangements, but it was not known definitely last night which of the defendants would be present today.

William Rockefeller is not likely to enter his plea until tomorrow. Representations already have been made as to his state of health, and although Judge Foster, in accepting from Hoffman Miller the plea of his father, George MacCulloch Miller, said that his action must not be taken as a precedent, it was thought likely yesterday that a similar indulgence would be extended to Mr. Rockefeller and that he would plead by counsel.

The Government has hopes that it will be able to reach the trial of the case some time next Spring. The defendants have three weeks in which to enter demurrers, and these should be disposed of without much delay. The Government has no intention of either accelerating or delaying the calling of the trial. It will follow the regular course, but, as District Attorney Marshall has been able to avail himself of the services of so many District Judges from other parts of the country, the arrears on the District Court calendar are being cleared up rapidly and the trial should be reached in six months or so.

No difficulty, it was ascertained yesterday, is expected in the prosecution of the defendants from the fact that the Government assented in its civil settlement with the New Haven to the railroad's retaining control of the Central New England, the New York, Ontario & Western, and other railroad companies which were once separate from it. In spite of the fact that the steps which led to their acquisition are some of the matters covered by the indictment.

It will contend that the civil suit and its settlement and the criminal trial are two entirely separate things. In the indictments the defendants are charged with conspiring over a long period to monopolize the transportation facilities of New England, and a number of acts are instanced as proof of the conspiracy, which include all the acts concerning the railroads, the steamship lines, and the trolley companies of New England. In the civil suit the Government was applying to a court of equity for relief from a condition which had arisen. It had to consider only the facts as they were to see what remedy could be adopted, and was not required to restore exactly the same conditions as had obtained before the wrong had begun to appear. So it will be argued, the fact that the Government has now acquiesced in the continuance of certain mergers or combinations does not relieve those who brought them about illegally from the consequences of their acts.

The penalty which may be inflicted upon the defendants, if they are convicted, is imprisonment for one year or a fine of $5,000, or both. It is believed that the Government will press for the infliction of the prison sentence in case of a conviction. The New Haven trial is likely to be held to be a test of the efficiency of the criminal clauses of the Sherman anti-trust law. The facts have been practically admitted by those connected with the New Haven, and the responsibility for them can be established definitely by the minutes of the Directors' meetings.

It is expected that the defendants will contend that when they sanctioned the acquisition of the various railroad, steamship, and trolley lines they were acting, in their opinion, merely for the best interests of the New Haven Company, and that the notion that their policy was in any way contrary to the Sherman law never entered their minds. But the prosecution will, it is anticipated, reply that there could be no clearer instance of an attempt to monopolize, and that now, if ever, the punishment prescribed by the statute should be applied with full severity.

TWO CUSTOMS APPEALS.

Duties on Shirt Bosoms and Modeling Clay Involved.

The Treasury Department has decided to continue the litigation over the classification under the Tariff act of 1913 of tucked shirt bosoms composed of cotton or flax ornamented with loom-woven tucks, tuckings chief value. Collector Malone classified them as appliqued goods and took duty at the rate of 60 per cent. ad valorem. The importers went before the Board of General Appraisers with the claim that the goods are "articles of wearing apparel made up or manufactured wholly or in part" at the rate of 30 per cent. The board sustained this contention.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Peters states in his letter to Assistant Attorney General Hanson that the issue is an important one and should be decided by the Court of Customs Appeals. Importers are of the belief that a favorable decision by the Court in this case would be followed by lower rates of duty on many other lines of goods ornamented with tuckings or trimmings.

The department has also ordered an appeal in a recent decision of the Board of General Appraisers dealing with the rate of duty on modeling clay. The commodity was assessed at 20 per cent. ad valorem under the present law, and was held properly dutiable at 15 per cent. as a non-enumerated manufactured article.

BANKERS REPORT PROGRESS

Clearing House Certificates Taken Up in Many Cities.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—As a preliminary to the opening of the Federal reserve system with its new currency, the Controller of the Currency has sent inquiries about outstanding clearing house certificates to the larger cities.

Cleveland, Washington, Richmond, Raleigh, Atlanta, Mobile, Little Rock, Memphis, Kansas City, and Dallas have replied that no clearing house certificates were issued in these cities. Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, New Orleans, and Oklahoma City have reported no clearing house certificates now outstanding. Minneapolis reports clearing house certificates reduced to $250,000, which will be canceled immediately.

The Chairman of the Chicago Clearing House advises that the clearing house certificates outstanding in that city have been reduced to less than $15,000,000, which probably will be retired soon after the opening of the Federal reserve banks.

WAR HURTS MIDDLE WEST

But Power Companies Prosper, Says Chicago Engineer.

Frederick Sargent, a construction engineer, of Chicago, arrived at the Wolcott yesterday on his way to England. He will sail today, and says he is going over to look for new ideas.

"The war has held up a lot of business that has been in progress in the Middle West," said Mr. Sargent, "but the electric light and power companies there are prosperous, and their receipts hold up well. Companies which are able to finance largely out of their own earnings are going ahead with new work."

HORSES AND COWS BURNED.

Firemen Unable to Save Barns on the Grey Rock Farm.

Fire early yesterday morning destroyed three buildings on the Grey Rock Farm, on the Scarsdale Road, near Yonkers. Several alarms were turned in, but the firemen were handicapped, as the nearest hydrant was almost half a mile away, and they were obliged to run their engines to the Bronx River and draw their water from there.

In one of the barns there were sixty-one cows and four horses, and it was impossible to save any. The farm is leased by W. J. Robinson, and his loss will be fully $15,000. The owners of the farm, the Samuel Simon estate, estimate their loss on the buildings at about $15,000.

FIND CATTLE PLAGUE IN CHICAGO YARDS

Dreaded Foot-and-Mouth Disease Strikes Among Finest Grades of Live Stock.

PREDICT HUGE MONEY LOSS

Hundreds of Western Herds Destroyed—One County Loses $500,000—Meat Prices May Fall.

CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—Food-and-mouth disease it was acknowledged today had broken out in the Union Stock Yards here. All of the Federal inspectors at the yards unite in that opinion. While no doubt exists that the disease has attacked a cow at the yards, formal announcement of the fact will be withheld until tomorrow. A calf has been inoculated and it is hoped tomorrow to have a scientific proof of the existence of the disease in the yards. The outbreak at the yards it is thought will not make necessary any extension of the quarantine which went into effect yesterday.

Immediate losses in the Chicago yards may run into several hundred thousand dollars and indirectly into far greater amounts, as the infection is among the prize live stock that recently was brought here from all parts of the United States for exhibition and the finest breeding herds of the country. The cow under observation is a high priced animal of the Holstein variety. It does not follow that all the other fancy breeding cattle that are still here from the dairy show will have to be slaughtered if the diagnosis of the case proves correct. The herds have been separated and every sanitary precaution is being observed.

The gravity of the present epidemic was driven home to cattlemen today by Dr. S. E. Bennett of the Bureau of Animal Industry, who answered the protests of certain interests by asserting that the slaughter of suspected animals would be cheap at a cost of $10,000,000, compared with the incalculable loss which a general spread of the malady would cause.

Representatives of the Government yesterday were in favor of closing the stock yards, the largest in the world, and an order to that effect was rescinded only after prolonged arguments. The possibility of such action is not yet past. State and Government representatives and meat packers proposed the plain again today, and Gov. Dunne vetoed it.

Among the packers today it was said that the situation should make for lower prices, as it was thought that cattle growers, rather than risk disease among their herds, would rush their live stock to market, where it must be killed immediately.

A force of 1,000 men today began disinfection of the stock yards. As the disease is spread through contact, every part of the yards, covering a district a mile square, is to be disinfected. The same process of fumigation will be applied to all live-stock cars. The task, it was said, would require a week or more.

Of the 65,000 employes at the yards, several hundred have been isolated as a result of the quarantine. More than 800 stockmen, who recently arrived with cattle from the infected districts, will be obliged to remain at the yards until the quarantine is lifted.

The quarantine prohibits the shipment of live stock out of Chicago, except to Illinois points for immediate slaughter. It makes it impossible for stockmen in Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, and Pennsylvania to purchase "feeder" cattle in Chicago, and cuts off the small supply of cattle for slaughter which has been received in Chicago from those States. No live stock, with the exception of horses and mules, may be shipped out of the four States or Illinois.

More Government inspectors, bringing the total up to forty-eight, arrived today to aid in fighting the scourge in Illinois. All the feed is burned. The cattle owner receives the actual meat value of the cattle and the market value of the feed. Under present arrangement the Federal and State Governments divide this expense. The fight to exterminate the disease in Illinois alone, it is estimated, will cost $150,000 a week.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Officials of the Department of Agriculture were notified today that the foot-and-mouth disease had been discovered in the cattle herd of Notre Dame (Ind.) University. The entire herd of 300 blooded cattle will be destroyed immediately and the carcasses buried in lime to prevent spread of the contagion. One hundred and sixty-five herds—about 1,000 animals—already have been destroyed in Michigan and Indiana. As yet no cases of children being affected by the milk from diseased cattle have been reported to the department.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 3.—Eight new cases of the hoof-and-mouth disease were discovered today among the cattle of St. Joseph County, cattle valued at more than $60,000 have been destroyed. It is now estimated that the expense involved in destroying diseased cattle in St. Joseph County alone will probably reach $500,000.

The epidemic has become so violent in Olive Township that the farmers made little pretense of going to the polls to vote in today's election.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 3.—The Cleveland stock yards were placed under Federal quarantine today. The order was issued by Dr. H. H. George, United States Inspector in charge of the Department of Animal Husbandry in Cleveland.

No sign of the foot-and-mouth disease has been found in Cleveland, and the quarantine order is merely precautionary.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 3.—As a precautionary measure the Cincinnati Union Stock Yards were placed under Federal quarantine today.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Nov. 3.—Officials of the State Live Stock Sanitary Board today acknowledged that cases of foot-and-mouth disease existed at Pittsburgh, West Chester, and Graters Ford, and that there were two herds in Lancaster County under suspicion.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 3.—The quarantine against the foot-and-mouth disease does not apply to horses, and shipments of horses for European countries are being continued. The horses are "dipped"—that is, they are walked through a liquid that is calculated to protect them from the disease. Twenty-eight carloads of horses were forwarded to seaboard points last night.

Canada Extends Cattle Embargo.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Nov. 3.—Because of the spread of the food-and-mouth disease Canada has extended the embargo against American cattle to Illinois and Pennsylvania. Previously it applied only to cattle from Michigan and Indiana.

GOODS SAVED FROM WRECK.

How the Money Realized on Them Should Be Apportioned.

The British steamship Lugano, while on a voyage from Vigo, Spain, to Havana, loaded with a general cargo, went ashore on March 9, 1913, on Long Reef, one of the reefs off the coast of Florida. The next day the stranded vessel was boarded by a licensed wrecker, to whom was given the contract by the Lugano's master to save the ship and cargo. The salving operations enlisted the aid of eighty vessels of all kinds and extended over a period of several weeks.

Some of the cargo was landed without being damaged, while the remainder was more or less soaked with salt water. The importers of the different items composing the cargo abandoned the goods to the Government, which held a public auction and disposed of them, or those that were salable, and attempted to collect the duties provided for on the merchandise in the tariff law. The salvors objected to the duties being taken until the salvage claims had been paid. The case was thereupon taken to the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, where four questions presented themselves for settlement.

These questions were: First, the priority of the claims of the salvors and the United States; second, the amount of salvage to be allowed the salvors; third, the items of cost to be paid before the allowance of any amount for salvage; fourth, the amount to be allowed for customs duties on sale of such goods that were sold and were consumed in the United States. Relative to the first question, Judge Call holds that the salvors have the prior right to be paid salvage before any duties can be allowed the United States.

Discussing the compensation to be allowed for the salving the court rules, after viewing all the circumstances of this case in the light of the principles announced by the courts in salvage cases and bearing in mind that salvage should not amount to forfeiture, that the proper amount of salvage to be allowed in the case of the Lugano is as follows: Thirty per cent. on the value of the goods saved by the first consort, 45 per cent. on the value of the goods saved by the second consort, and 50 per cent. on the value of the goods saved by the third consort.

The court then proceeds to the consideration of the item of cost proper to be charged against the fund before salvage is calculated. All court costs, costs of storage, care of property, sale, &c., are first deducted, and, in addition to these, certain other cost bills have been presented among them the consignee's bill. This last has been paid under order of the court, but Judge Call says he does not understand this order as settling the question whether or not it should be paid before salvage calculated. The Court reaches the conclusion that the consignee's bill should be paid out of the money in the registry of the court. There are other items that should be paid from the residue, and not from the fund before salvage calculated. These items were represented by vouchers attached to the consignee's bill and are not allowed against the salvage.

At the hearing a bill was presented for services rendered by an expert in classifying the salved cargo. In the opinion of the court, this bill should be paid from the proceeds in the registry of the court before the salvage is calculated. There was also a bill of expenses incurred by the United States presented at the hearing. It appears that the services were rendered while the goods were in the custody of the Marshal of this court under attachment. Judge Call rules that the sections under which Collector of Customs acted are not applicable to goods brought in as these were, and the Government's claim is accordingly disallowed.

The final question settled by the court is the amount of duties to be allowed the United States. The evidence was to the effect that quite an amount of these goods was exported for which no duties can be allowed. It is the opinion of the court that, after deducting the amount for which the exported goods were not from the residue, after the payment of cost chargeable against that residue, 30 per cent. of the amount left in the registry of the court should be paid to the Government in satisfaction of its claim for duties. The amount remaining after such payment is to be paid to claimants upon filing claims as their interests appear.

FEDERAL SOLDIERS SENT TO ARKANSAS

President Orders Troops to Enforce Processes of United States Judge Youmans.

WILL CARRY MACHINE GUNS

Force to be Used Only to Protect Court Officers from Mobs of Mine Strikers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—President Wilson today ordered United States soldiers to Fort Smith, Ark., to assist United States Judge Frank A. Youmans in enforcing the orders of his court in connection with a mine strike in the Hartford Valley coal region.

Four troops of the Fifth Cavalry, about 250 men, were sent from Fort Sheridan, near Chicago, to act under the instructions of the court. They will carry machine guns among their equipment. Major Nathaniel F. McClure, of the Fifth Cavalry, who has been serving in the Colorado strike district, will command the detachment.

This is the first time that United States soldiers have been called upon to enforce a court's orders since 1894, when President Cleveland used the army in the Chicago strike to protect the mails and carry out orders of Federal courts. The regular army has been serving in the Colorado strike district, but not through disregard of the courts.

The President has authority to use the army when in his judgment it is needed to enforce the laws of the United States. After a conference last night between the President and Attorney General Gregory and Secretary Garrison, the troops now going to Fort Smith were ordered to be ready. Today Secretary Garrison made the moving order effective.

It was explained today that Judge Youmans had appointed receivers for certain mining properties, that later certain mines had been blown up, and that certain men who had been arrested had been taken from the United States Marshal by force.

The troops are to see that order is restored and that the warrants of the court are served and its orders observed. Secretary Garrison tonight said:

> We have reached the conclusion that it is impracticable to enforce the law and the orders of the United States Court in Arkansas by any other means. The court had appointed a receiver for the coal mines; the mines had been blown up and the men who had been arrested charged with the crime had been released from the custody of the United States Marshal forcibly by their friends. The United States Court had been unable to enforce its processes.
> The troops will not undertake to serve any processes, but will confine themselves to making it possible for the civil officers to perform their functions. They will prevent any obstruction of justice, so that the ordinary business of the court can go on. This is a matter that concerns the Federal court alone. The State of Arkansas has nothing to do with it.

Major McClure was selected by Secretary Garrison to command the troops going to Arkansas because of the way he discharged his delicate duties in connection with the mine strike in Colorado.

It was expected that the troops would leave Chicago tonight, and they should be at Fort Smith, Ark., before tomorrow night.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Nov. 3.—Judge Frank A. Youmans is awaiting the arrival of Federal troops to quell disturbances among the miners in the Hartford Valley that culminated last Thursday in "shooting up" the Bache-Denman mining camp at Prairie Creek and burning six houses.

While hundreds of shots were fired at that time and Deputy Marshals and employes of the receiver in bankruptcy, who is in charge of the company's mines, were driven off, no one, so far as is known, was injured. The mines have not been operated since, and Franklin Bache, the receiver, said today it was not likely that another attempt would be made to operate them until the Government had taken some action.

United States Marshal Parker says he has done all he can, but his small force of deputies "cannot cope with a body of men numbering two or three thousand, armed with high-power rifles."

The first trouble in the Hartford Valley occurred on April 4, when the Bache-Denman Company tried to operate its mine on the "open-shop" plan. A crowd of miners and sympathizers marched to the mines, assaulted the guards, drove off the non-union employes, and put out the fires under the boilers.

The company then obtained a Federal injunction prohibiting union miners and sympathizers from interfering with the operation of the mines. Later the court appointed Franklin Bache receiver. On July 17, while the receiver was in charge, the miners were attacked, guards and miners were driven away, the tipples of five mines were turned, two employes were killed, and their bodies cremated.

The situation in the valley was quiet today, the only interesting feature being the surrender of four miners charged with conspiracy against the Government and participation in the battle at the Bache-Denman mines. Their names were not made public.

NO TREATING IN WASHINGTON

Court Holds That to Give Liquor Violates District Excise Law.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—A decision made today by Judge James A. Pugh, who ruled that to treat in a barroom or to give away intoxicants in any form violates the excise law of the District of Columbia and makes the offender liable to a fine of $250, caused many election wagers to go unpaid tonight.

Politicians who had "bet a highball" and lost pointed to the decision as an excuse for not paying.

Shoemaker's, which is as much an institution as the Monument, was crowded tonight with political wiseacres, but after Judge Pugh's decision they did not feel called upon to invite their friends to "drink to the health" of winning candidates. "Safety first" rules were posted in every drinking place.

Judge Pugh's decision is based on a clause in the excise law which provides that "no person shall give away any intoxicating liquor except as hereinafter provided." The point was raised several weeks ago by attorneys for James Jones and Hattie Bird, charged with violating the excise law. Judge Pugh expressed the hope that the case would be carried to higher courts.

LEFT $920 SEWED IN SHOES.

Mrs. Sarah Frey of Highlands, N. J., Ends Life in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Mrs. Sarah Frey of Highlands, N. J., committed suicide by gas today in a hall room of a Seventh Street lodging house. Sewed between the soles of a pair of shoes at the foot of the bed was found $920 in bills. Attached to one of the shoes was a note, written in Hebrew, telling where the money would be found.

The police are looking for the woman's husband, Samuel Frey, who is believed to be in Philadelphia. Among her possessions was a legal document indicating she and her husband had agreed in October, 1913, to live apart. She was about 50 years old.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 3.—The Liverpool Cotton Association will hold a meeting Tuesday to consider resolutions relative to the reopening of the cotton market.

CLANCY TO TESTIFY.

Ex-Warden Expected to Appear at Sullivan Inquiry Today.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Union Bank Depositors' Association of Brooklyn has been called for Friday evening to consider the report made to Gov. Glynn by State Supt. of Prisons Riley in the David A. Sullivan case, and to decide whether a formal complaint shall be lodged against Riley with the Governor. Dr. J. Ellis Rohrer, the Chairman, and other members of the committee seem to think that Supt. Riley's report on his investigation of the convicted banker's reported auto rides was an attempted "whitewash" of Sing Sing officials.

It is expected that James M. Clancy, former Warden of Sing Sing, who has volunteered as a witness in District Attorney Cropsey's investigation of Sullivan's activities, will appear before the Grand Jury today. The bank wrecker is alleged to have visited Flatbush in the Summer of 1913. Mr. Clancy, who was in charge of the prison at the time, has told Mr. Cropsey that he knows of no trip to Brooklyn made by Sullivan. The District Attorney will probably question other witnesses today about a reported automobile ride taken by Sullivan with several prominent politicians of Westchester County. According to this story, Sullivan drove the car to New York City and on the return the party stopped at a roadhouse in Tarrytown and had dinner there.

District Attorney Cropsey took a day of rest from the Sullivan-Sing Sing investigation yesterday. He spent the afternoon on the golf links at Dyker Meadow.

GIRLS SEIZED BY THUGS.

Two Beaten by Gang Near Park Before Help Arrived.

May Miller, a milliner, of 12 East 110th Street, and May Kline of 24 East 109th Street were going home last night from a moving picture show in Eighth Avenue. Near the edge of the Park at 110th Street and Lenox Avenue two men jumped out from the shrubbery and seized the girls.

A moment later about a dozen other men, according to the girls' story, came running up, and the two girls were surrounded by the mob, which began to beat them and try to drag them off the sidewalk into the shrubbery. Miss Kline managed to get her hand free long enough to raise a small whistle to her mouth and blow it, and Miss Miller screamed so loudly that passers-by on 110th Street heard her cries and came to the rescue.

At the approach of help the thugs let the girls go and ran south through the woods and got away. Miss Miller had been severely beaten about the head and body and the police summoned Dr. Rafsky, who took her to Harlem Hospital.

JERSEY MILITIA WEAK.

71% of the Companies Under the Minimum Strength Required.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 3.—Decline in the military spirit of the average young man of today is responsible, according to Adjt. Gen. Wilbur F. Saddler, Jr., for the increasing absenteeism in the National Guard of New Jersey.

In his annual report, submitted to Gov. Fielder today, Gen. Saddler says that the record of the strength of the organization of the guard at the date of inspection shows that 71.6 per cent. of the companies, including the batteries, troops, and signal corps, were below the minimum strength required. He adds that there has been a steady decrease each year since 1906, due, no doubt, to the many causes over which the commanding officers have no control. He recommends that men physically below par be dismissed. There are 383 officers and 5,219 men in the guard.

EDISON AT WORK AGAIN.

Inventor Says He Must Make Up Time Lost on Vacation.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 3.—Thomas A. Edison, Mrs. Edison, and their son, Charles Edison, returned today from a two weeks' stay with Henry Ford, the automobile manufacturer, at his home in Detroit. They went to the Western city by automobile, but returned by rail. Looking fresh and happy the noted inventor went directly from the Pennsylvania Station in Newark to his laboratory, where he said:

"I've neglected my work for two weeks, and now I have to make up lost time. On my trip I made countless notes of experiments I want to carry out. Now I must accomplish something."

TRENTON.—Margaret Vanhorn, a servant, 22 years old, drank a quantity of iodine yesterday, but is expected to recover. Florence Applegate, a colored woman, committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid.

TRENTON.—In reporting that lack of educational opportunity is responsible for undesirable conditions in the pine belt of Burlington County, State Commissioner of Education Kendall pointed out that one local School Board had failed to supply maps, chalk, ink, and pens, as required by law.

OPEN NEW BUILDING FOR CRIPPLES' CLINIC

Patrons of Hospital for Deformities Dedicate Six-Story Dispensary.

MODERN AID FOR SUFFERERS

Jacob H. Schiff, in Address, Contrasts Institution's Mission of Mercy with Horrors of the War.

The new dispensary for the Hospital for Deformities and Joint Diseases, 41-43 East 123d Street, a fine six-story building of light brown press brick, well appointed and equipped with the most modern devices for the treatment of the deformed and suffering, was dedicated yesterday afternoon in the presence of several hundred friends and patrons. In the last few years this clinic, which has grown to be the largest of its kind in the world, undertakes the treatment not only of children, but of adult cripples, many of whom find it difficult to obtain necessarily long treatment in other hospitals of the city.

Judge Julius M. Mayer, Chairman of the meeting, announced the receipt of a letter, inclosing a check for $1,000, from the Young Ladies and Gentlemen's League. He then introduced Dr. Abraham Jacobi, who said he thought it probable that the people of the United States were beginning to think of the killing of thousands of men in battle a day in a matter of fact way which would have its baneful result in future generations. He added:

"It is good you have come here. You mean to bless peace, not war, and to pay your respects to the men and women who give of their means and knowledge and time and labor to save and not destroy. You come here to see the place where human beings have resolved to heal wounds, not to inflict them; to save lives, not to exterminate them; to straighten limbs, not to cripple them; to restore families, not to break them up by the hundreds a day. I am quite sure there is nothing more instructive and more moralizing than the contact with those who require somebody and on account of suffering.

Jacob H. Schiff, introduced as a man who was distinguished because of his persistent efforts to see that the problems of charity and helpfulness were dealt with intelligently, said:

"In these awful times, when envy of each other has engulfed most of the European nations in a terrible conflict; when the human sacrifices of ancient times, at which we hold up our hands in horror, are far surpassed by the merciless slaughter which has gone on for the last three months, we may indeed be grateful that in these United States we are so situated that, unhampered by conditions such as exist in the Old World, we may proceed in peaceful and useful labor for the real benefit of mankind, so markedly represented by the scientific and highly altruistic work done in this hospital and dispensary. Let us wish Godspeed to the men who have made this possible and who have dedicated themselves to efforts so thoroughly deserving the encouragement of the community."

Among the other speakers was Adolph Lewisohn and Lewis Straus. Immediately after the dedicatory exercises the visitors were escorted through the new building. They were greatly interested in the equipment in the basement for the manufacture of mechanical braces and other appliances used in the treatment of the crippled. The first floor has been divided into an assembly room, with waiting room, executive offices, drug department, offices for staff, and sub-divisions. The third floor is devoted to the treatment by massage and electricity of various types of infantile paralysis. The fourth floor has been fitted up with Zander apparatus for stiffened feet and joints. Two gymnasiums occupy a large part of the fifth floor. The sixth floor is equipped with a chemical, bacteriological, and pathological suite of laboratories. In the rear is an amphitheatre operating room.

BOY SHOT IN GANG FIGHT.

Victim Stopped to Watch Battle Over Election Firewood.

Two gangs met at Eighty-third Street and Second Avenue yesterday afternoon and started a stone fight, one set of youths declaring that the other had stolen wood gathered for an election bonfire. Twelve-year-old John Buckley of 329 East Eightieth Street, on his way to a moving picture show, stopped to watch the fight and was directly in range when one of the gangsters pulled a revolver from his pocket and fired a shot.

The bullet struck the boy in the left temple and the gangs fled as he dropped senseless to the sidewalk.

Several men ran up and picked the boy up. He was sent to Flower Hospital, but died there a few hours later.

JERSEY FORESTS IN FLAMES.

Situation is Serious and Governor Promises Help.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 3.—Gov. Fielder, who promised today to help those who are fighting forest fires in various parts of the State, held a conference with State Forester Gaskell to map out plans of relief. The situation in several places is serious. In the Blue Mountains, east of the Delaware Water Gap, a fire which is believed to have been set with the object of driving deer out of lands posted against hunters has been raging since Sunday. The fire is traveling rapidly in the direction of Sussex County.

Fire Wardens in Warren County have been struggling in vain for four days in the attempt to check a fire near Backwood Inn Park. On Jack's Hill, across the river from Belvidere, farmers have been working for several days against a fire which is still making progress.

TREASURE AUTO STALLED.

With Load of Gold, Wheel Sinks Into Planking—Driver Hurt.

An Adams Express auto truck, containing ten safes, which are said by the police to hold part of the shipment of $40,000,000 of gold bullion from Alaska to the United States Treasury, and being transferred to the Sub-Treasury in New York, was going south on Broadway at midnight last night when a wheel of the heavily loaded auto sank through the wooden planking at Eighth Street. The chauffeur, Michael C. Farrell, 24 years old, of 1,278 Prospect Avenue, Brooklyn, and Charles Widenkind, 43 years old, a clerk of 4,918 Seventh Avenue, were thrown off and received injuries which necessitated their being sent to St. Vincent's Hospital. Farrell is said to have received a broken leg.

A call was sent to the Mercer Street Station and the police Captain, a Sergent, five patrolmen, and four plainclothes men were sent to the scene.

THE real secret of The Majestic's premier position among New York's Apartment Hotels is the unstinted measure of comforts it affords which are literally impossible in hotels not possessed of its advantages of location, construction and operation. The rooms in themselves would be enough to mark The Majestic as no ordinary hotel, for they are remarkable in point of size, light and arrangement.

CARRANZA BALKS, RETAINS OFFICE, PLANS TO STAY

Resists Election of Gutierrez and Asserts Convention Didn't Meet Terms.

SAYS LEADERS UPHOLD HIM

And Declares That Report of His Resignation Was a Telegraphic Error.

WAS VIRTUALLY DEPOSED

Villa Reported to Have Given His Allegiance to Gutierrez—Carranza Will Ignore Convention.

EL PASO, Nov. 3.—Gen. Carranza, in a message received here this afternoon, asserted that he would not abide by the action of the Aguascalientes convention in naming a Provisional President.

Gen. Carranza's signed statement as received by officials of the Constitutionalist Consul General's office here was telegraphed from Puebla. It said:

"The convention having not complied with the conditions that I fixed regarding my retirement from the duties I am performing as first chief, I have not taken into consideration the resolution of the said convention in regard to its appointment of a President who should take my place, and therefore I still continue to be in charge of my office.

This resolution of mine has been supported by the Governors of the States. Among the officials joining in this action are Gens. Coss, P. Sanchez, A. Gonzales, Ernesto Sentos Coy, Pablo Gonzales, and all leaders of the Division of the Northeast.

I have no doubt that the balance of the leaders when they know of this resolution of mine will support my attitude and will ignore the convention. V. CARRANZA.

Carranza Receives Support.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 3.—Gen. Alvaro Obregon and other Commissioners of the Aguascalientes Convention, who are coming to inform Gen. Carranza of the convention's action in naming Gutierrez as Provisional President, stopped off at Queretaro. Gen. Pablo Gonzalez is at Queretaro and both he and the Governor of the State are loyal to Carranza. The Governors of Jalisco and Vera Cruz also have reaffirmed their loyalty to the First Chief. The Governor of Michoacan, Gen. Sanchez, who arrived at the capital tonight, also is counted on. He probably will go to Puebla to confer with Carranza.

Gen. Carranza, it is learned, has received numerous telegrams promising him support. In addition to Gen. Coss, Governor of Puebla, whose guest Carranza now is, Gen. Maximo Rojas, Governor of Tlaxcala, has also repudiated the action of the convention. Carranza, it is learned, has similar assurances from the Governors of Queretaro and Guanajuato. The date of Carranza's return from Puebla is yet unfixed.

José Cardoso de Oliveira, Brazilian Minister to Mexico, today handed to the Mexican Minister of Foreign Affairs the latest Washington note, which was a reply to Mexico's communication asking Washington to fix a definite date for the evacuation of Vera Cruz.

The note, while disavowing any intention on the part of the American Government to occupy Vera Cruz longer than necessary, was firm in the attitude that the central Government of Mexico must definitely guarantee to protect those Mexican residents of Vera Cruz who, it is said, are listed for punishment by the Carranza Government. The matter of the adjustment of the customs also was insisted upon. It was explained that the proclamation of Gen. Aguilar making certain guarantees was wholly insufficient for the purpose of the American Government.

When it became generally known today that the Washington Government had failed to comply with the request of the Mexican Foreign Office that the United States fix a definite date for the evacuation of Vera Cruz, Mexican Scottish Rite Masons printed thousands of proclamations calling upon the citizens to arm themselves and drive the invading foreigners from the shores of Mexico.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Nov. 3.—Gen. Carranza never sent his resignation to the Aguascalientes convention, and the message to that effect received at Aguascalientes was a telegraphic error, Gen. Carranza says in a telegram to Gen. Benjamin Hill, his commander in Sonora.

In his telegram Carranza asserts that he still is the head of the Constitutionalist Army, and notifies Hill that he will expect him to execute orders. Gen. Carranza in the telegram asserts that what he did say to the convention was that he was "willing to become an exile from Mexico, providing the same treatment were accorded to Villa and Zapata."

A message to Gen. Hill from his delegate at the convention, Julio Madero, today said the retirement of both Carranza and Villa had been accepted by the Committee on Resolutions; that it was now almost certain that the retirement of Gov. Maytorena of Sonora, Gen. Obregon, and Gen. Pablo Gonzales would be demanded, leaving all the military forces under the command of the newly elected Provisional President.

The elimination of Zapata, Madero said, would be discussed soon at a meeting to be attended by all delegates from the southern portion of Mexico.

Convention Was Jubilant.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Acting Secretary of State Lansing today received advices by telegraph from Consular Agent Canova, at Aguascalientes, saying that the convention assembled to select a Provisional President of Mexico had declared Gen. Eulalio Gutierrez duly elected to that office. Gutierrez received 88 votes to 37 for Gen. Juan Cabral.

The announcement of the vote was received with great enthusiasm by the convention. Mr. Canova said, and the Zapatistas present, although not permitted to vote, announced themselves satisfied with the result. The election of Gen. Gutierrez is for a period of twenty days, at the end of which time the Zapata delegates will have an opportunity to participate in an election for a longer term.

Advices received by the State Department from its agents are to the effect that Villa has pledged his allegiance to Gutierrez.

SAYS AUSTRIA SEEKS A SEPARATE PEACE

Petrograd Report Predicts Important Moves at Vienna—Paris and London Tested.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 4.—The Standard's Petrograd correspondent says:

"In spite of Germany's threats, promises, and furious disgust, Austria, the Russian Government is informed, would only too gladly retire from the war if she could make terms with Russia direct, with the approval of Great Britain and France.

"The Russian Government is in communication on this subject with London and Paris, and important developments may shortly be expected. Berlin is exerting the strongest influences at Vienna, but as a fighting force the Austro-Hungarian army has practically ceased to exist." Ravages of disease have contributed even more than the Russian armies to bring about a desperate state of affairs in Austria-Hungary.

"Any arrangement Vienna makes with Petrograd would of course include Servia. It is a question whether Austria-Hungary will not be compelled to capitulate ignominiously, if terms of peace cannot promptly be arranged to save her face. Her only alternative would appear to be abject submission to Berlin. In that event it is doubtful whether German aid could long defer the occupation of Vienna by the Russian Army."

SAY GUARDED PATIENT IS THE CROWN PRINCE

Strassburg People Thus Solve Mystery of Wounded Man at the Palace.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BASLE, Nov 3, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—There is now a man in Strassburg to whose identity as much mystery attaches as to that of the man in the iron mask. He arrived wounded some days ago, and was received reverentially by the military Governor and other high officials.

At present he is accommodated in the palace, which is closely guarded. No servants are allowed to leave its precincts, and even two doctors who are attending the mysterious patient have taken up their residence in the palace, and are never seen outside.

The general impression at Strassburg is that the patient is the German Crown Prince.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Nov. 3.—There have been rumors for the last two days at Basle that the German Crown Prince has been seriously wounded and is under treatment at the palace at Strassburg.

The reports were verified tonight by several travelers arriving from Strassburg.

"FIGHTING FOR LIFE," KAISER'S PHRASE

Quoted as Predicting Victory and a New Empire to Rule the World.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Copenhagen correspondent of The Evening News has sent in a dispatch in which he says that a German subject who heard Emperor William on a recent occasion when he addressed his troops quotes his Majesty as follows:

"We are now fighting for the life of Germany. They wish to kill Germany; but I say if we win—and we must win—a new empire shall arise more splendid than the world ever saw—a new Roman-German empire which shall rule the world, and the world shall be happy."

IMPERIAL BANK ADDS $150,000,000 IN GOLD

Increase in Three Months Brings the Total Reserve to $482,000,000.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The latest statement of the German Imperial Bank announces that its gold reserve during three months of war has increased £30,000,000 ($150,000,000.) The total reserve is now £96,500,000 ($482,000,000.) The bank disposes of over £50,000,000 more gold than there was in its vaults on Nov. 1, 1911, when the state of the German money market made war over Morocco impracticable.

BERLIN, Nov. 3, (Via Rome.)—The Reichsbank's weekly return makes a relatively satisfactory impression. The aggregate depreciation in the standing was only 57,864,000 marks, ($14,341,000,) as compared with 236,850,000 marks, ($59,212,500,) in the corresponding week last year.

The reserve of metal and other currency against the note circulation rose to. 66.18 per cent., as compared with 65.5 per cent. in the previous week. Although the second installment of the war loan was paid during the week, the payment had been anticipated to so great extent that the increase in the loan on bank notes reached only 224,700,000 marks.

About 80 per cent. of the war loan has already been paid, which is considerably above the amount called for. The gold stock continues growing from home supplies.

BRITISH-FRENCH WARSHIPS SHELL DARDANELLES

Attack by Combined Squadron at Long Range—A Fort Apparently Blown Up.

ENGLISH BOMBARD AKABAH

TURKISH WARSHIPS SUNK

Two Gunboats Which Were Trying to Seize American Ships at Smyrna Destroyed by British Vessels.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 4.—Two important naval operations against Turkey are announced. A British and French squadron has bombarded the Dardanelles, and a British cruiser has bombarded the fortified town of Akabah, Arabia, afterward sending landing parties to occupy the town.

The Secretary of the Admiralty last night stated that a combined British and French squadron bombarded the Dardanelles at long range at daybreak yesterday. The forts replied, but no ships were hit, only one shot falling alongside them.

The statement adds that the damage to the forts cannot be estimated, but that a great explosion, accompanied by dense volumes of black smoke, occurred at the Holles Fort.

Another announcement made by the Admiralty yesterday was as follows:

Upon arriving at Akabah the cruiser Minerva, Capt. Percival Warleigh, found the place occupied by soldiers and armed natives. One of the soldiers had the appearance of a German officer.

The Minerva then shelled the port and the troops. The town was evacuated, and landing parties from the Minerva proceeded to destroy the forts, the barracks, the Post Office, and the stores.

There was some loss to the enemy, but no British casualties.

Akabah is on an arm of the Red Sea at the head of the Gulf of Akabah, 150 miles east of Suez.

The Athens correspondent of The Daily Telegraph sends the following dispatch:

"British destroyers on Tuesday were obliged to interfere outside the entrance to the Gulf of Smyrna to save two American steamers whose fires two Turkish gunboats were trying to put out with the intention of retaining the ships.

"In the ensuing conflict the Turkish vessels were sunk."

A dispatch to The Daily Mail from Cairo says:

"The Turkish troops are reported near the border, which they have not crossed. The British are fully prepared to repulse an invasion, thanks to the measures taken by the Government.

"The public in Egypt are calm and not even aware of a Turco-Russian rupture. A press censorship will be established tomorrow, (Tuesday.)"

A dispatch reaching London from Constantinople says that several hundred more German officers have just arrived there. A majority of them, it is asserted, are familiar with the Turkish army organization, having been employed in the Ottoman capital before.

RUSSIANS INVADE ARMENIA.

Turks Say They Were Repulsed—Orders by Caucasus Viceroy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Monday, Nov. 2, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—Count Vorontsoff Dashkoff, Viceroy of the Caucasus, under date of Oct. 29, has issued the following orders to the army of the Caucasus:

"The Turks have treacherously attacked our coast towns and ships of the Black Sea Fleet.

"By his Majesty's command I am ordered to consider Russia at war with Turkey, and the troops of the Caucasus Army under my command are to cross the frontier and attack the Turks."

I have repeatedly, since the beginning of the war, noted that Russia had taken into account all possible eventualities. The Turkish ships bombarded Russian Black Sea undefended coast towns the night before, Oct. 29; and the Emperor's orders to his troops to cross the Turkish frontier were issued the following day. Nothing whatever was allowed to leak out here until today.

This afternoon I hear murmurs of something of the highest importance having occurred in the Black Sea, but the rumor is too indistinct to make anything of, even if the censorship now in force had permitted one to do so.

Tomorrow (Tuesday) is the twentieth anniversary of Emperor Nicholas's accession to the throne, and the Russians will probably be elated by important news issued on this anniversary.

By The Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 3.—An official communication was given out in Constantinople today as follows:

"According to official reports from the Caucasian frontier, Russian troops have attacked our frontier forces at sev-

FLEETS CLASH IN PACIFIC

Five German Cruisers Win Against Four British Warships.

MONMOUTH AND CREW LOST

Good Hope, Admiral Cradock's Flagship, Afire, and Probably Destroyed.

GLASGOW FLEES TO HARBOR

Three German Cruisers Anchor Off Valparaiso with Report of Battle on Sunday.

VALPARAISO, Chile, Nov. 3.—The German warships Gneisenau, Scharnhorst, Nürnberg, Leipzig, and Bremen on Sunday attacked the British fleet off Corbnel, Chile.

The British cruiser Monmouth was sunk.

The cruiser Good Hope was very badly damaged, and, as she was on fire, she is supposed to have been lost.

The British cruiser Glasgow, also badly damaged, took refuge in the harbor of Coronel, and is now bottled up.

The German armored cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and the small cruiser Nürnberg anchored at midday today in Valparaiso Harbor, uninjured.

Battle Fought in Rain.

Admiral Graf Von Spee, commander of the German fleet in Pacific waters, arrived here this morning and made the following report of the engagement which took place off Coronel Sunday evening:

"On Sunday, Nov. 1, between 6 and 7 o'clock in the evening, during a heavy rain and rough weather off Coronel, we sighted the British men-of-war Good Hope, Monmouth, and Glasgow and the transport Otranto.

"An engagement ensued immediately. All the ships opened a brisk cannonade with all their artillery.

"The action lasted nearly one hour and it was only discontinued at nightfall. The English were forced to give way. The Good Hope was so badly damaged that she was unable to resist and could only make her escape, protected by the darkness. Between her funnels the result of the big explosion could be detected.

"The Monmouth, under identical conditions, tried to escape, but was followed by a small cruiser and sunk with a few shots.

"Owing to the hurricane that was blowing no boats could be lowered, and consequently there was a terrible loss of life.

"It is supposed that the Glasgow and the Otranto, which were badly damaged, were able to make their escape owing to their speed and the darkness.

"The Germans suffered little or no damage. Only two men wounded were reported in the Gneisenau crew."

In naval circles it is said that the action took place twenty miles off St. Maria Island,, whence the flashes of the guns could be seen, but no detonations heard.

The Germans opened fire at 9,000 metres, and the English when they came within 6,000 metres of the enemy. They already had been very badly damaged. The Monmouth received a terrible broadside, according to the naval officials, and this, combined with the hurricane, soon resulted in her sinking.

Good Hope Probably Lost.

The Good Hope escaped on fire, but shortly afterward a terrific explosion was heard, and her loss is considered certain. The Glasgow escaped to Talcahuano, badly damaged.

The Germans say the English fought heroically, but that their artillery was ineffective. It is believed here that the British were attacked by the complete German flying fleet.

Armed transports and the cruisers Leipzig and Bremen are keeping watch off Talcahuano to capture or sink the Glasgow should she attempt to escape. If the Glasgow does not come out of the harbor it is said that she will be dismantled and interned. The German fleet will leave here tomorrow. Its distination is not known.

It is reported that a powerful Anglo-Japanese fleet is on its way to South Pacific waters.

All British steamers in this vicinity are remaining at anchor temporarily as the result of the naval battle.

The Gneisenau and Scharnhorst were perforated in various parts by shells during the battle, but the injuries they sustained were of no consequence.

All Lost on the Monmouth.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 3.—All hands are reported to have perished when the British cruiser Monmouth took her plunge beneath the sea after thirty minutes of fighting with the Germans off Coronel, according to advices received here.

The battle was a terrific one while it lasted, and as darkness gathered the Good Hope seemed to be on fire, following a terrible burst of flame from her, which seemed to indicate that an explosion had occurred on board.

The Glasgow is reported to have arrived in Coronel Bay in a very bad condition. The Otranto escaped to Puerto Montt.

The German ships arrived in Valparaiso today to take on board coal and provisions. They will leave there tomorrow morning, having suffered no mishaps. Only a very few of the men of the German crews were wounded.

The battle has caused a tremendous sensation here.

Off to Catch British Steamer.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 4.—A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Santiago, Chile, says:

"The German cruisers Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, and Nürnberg arrived at Valparaiso Monday, and after provisioning, left during the night, it is believed with the object of capturing a British steamer, which had left Coquimbo for Valparaiso."

BATTLE LONG EXPECTED.

Two German Warships Had Been Active Since the War Began.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 3.—Today's action between British and German cruisers in the South Pacific has been expected since the first days of the war, when for days the German cruisers Leipzig and Nürnberg maintained a patrol off this port.

For a time they showed themselves only singly, hoping to convey the impression that only one cruiser was in the vicinity, but an inbound ship came upon the two together, and thereafter concealment was abandoned.

The Leipzig was coaled here before she started; the Nürnberg took on coal at Guaymas.

For several weeks nothing has been known here as to the exact whereabouts of these vessels. The Scharnhorst and Dresden are believed to have come from the Far East.

Several weeks ago it was announced that an English fleet had entered Pacific waters hunting for the Germans.

REPORT MADE TO BERNSTORFF

The Bristol Mentioned as One of the British Craft Engaged.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, announced at midnight the receipt of a message from the German Minister to Chile, saying that with the loss of only three men, five German cruisers fought a battle Sunday off Coronel, Chile, with four British ships.

The Monmouth, the advices said, was sunk and the Good Hope badly damaged and probably sunk later, though her fate was unknown.

The other two British vessels, the Otranto and the Bristol, escaped.

The British Embassy has received no report of the battle.

The Bristol, it should be noted, is not mentioned in the reports from Chile. These speak of the Glasgow as the fourth British vessel engaged.

BATTLE OF POWERFUL SHIPS.

Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, and Good Hope Are Large Vessels.

The German armored cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau are sister ships, and are the only two of their class. They are rated at a mean speed of 22½ knots, although the Gneisenau has made 24.8 knots, but her sister ship has fallen far below that, being officially rated as having a speed of about 21 knots. Each cruiser has a displacement of 11,600 tons, is 450 feet on the waterline, has a beam of 71 feet, and carries 765 men. Their guns and armor are similar. There are eight 8.2-inch guns in the main battery, with six 6-inch forming the secondary battery, and twenty 24-pounders and four machine guns in the auxiliary battery.

The Good Hope, which is reported to have been sunk, was the flagship of the British squadron, of which Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock was in command. She was one of the older vessels of the British Navy, having been launched thirteen years ago. The Good Hope was the largest vessel engaged, having a displacement of 14,100 tons. She was 500 feet long, 71 feet beam and was supposed to have a speed of 24 knots. Her armament consisted of two 9.2-inch guns, mounted in single turrets fore and aft, sixteen 6-inch, fourteen 3-inch, three 3-pounders, and two torpedo tubes.

The British light cruiser Glasgow, which took refuge at Coronel, was completed in 1911 and belonged to the Bristol class of five ships. She is 430 feet long, 47 feet beam, and has a displacement of 4,800 tons. Her speed is rated at a little more than 25 knots and she carries 376 officers and men. Her armament is two 6-inch guns in turrets fore and aft and ten 4-inch guns with two torpedo tubes.

The cruiser Monmouth, which is reported sunk, belonged to the county class of cruisers and was completed in 1903. She had a displacement of 9,800 tons with a length of 440 feet, a beam of 66 feet and was rated as having a speed of 23 or 24 knots. She carried 678 officers and men and had the heaviest armament of the British vessels, consisting of fourteen 6-inch guns, eight 3-inch, and three 3-pounders, with two torpedo tubes. The Monmouth carried 678 officers and men.

Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock was in command of the British fleet in Mexican waters when the Americans occupied Vera Cruz. He has a distinguished record and has received many honors and decorations. During the Soudan campaign in 1891 he served with the army, and was mentioned in dispatches and received the Khédive's Star with clasp. During 1894-96 he was commander of the Royal Yacht. He was A. D. C. to the King in 1909 and became a Rear Admiral in 1910. Among his decorations are the Royal Spanish Order of the Second Class for Naval Merit and the Royal Humane Society's Testimonial for saving life. He was made a Knight Commander of the Victorian Order in 1912 for personal services, and he received the appreciation of the Admiralty and the silver medal of the Board of Trade for gallantry in saving life at sea in connection with the wreck of the steamer Dalhi.

Summary of War News.

Great Britain suffered heavily on the seas yesterday in naval engagements. In the battle off the Chilean coast five German warships attacked four British cruisers, resulting in the sinking of the British cruiser Monmouth, the damaging of the cruiser Good Hope, and the disabling of the cruiser Glasgow. Three of the German vessels are reported to have anchored undamaged outside Valparaiso, while the other two, the cruisers Leipzig and Bremen, have not been heard from.

In the North Sea the British submarine D-5 was sunk by a mine thrown out by a German cruiser, which was being chased by several British warships.

The German fleet has come out from its base, according to a dispatch from Dover, which also says that four battleships and four cruisers have put to sea from Kiel.

The French War Office announced that the Germans had abandoned the left bank of the Yser River below Dixmude, and that the Allies have taken possession of points on the river where crossings could be made. The Germans have gained ground east of Vailly, on the centre, while the Allies have checked further advances in the Argonne region.

The Germans admitted that their forces were being flooded out of the region along the Yser, but asserted that their attacks on Ypres were progressing, 2,300 British prisoners and many cannon having been taken. Severe fighting west of Roye and east of Soissons was reported, and successes were claimed in both regions.

Fighting between the Turkish forces and the Russians is reported to have taken place near Trebizond, with a victory for the Turks. A British cruiser shelled and occupied the Turkish fortified town of Akabah, on the Red Sea. The Turkish Ambassador has left the Russian capital.

The Czar has left for the front, accompanied by his War Minister. He is reported to have told a Chamber of Commerce meeting that Russia will not end the war until she has pierced the heart of German soil.

A German official report states that fighting in Poland continues, but no details of recent engagements are available. The Austrians are said to be pressing forward in the region between Stari-Sambor and Turka. Further successes for the Austrians against the Servians are claimed.

CRUISER DROPS MINES

One Falls in Path of the D-5—Halcyon, British Patrol Ship, in Lively Fight.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The British submarine D-5 was sunk in the North Sea early this morning by a mine which was thrown out by a German cruiser which was retreating before British cruisers. Two officers and two men of the submarine were saved.

This information is contained in an Admiralty report issued here tonight.

The report says a German squadron fired on the British gunboat Halcyon, which was patrolling, wounding one man.

"Various naval movements were made," the report continues, "as a result of which the Germans retreated rapidly, and, although shadowed by the light cruisers, they could not be brought into a sea action.

"The rearmost German cruiser, in her retirement, threw out a number of mines, and the submarine was sunk by one of these."

The Exchange Telegraph Company's Lowestoft correspondent says:

"One of the survivors of the submarine has been landed here, and a number of other survivors were picked up by a trawler.

"At midday the action was still in progress.

"The British gunboat Halcyon was struck by a number of shells and clouds of smoke arose from her. Those on the trawler thought she was sinking, but she was not seriously damaged, and after she had discharged one or two shots at them the German vessels steamed away at full speed."

Big German Ships Took Part.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

YARMOUTH, England, Nov. 3, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The shaking of windows and the heavy thud of guns awakened the people of Yarmouth this morning. They hurried to the sea front, which soon was crowded with inquisitive sightseers. Although there was very much to be heard there was very little to be seen. Over the sunlit waters there was a thick haze that shut out the mysterious beyond.

Gradually the sound of firing deepened, and by about 7:15 o'clock it was very heavy and constant. It died away some time about 8 o'clock.

No ships could be seen, but at one period the effect of the firing was visible on the water. Great fountains of water sprang up where shells dropped, some two miles from the beach. Occasionally three or four of these cascades were in view at one time.

The gradual increase of the detonations and their gradual diminution seemed to point to its being a running engagement. Proceeding along the coast about 7:15 o'clock we could distinctly see flashes of fire through the mist, which hung on the horizon, although no ships could be distinguished.

The territorial troops were called out, and a detachment of them marched down to the marine parade with fixed bayonets at about 5:30 this evening, when H. M. S. Halcyon, an old cruiser engaged in fishery protection duties, steamed into Lowestoft. Her wireless aerial had been shot away, her bridge struck, and shots had made small holes in one of her funnels. After the vessel had been moored at the jetty an injured sailor was brought ashore on a stretcher and taken to a hospital.

Seven or Eight Vessels Engaged.

The story of the action is carried further by eye-witnesses of the engagement who were some fifteen miles away with the fleet of Yarmouth and Lowestoft, steam drifters steaming by for the herring grounds. Several of these vessels have returned, and one can piece together a more or less connected story of the fight from the accounts of their skippers. Regarding the number of vessels engaged, there is some difference of opinion, some fishermen saying there were eight, others seven. The fishing fleet watched the arrival of the German warships without concern. This is what Skipper Beak of the South Trust Dock Company's drifter SD-5 said:

"They were steaming in line when we first sighted them and of course we took them for friendly ships. The first suspicion that we had made a mistake arose when the cook of one of the drifters held up a teapot and the men on the nearest destroyer shook their fists at him. Then, without warning, the destroyers fired their stern guns and the cruisers as they turned around fired broadsides. We could not see what they were aiming at. There were no British ships in sight from where we were, but there was a haze. The shots were aimed in the direction of Yarmouth and that appeared to be the only target."

"The steam drifter Sam Richards was in the thick of the fighting. She was laying to her nets off Lowestoft and close by the Halcyon. She reports that in addition to the Halcyon, there was a torpedo boat.

"There they saw big German ships away off, and when the firing began, the shells fell thickly around them. Some of the shells fell quite near to the drifters, and some of the crew began to get out their dinghy, thinking that the vessel was struck. They saw clouds of smoke rise suddenly from the Halcyon and gathered that she had been hit. They feared she was sinking.

Two Fishing Craft Sunk by Mines.

Capt. Beak added that the German squadron came from the east, and this was the direction in which they steamed away. The last cruiser, he said, appeared to be dropping mines in her wake, and he added significantly:

"That must have been so, for the two drifters in the fleet afterward struck mines and sank."

The Halcyon after firing one shot turned and ran for safety, together with a torpedo boat which was not observed to fire.

Another eyewitness of the attack on the Halcyon was Skipper Peter F. Smith of the Inverness drifter Pit Gaveny.

"Shots fell all around the British warship," he said, "but the Germans were bad shots. She ought to have been sunk in a few minutes, but she steamed away and was soon out of sight in the mist.

"He first saw the German vessels east of Lowestoft, and they were eight or nine miles away from him when they opened fire. He was not very near to the Halcyon, but could just make her out. About 100 shots were fired, and the fight lasted about fifteen minutes. The noise, he said, was deafening, but in his opinion the Germans were no marksmen."

Kept Up Fire Ten Minutes.

LOWESTOFT, Nov. 3, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The fact that German warships were engaged in the fight today is testified to by the skipper of the steam drifter Boy Daniel. The skipper, however, saw no English vessels. He was about a cruiser's length from the nearest German ship, and when they began to fire a broadside toward land the concussion of the first shot smashed his wheel house window. The raiders kept up the fire for ten minutes and then steamed away in the direction whence they had come.

The drifter Girl Gracie reports that one of the German warships steamed through her nets and destroyed half of them.

The steam drifter Fraternal of Lowestoft was sunk by a mine about the time of the engagement. Five of her crew had been landed here. The drifter Copious of Yarmouth also was blown up by a mine. Her only survivor landed here.

BERLIN ADMITS RETREAT

But Says It Was Accomplished Without Any Losses.

CLAIMS PROGRESS AT YPRES

Reports Capture of 2,300 There, and of 1,000, with Guns, East of Soissons.

ALLIES ANNOUNCE GAINS

Say They Have Held Their Lines Everywhere and Advanced at Several Points.

AMSTERDAM, (via London,) Nov. 3.—The following official dispatch, issued in Berlin, has been received here:

A telegram from General Headquarters, dated Nov. 3 at noon, says that inundations south of Nieuport prevent all operations in this part of the country.

The water in places is as high as a full-grown man. Our troops have evacuated the inundated districts without loss of men, horses, or guns.

Our attacks on Ypres are making progress. More than 2,300 men, mostly English, have been captured, and also several machine guns.

West of Roye severe fighting has taken place, with great losses on both sides; but the situation is unchanged. In the village fight we lost several hundred in missing and two cannon.

Our attacks on the Aisne east of Soissons are successful, despite obstinate resistance. Our troops have occupied several strongly fortified positions beyond Chavonne and Soupir, capturing more than a thousand French, three cannon, and four machine guns.

Near the cathedral in Soissons the French have posted a heavy battery and made the steeple an observation post.

Between Verdun and Toul several French attacks have been repulsed. Troops of French soldiers were German overcoats and helmets.

In the Vosges, near Markirch, a French attack was repulsed and our troops began a counter-attack.

GENERAL GAINS FOR ALLIES.

Monday's Loss of Ground Near Vailly Apparently Retrieved Yesterday.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—General gains for the Allies on their left flank in Belgium and northern France, are chronicled in today's War Office bulletins. This bulletin was issued tonight:

The only advices received this evening concern the region at the northeast of Vailly, where we have counter-attacked and retaken the farm of Metz, in the region of the Four de Paris-St. Hubert and the Argonne, where a German attack has been repulsed and we have gained some ground.

The text of the afternoon official communication follows:

On our left wing the enemy seems to have completely abandoned the left bank of the Yser down stream from Dixmude, and reconnoissances by troops of the Allies undertaken on the highways in the inundated regions were successful in reoccupying points of passage across the river without great difficulty.

To the south of Dixmude and in the direction of Gheluwe our advance was particularly perceptible.

In the region to the north of the Lys, in spite of the determined attacks by the Germans in considerable force, our front was everywhere maintained or re-established by the end of the day.

Fresh attacks by the Germans on the environs of Arras and against Lihons and Le Quesnoy-en-Santerre resulted in failures.

On the centre, in the region of the Aisne, to the east of the forest of l'Aigle, we have made some progress. To the east of Vailly, according to the latest news, those of our troops who held the positions on the slopes of the plateaus to the north of the villages of Chavonne and Soupir had been compelled to draw back into the valley to the east of this location. We have maintained our positions at Amont on the right bank of the river.

There was violent cannonading during the day between Rheims and the Meuse as well as on the heights of the Meuse.

Further efforts on the part of the Germans in the forest of Argonne have been checked.

We have continued to make progress to the northwest of Pont-a-Mousson.

On our right wing there have been some engagements favorable to our arms along the River Seilla.

RUSE OF BELGIANS ENTRAPS GERMANS

Force Attacking Furnes Surprised and Cut to Pieces With Shrapnel.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

IN NORTHERN FRANCE, Monday, Nov. 2, (Dispatch to The London Chronicle.)—Once more the Belgian Army has given fresh proof of its valor against the armed might of Germany. Yesterday the Germans, recovering somewhat from the severe handling they had received from the Allies some days earlier, resumed the offensive. A German army established itself at a point midway between Middelkerke and Mariakerke, on the road leading to Ostend. The battle was fiercest at a point to the northeast of Furnes.

Leaving Nieuport on its right, a strong German force advanced in the direction of Ramscappelle and opened a long-range artillery fire upon Furnes. The Hôtal de Ville and the church tower served as admirable targets for the German gunners. The tower was shot away and the Hôtel de Ville was struck by several shells.

After two hours of heavy firing the German shells fell in Furnes with less and less frequency. The Germans had expended considerable artillery ammunition, and, although the public buildings in Furnes had been repeatedly hit, not a single Belgian soldier had been injured. The slackening of the German artillery fire was, as it proved, only a prelude to an infantry attack.

Up to this moment not a single Belgian cannon or rifle had replied, and the Germans no doubt concluded that Furnes and the country in its immediate front had been abandoned by the Allies. It proved a costly error. The Belgians prepared for delivering their counter stroke with great adroitness and coolness. A battery, which had reached Furnes toward the close of the bombardment, was sent forward in sections so that its arrival might escape the German's observation.

Meanwhile, in the advanced trenches to the west of Furnes, Belgian infantry with loaded rifles and well hidden from prying German eyes, awaited the coming of the foe. On came the Germans, swarming to the attack in dense formation. The Germans were allowed to approach within 1,500 yards of the Belgian trenches before the Belgian guns delivered their message of death. It was a complete surprise for the advancing Germans. The attacking columns fell by hundreds under the hail of shrapnel. They wavered, then broke and fled wildly for the all too scanty cover of the shallow ditches of the flat countryside. The Belgian shells again sought and found them.

It was the end of the German offensive for the day. The survivors of the shattered columns which had been launched against the hidden Belgian position did not halt until they regained Ramscappelle and the protection of the German artillery.

The Belgians, as the result of the day's fighting, reoccupied Ramscappelle, where the Germans abandoned many of their wounded.

BOMBS FAIL TO STOP REVIEW OF THE ALLIES

German Aviator Drops Them, Apparently Hoping to Kill King Albert and Poincare.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—A Central News dispatch from northern France, under date of Monday, says that a German aviator, skimming 5,000 feet above the Belgian town of Furnes, apparently with the knowledge that King Albert and President Poincaré were going to review the cavalry drawn up before the Hôtel de Ville, dropped several bombs, which, however, missed the square and did but slight damage a short distance away.

The King and the President arrived on the scene after the air craft had disappeared. Thereafter French and Belgian aeroplanes kept the sky clear of the enemy.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—A bombardment of Furnes, in Belgium, twenty-six miles southwest of Bruges, by the Germans, did not prevent the review there yesterday of the French and Belgian troops by President Poincaré, King Albert and Alexandre Millerand, the French War Minister.

While the shells of the German guns, apparently directed against the railroad station at Furnes, were exploding at frequent intervals, the President, King and War Minister were in the neighborhood of the Hôtel de Ville. There, to the strains of the "Marseillaise" and the "Brabanconne," the national airs of the two countries, which were given with much spirit, the soldiers of France and Belgium passed by. All the men displayed the greatest enthusiasm.

Later President Poincaré, Minister Millerand and Gen. Joffre had a long interview with the King, to whom the President expressed his fervent admiration for the Belgians and his best wishes on behalf of France. Before the review President Poincaré and his party paid their respects to Queen Elizabeth at the royal residence. On leaving Furnes the President passed the afternoon among the French troops operating on the Ypres front.

President Poincaré was in Dunkirk Sunday evening, where he saw Lord Kitchener, the British Minister of War and Premier Charles de Brocqueville of Belgium.

BELGIANS REPORT SUCCESS.

Tell of German Withdrawal from the Yser, with Heavy Losses.

HAVRE, (via Paris,) Nov. 3, 11:05 P. M.—The following communication from the Belgian General Staff to the Belgian Minister of War in Havre, was given out tonight:

The German troops continued yesterday and today to evacuate the left bank of the Yser, between Nieuport and Dixmude. Only a few detachments have been reported between Pervyse and the south of Spuyvenkerke. There seems to be no artillery left on this side of the river. No movement of troops has been reported on the right bank of the Yser.

From the bodies and arms abandoned on the ground evacuated by the enemy, and also from the statements made by prisoners, it may safely be concluded that the Twelfth and Thirteenth Reserve Army Corps have suffered much in the latest engagements on the Yser. The inactivity of these two corps during the last two days may be attributed to this fact.

PARIS, Nov. 3, 11:07 P. M.—The following official communication, dated Nov. 2, was given out here tonight:

On the front of the Thirteenth Reserve Army Corps the allied troops today directed a vigorous offensive. They came out at the same time from Dixmude, Knocke, and Noordschoote. Between Bixchoote and Zonnebeke the situation remains unchanged. The last two villages are occupied by the allied troops

The Thirty-seventh Landwehr Brigade is signaled between Poelcapelle and Zonnebeke. Further south the Twenty-seventh Reserve Army Corps occupies Becelaere and Gheluwe. On its left are the Sixth Bavarian Reserve Division and the Fifteenth Army Corps, which stretches out toward Hollebeke. Between this village and Warneton are the Sixth Bavarian Army Corps and the Twenty-sixth Infantry Division of the Thirteenth Corps.

INVASION HINGES ON BATTLE.

Paris Press Says the Yser Fight Will Decide Britain's Fate.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—A Paris dispatch to The Standard, dated Monday, says:

"The papers are not allowed to give any details to substantiate their belief, but more than one declares itself in a position to affirm that the Germans are hurriedly preparing to retreat, and may start falling back in force at any time. Particulars have already appeared in the London press of the different defense works thrown up by the enemy to enable them to clear out of Belgium in the best order possible, while telegrams have arrived here stating that similar preparations are being made on the eastern frontier and in Alsace, particularly near Strassburg.

"Some nervousness is observable here lest the discussion now in progress in England as to the probability of invasion should cause a falling off in the dispatch of fresh troops to the Continent. Even the Temps takes a considerable amount of trouble to demonstrate that the fate of Britain is being decided now in the battle of the Yser. The surest way to guarantee England's soil against danger, it says, is for the Allies to give the Germans a sound drubbing in the battle now in progress.

"Telegrams from Rome report that Italian military experts take the same view. They go further, and seem to think that all the talk now being indulged in by the German press about invading England has for its chief object the masking of some startling manoeuvre in another part of the field."

GERMANS QUIT NIEUPORT.

Evacuation Forced by the Flooding of the Town—Allies Pursue.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 3, (Dispatch to The London Daily Express.)—I understand that the Germans evacuated Nieuport today in panic after the Belgians had flooded the place.

The losses of the Germans were tremendous. Their army retreated in disorder toward Ostend and Blankenberghe. The Allies are pursuing them vigorously.

BAG GERMAN AEROPLANES.

French Bring Down Three Near Souain—Chase One Near Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—A German aeroplane today flew toward Paris as far as Coulommiers, 34 miles east of the capital. While a number of French aeroplanes went to meet it Gen. Gallieni was reviewing the aviation services of the intrenched camp. The General was much impressed by what he saw and expressed his satisfaction to the chiefs of the flying corps.

Three German aeroplanes were brought down yesterday in the Souain district.

Points of Chief Interest in the Western War Area

1. According to the bulletins of the French War Office, the Germans have completely abandoned their positions on the right bank of the Yser Canal, and the Allies have reoccupied points of passage across it. An official statement from Berlin admits the withdrawal of the German troops from the territory flooded by the Belgians.
2. A perceptible advance of the Allies was recorded to the south of Dixmude.
3. Renewed attacks by the Germans were repulsed, the French official report said, on the outskirts of Arras.
4. The Allies reported progress in the region of the Aisne, to the east of the forest of l'Aigle.
5. The loss of some allied positions to the east of Vailly was admitted in the afternoon bulletin of the French War Office, but the night bulletin announced the recapture of one point of vantage in the same region.
6. German attacks were repulsed, and some ground was gained by the Allies in the forest of Argonne.
7. Continuous progress by the French was reported from the northwest of Pont-a-Mousson.

ENGLAND APPOINTS 8 NEW GENERALS

Colonels Get Higher Rank as a Reward for Gallant Conduct in the Field.

ONE HEAD OF FLYING CORPS

All Had Won Fame in Previous Wars and Were Mentioned in Gen. French's Dispatches.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—It is announced that the following eight Colonels have been promoted to be Major Generals as a reward for gallant conduct in the field:

Sir David Henderson, Henry F. M. Wilson, James A. L. Haldane, Henry S. Horne, Frederick D. V. Wing, Hubert de la P. Gough, Edward S. Bulfin, and Aylmer Hunter-Weston.

The President of France has bestowed the Cross of an Officer of the Legion of Honor on nineteen British officers and the Cross of the Chevalier on 100 others for gallantry during the operations between Aug. 21 and 30.

Sir David Henderson, who is in charge of the Royal Flying Corps, has been mentioned in terms of highest praise in the reports of Field Marshal French. In the report made public on Sept. 10, Field Marshal French said:

"I wish particularly to bring to your Lordship's notice the admirable work done by the British Flying Corps under Sir David Henderson. Their skill, energy and perseverance have been beyond all praise."

In the report made public on Oct. 13, Field Marshal French said:

"Sir David Henderson and the Royal Flying Corps under his command have again proved their incalculable value."

Sir David Henderson, who is 52 years old, joined the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders in August, 1883, and was promoted to Capta.n in 1890.

Major Gen. Hubert de la Poer Gough, who was the Colonel in command at the Carragh Camp in March of this year when war threatened in Ireland, was one of the leaders of the officers who openly refused to fight against Ulster. He was the head of the Third Cavalry Brigade, nearly two-thirds of whose officers declined to serve, should the Irish question lead to war. It was Col. Gough to whom Col. Seely, Secretary of War, gave a written guarantee that army officers would not be ordered to fight against the Ulster Unionists. Field Marshal French and Gen. Ewart, Adjutant General of the forces, tendered their resignations because of the steps then taken by the Cabinet. Their resignations were withdrawn when Col. Seely retired.

Major Gen. Gough is 44 years old. He joined the Sixteenth Lancers in 1889, and served in the Tirah expedition in 1897 and 1898. He served through the South African war, and was in command of the Sixteenth Lancers from 1907 to 1911. He comes of Waterford, Ireland, stock, and is the son of the late Gen. Sir Charles Gough, a famous veteran of Indian, Bhutan, and Afghan wars.

In his report made public on Oct. 18, mentioning Major Gen. Gough, Field Marshal French said:

"The undoubted superiority which our cavalry has attained over that of the enemy has been due to the skill with which they have turned to best account the qualities inherent in the splendid troops they command."

RETREATING TO BRUSSELS?

Belgian Airmen Say Germans Have Begun the Movement.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

NORTH OF FRANCE, Nov. 3, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—An important aerial reconnaissance was carried out today by Belgian airmen.

The exact details are wanting, but it appears that they were able to observe in the German lines a distinct movement of retreating in the direction of Brussels.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROTTERDAM, Nov. 3, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—The Echo Belge announces that a remarkable proclamation has been issued by the Germans in Liége, stating that the inhabitants need not be astonished if many corps of Germans return from the front, for the reason that typhoid and cholera have broken out among the allied troops.

I learned yesterday that several trainloads of foodstuffs were prevented from leaving Antwerp for Germany, but no reason could then be ascertained. It is now reported that a Belgian volunteer blew up the bridge at Berchem and stopped the trains.

ROUND ROBIN IN BLOOD BY JAPANESE SAILORS

Ask Permission to Dash Into Kaio-Chau Harbor—Governor Reported Wounded.

TOKIO, Wednesday, Nov. 4.—A round robbin written in blood and signed by 500 bluejackets requesting permission to dash into the bay and capture Capt. Meyer-Waldeck, the German Governor of Kiao-Chau has been refused by the officers of the Japanese fleet.

A pall of smoke envelopes Tsing-Tau. The sailors are driving their last mines, while the Austrian cruiser Kaiserin Elizabeth shells them continuously.

Soldiers on the Shantung Railway complain that they have been attacked by Chinese civilians.

A special dispatch received from Tsinan, capital of the Province of Shantung, China, says that Capt. Meyer-Waldeck, the German Governor of Kiao-Cahu, has been wounded in the fighting in the vicinity of Tsing-Tau between the Germans and the British and Japanese forces.

USING UP WAR MUNITIONS.

French Figure Germans Will Run Short at Present Rate.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—The comparative lack of change in the general military situation finds an echo in the French press, whose experts devote themselves mainly to calculations regarding the amount of munitions possessed by Germany, which they consider must soon be exhausted.

The Temps says:

"We are using munitions only on the western front; the Germans on the west and east, and they also sent recently a great quantity of cartridges to the Turks. In this exhausting struggle the German magazines will be emptied before ours. The military situation generally is good."

Col. Rousset, in the Liberté, asks:

"Why are the Germans so obsessed by the idea of geographical points? Of what value are Calais and Boulogne if the armies defending them remain intact? Surely their fury against these objectives is indicative of the disorganized state of the plans of their General Staff. Napoleon knew that even capitals were useless gains unless their seizure was preceded by the defeat of the field armies."

The Intransigéant, however, offers a new explanation of the northwestern battle. It says:

"The allied position toward Ypres is comparable to that of the Germans near Roye, both angle in defending lines. The Germans doubtless fear our attempting successfully in the north a wedge attack which they failed to drive home near Roye. They are seeking, in fact, to break the keystone of the allied offensive."

INVITED TO PRISON CAMPS.

GENEVA, (via Paris,) Nov. 3.—News has reached here that Germany, in order to avoid sinister rumors, is giving every facility to the consuls of the United States and other neutral nations to visit the camps in which the war prisoners are interned.

The object is to show that the prisoners are well treated; and this, it is asserted, has been proved to be true. The American consuls are making reports on the subject to their Government.

RHEIMS AGAIN BOMBARDED.

Violent Shell Fire Resumed by the Germans, Bordeaux Hears.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—The Germans resumed their bombardment of the city of Rheims with great violence on Sunday and Monday, according to a dispatch to the Temps from Bordeaux.

BRITISH LINE SHIFTED BY RARE STRATEGY

Transfer of Force from the Aisne to the North Accomplished with Marvelous Skill.

GERMANS LED TO SLAUGHTER

Col. Swinton in English Report Praises the Valor of Volunteers Who March to Death Singing.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Another eyewitness account from the battle front in France and Belgium, written as previously by Col. E. D. Swinton of the Intelligence Department of the British General Staff, was given out today by the Official Press Bureau. It bears the date of Oct. 28, and is as follows:

"Oct. 25, 1914.—Before the narrative of the progress of the fighting near the Franco-Belgian frontier subsequent to Oct. 20 is continued, a brief description will be given of the movement of a certain fraction of our troops from the former line, facing north and east of Paris, to the present position, facing east in the northwest corner of France.

"By this movement a portion of the British Army has been enabled to join hands with an incoming and growing stream of reinforcements.

"In its broad lines the transfer of strength by one combatant during the course of a great battle, which has just been accomplished, is somewhat remarkable.

"What was implied in the actual withdrawal from contact with the enemy along the Aisne will be appreciated when the conditions under which we were then situated are recalled. In places the two lines were not 100 yards apart, and for us no movement was possible during the daylight. In some of the trenches which were under an enfilade fire our men had to sit all day long close under the traverses— as are called those mounds of earth which stretch like partitions at intervals across a trench so as to give protection from a lateral fire.

"Even when there was cover such as that afforded by depressions or sunken roads on a hillside below and behind our firing line any attempt was met by fierce bursts of machine-gun and shell fire.

"The men in the firing line were on duty for twenty-four hours at a time and brought rations and water with them when they came on duty, for none could be sent up to them during the day. Even the wounded could not be removed until dark. A preliminary retirement of the units was, therefore, carried out gradually under cover of darkness.

"That the Germans only once opened fire upon them while so engaged was due to the care with which the operation was conducted, and also probably to the fact that the enemy was so accustomed to the recurrence of sounds made by the reliefs of men in the firing line and by the movement of supply trains below that they were misled as to what actually was taking place.

"What the operation amounted to on our part was the evacuation of the trenches under carefully made arrangements with the French, who had to take our place in the trenches, the retirement to the river below—in many cases down a steep slope, the crossing of the river over noisy plank roadways, of floating or repaired bridges—which were mostly commanded by the enemy's guns —and the climb up to the top of the plateau on the south side.

"The rest of the move was a complicated feat of transportation which put across some of the lines of communication of our Allies. In spite of the various difficulties the whole strategic operation of transferring large numbers of troops from the Aisne was carried out without loss and practically without hitch."

In describing one fierce fight Col. Swinton recounts the following incident, which occurred during a night attack by the Germans:

"At night the Germans renewed their efforts unsuccessfully in this quarter. At one point they tried a ruse which no longer is new. As they came up in a solid line, two deep, they shouted out: 'Don't fire; we are the Coldstream Guards!' Our men, however, are getting used to tricks of this kind, and the only result was that they allowed the enemy's infantry to approach quite close before they swept them down with magazine fire.

"Apart from the 400 dead found near our lines in the centre, our patrols afterward discovered some 300 dead further out in front of our left, killed by our artillery.

"On our left the 23d was a bad day for the Germans. Advancing in our turn, we drove them from some of the trenches out of which they had turned us on the previous evening, and captured 150 prisoners and released some of our men whom they had taken. As the Germans retreated our guns did great execution. They afterward made five desperate assaults on our trenches, advancing in mass and singing 'Die Wacht Am Rhein' as they came on.

"Each assault easily was beaten back, our troops waiting until the enemy came within very close range before they opened fire with their rifles and Maxims, causing terrible havoc in the solid masses.

"During the fighting in this quarter on the night of the 22d and the 23d the German losses again were extremely heavy. We took over 600 prisoners and picked up 1,500 dead, killed on the latter day alone.

"Much of the slaughter was due to the point blank magazine fire of our men against the German assaults, while our field guns and howitzers, working in perfect combination, did their share when the enemy were repulsed. As they fell back they were subjected to a shower of shrapnel; when they sought shelter in villages or buildings they were shattered and driven out by highly explosive shells, and then again caught by shrapnel as they came into the open.

"The troops to suffer so severely were mostly of the Twenty-third Corps, one of their new formations. Certainly the way their advance was conducted showed a lack of training and faults in leading which almost the superhuman bravery of the soldiers could not counterbalance. It was a holocaust.

"The spectacle of these devoted men chanting a national song as they marched to certain death was inspiring. It was at the same time pitiable, and if any proof be needed that uptrained valor alone cannot gain the day in modern war the advance of the Twenty-third German Corps on Oct. 23 must assuredly furnished it.

"The struggle has been of the most severe and sanguinary nature, and it seems that success will favor that side which is possessed of the most endurance or can bring up and fling fresh forces into the fray.

"Though we have undoubtedly inflicted immense loss upon the enemy, they so far have been able to fill up the gaps in their ranks and to return to the charge, and we have suffered heavily ourselves.

"One feature of the tactics now employed has been the use of cavalry in dismounted action, for on both sides many of the mounted troops are fighting in the trenches alongside the infantry. Armored motor cars, armed with Maxims and light quick-firing guns, also have played a successful part on our side, especially helping to eject the enemy lurking in villages and isolated buildings. Against such parties the combined action of the quick-firer against snipers in buildings, and the Maxim against them when they are driven into the open, is most efficacious."

ORDERS GERMAN SHIP TO LEAVE HONOLULU

United States Sets a Day When the Geier Must be Interned or Face Her Foes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Acting Secretary of State Lansing announced today that he had served notice on the little German cruiser Geier, repairing since Oct. 15, in the harbor of Honolulu, that she must leave the harbor before a fixed date or be interned until the end of the war. The communication mentioned the date, but so as to give the little cruiser a run for her life, Mr. Lansing refused to make this public.

Off shore from Honolulu the Japanese battleship Hizen and a Japanese cruiser, either one of which could overwhelm the Geier in battle, are keeping watch for the little German craft. If the Geier tries to get away she will undoubtedly attempt to steal past the Japanese ships in the dark. It is possible, however, that her Captain may simply ask the American authorities to intern his ship.

The Geier, which is described as an unprotected cruiser, is really little more than a gunboat. She is of 1,300 tons, while the Hizen is at least ten times that tonnage. The Hizen was built by the Cramps at Philadelphia and was originally a Russian ship. She was injured in a sally from Port Arthur during the seige and fell into the hands of the Japanese when Port Arthur surrendered. She has since been remodeled.

HONOLULU, Nov. 3.—Two Japanese aviators making exhibition flights here today were stopped by the police after their first flight. A conference followed immediately, attended by Major Gen. W. H. Carter, Commander of the Department of Hawaii; Rear Admiral C. B. T. Moore, commandant of the naval station at Pearl Harbor; Gov. Lucius E. Pinkham, and other officials. None would discuss the conference.

The German gunboat Geier still is in the harbor under repair, and the Japanese battleship Hizen and the cruiser Asama are in the offing. It was surmised the possibilty of sending or receiving signals might have caused the action.

BOMBS TOO LATE FOR KAISER.

British Aviator Drops Them in Thielt Just After His Departure.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

NORTH OF FRANCE, Nov. 3, (Dispatch to The London Times.)—A member of the British Royal Flying Corps, armed with a number of bombs, on Sunday circled over Thielt, which had been for some days the home of the Headquarters Staff of the German Army, although he did not know it. The Kaiser had left barely a quarter of an hour before.

Dressed in a green uniform Wilhelm II. arrived by motor car at Thielt at 11:30 A. M. accompanied by his staff of about forty officers, whose brilliant uniforms showed no signs of the ravages of the fierce warfare taking place a few miles away. He was warmly received by the soldiers as he went to the casino, where he dined with the officers.

My informant was an eyewitness of the arrival and departure. He said the Kaiser looked particularly severe and seemed to be feeling the effects of his cares and responsibilities.

He left Thielt at 1:30 P. M., and a quarter of an hour later the British monoplanes arrived and dropped bombs within a short distance of the spot where he had been receiving the hospitality of the Headquarters Staff.

Two German soldiers were killed and a considerable amount of damage was done to property.

British Vessels to Take Them Through Channel and Mine Fields.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The new Admiralty mine regulations for the North Sea will cause a diversion of all vessels carrying food supplies for the relief of the people of Belgium through the English Channel, but as several of these relief ships expected to take this route there will be comparatively little delay in the delivery of the supplies.

These relief steamers will be escorted through the mine fields by English ships, and the English authorities have promised every assistance to expedite their passage.

HEAR GERMAN FLEET IS OUT TO GIVE BATTLE

Eight Warships Said to Have Sailed from Kiel—Rumors of Fight Reach London.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Reports are current in well-informed circles of a naval battle in the North Sea, but with what result is yet unknown.

The German fleet is said to have come out with the object of making an attack before the process of mine-laying, which the British planned to have completed by Thursday, should have restricted the German naval offensive.

DOVER, England, (Via London,) Wednesday, Nov. 4.—The report is being circulated that the German fleet has come out from its base.

It is also reported from Dunkirk that four battleships and four cruisers have put to sea from Kiel.

ENGLAND HOPES WE WILL PROTEST

Question of Mining Open Waters by Germany Raised Squarely by Closing of the North Sea.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The British Government, through the embassy in Washington, has informed the United States of the situation in the North Sea which has necessitated its virtual closing. It is understood that the communication was simply a transmission of the Admiralty's statement which has been given to the press.

This quite effectively puts officially before the United States England's charge against the Germans of indiscriminate illegal mine-laying, and possible action by America is awaited with interest. It is hoped by many here that Washington will make a protest against mining the open seas and interfering with neutral commerce, which England considers highly illegal.

It is not believed here that Washington is likely to protest against Great Britain's action, although it virtually blockades the North Sea. There is no indication yet of any disposition on the part of Norway, Sweden, and other countries which are even more vitally affected than America to protest to England.

Whatever the causes of England's action may be, the net result is in one way quite advantageous to this country. It narrows the lanes of ocean traffic, as all shipping must pass through the narrow Straits of Dover, thus simplifying the problem of inspecting and searching for contraband ships bound to neutral countries.

Under the Admiralty's warning it is still possible for neutral ships to proceed to the North Sea, but it is not likely that any will unless they are regular blockade runners, particularly as it will be virtually impossible for ships to obtain insurance. Thus England obtains supervision of neutral shipping which might reach Germany, as she controls the English Channel, the Strait of Gibraltar, and the Suez Canal, the last two being the only other routes of shipment for cargoes destined for Germany through neutral countries.

CZAR SAYS GERMANY MUST BE CRUSHED

No Peace, He Tells Merchants, Till Russians Reach the Heart of the Fatherland.

AGAIN GOES TO THE FRONT

His Armies Continue to Advance in East Prussia and Poland—Kaiser's Estate Occupied.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 3. — Emperor Nicholas today left for the front, accompanied by Gen. Soukhomlinoff, the Minister of War.

An official communication from the Russian General Staff, made public tonight, says:

On the East Prussian front the Germans everywhere have adopted the offensive. Our troops have advanced in some districts, and in one place have taken two guns, a searchlight, and a number of prisoners.

Beyond the Vistula to the northwest of Politza, our troops have advanced without any considerable fighting and have occupied Schadek, Lask, and Rosprza. On the front from Radosczice and Kielce the enemy is retiring in the direction of Vloszczow.

At Andrejew, further to the south of Kielce, the Austrians made a more stubborn stand, but were repulsed along the greater part of the front.

They lost three cannon, five machine guns, and 1,500 prisoners. They maintain their positions only on the lower part of Opatovka River.

On the lower San River our troops continue to cross to the other side. They have taken the village of Malce and a fortified position further to the north of Razwadow. They have captured two guns and some mitrailleuses. In the region of Lisko fierce fighting continues. In that section we have taken 250 prisoners.

There is no important change on the rest of the front.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—A dispatch from Moscow to Reuter's Telegram Company says that Emperor Nicholas, in telegraphing his greeting to the Merchants' Association, on the occasion of the opening of its session, said:

"Peace only is possible when Russia reaches the heart of German soil. This is the unanimous opinion of all Muscovites. Any apprehension of peace being concluded before the enemy is completely crushed is unfounded."

The Star publishes a dispatch from its Petrograd correspondent in which he says that the Russians are now securely established inside the East Prussian frontier.

Emperor William's thirty miles of barbed wire fences around his big game preserve at Rominten, the correspondent goes on, are now in the possession of his enemies.

The correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company at Amsterdam sends the following:

"A telegram from Budapest states that in the engagement fought near Turka, Galicia, the Austrians took 2,700 prisoners, among whom were numerous Tartars and Mongols."

PARIS, Nov. 3.—In its official announcement this evening the General Staff says:

"The Germans continue to retreat. The Russians occupy Lenczyca, Lodz, Opozno, and Ozarow.

"In Galicia a Russian success is reported near Lester and Madvornoca. Numbers of prisoners have been taken as well as war material.

"The Russians have advanced to the west of Vladizlavow (East Prussia)."

BERLIN, Nov. 3, (by Wireless Telegraph to Sayville, N. Y.)—The fighting in Poland continues, but no details of recent engagements are as yet available, according to reports reaching here from Vienna. It is not even known as yet whether these engagements have assumed important proportions. The Austrians are still pressing forward in the region between Stari-Sambor and Turka.

The Austrian advance in the Maova region in Servia is today not meeting with strong resistance. The Austrians have crossed the Sabao-Gesnica Railroad and have stormed Sabao.

The information given out to the press from official quarters today includes the following:

"The correspondent of the London Times at Warsaw, after visiting the battlefields of Poland, declares that the Germans have not taken revenge for the Russian atrocities in East Prussia."

PRZEMYSL'S FALL EXPECTED.

News in Athens That Russian Capture of Austrian Fortress Is Near.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Nov. 3, (Dispatch to The London Daily Telegraph.)—The Russian Minister has communicated to me a telegram which he has just received announcing as imminent the fall of the Austrian fortress of Przemysl.

eral points, but were compelled to retire.

"The Russians suffered losses through the energetic resistance of the Turkish troops."

LONDON, Nov. 3.—A Reuter dispatch from Tiflis, capital of the Russian Government of the same name in Transcaucasia, says:

"It is announced that the Emperor has ordered the Caucasian army to cross the frontier and attack the Turks."

SUEZ CANAL IS THREATENED.

German Officers with a Camel Corps—Agitators Sent to Egypt.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Monday, Nov. 2. (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—Lieut. Gen. Sir John Maxwell today announced that the British Government had charged him with the military control of Egypt, and declared the country to be under martial law.

Official advices from Turkey seem to show that a Turkish campaign against Egypt has been definitely decided upon. On the Turkish-Egyptian frontier a camel corps numbering nearly 1,000 is being concentrated.

The staff comprises ten German officers, and the point of attack appears to be Ismailia, on the west side of the Suez Canal, forty-six miles south of Port Said.

Nine German officers, with a force of non-commissioned officers and marines, are busily engaged in laying mines in Alexandretta Harbor and sailing vessels are being employed in the transport of dynamite to the Syrian coast nearest to Egypt.

Various agitators are being sent to Egypt to stir up the Mussuimans. The natives' attitude is apparently one of indifference.

Bedouin chiefs throughout Egypt were summoned to Cairo yesterday, when they promised assistance in the defense of Egypt.

DIE NOT ABSOLUTELY CAST.

Still a Remote Chance of Peace Despite All the Fighting.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Strange as it may seem, the British Government is not yet absolutely certain that Turkey is in the war beyond recall.

There is still a slight hope that Turkey will repudiate the action of the warships, meet the demands of the Allies, and remain out of the war.

It appears that there is a strong peace faction in the Turkish Cabinet, which is endeavoring to overthrow Enver Pasha and the belligerent clique that has caused the crisis.

It is hoped that the demonstrations of British power will strengthen the hands of the peace party at Constantinople by impressing the war-seeking faction with the fact that England is not a negligible quantity in the situation.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—The majority of the French newspapers affect to believe that the Turkish attacks on Russia were due to an attempt by German officers to force the hand of the Constantinople Government, which had not authorized such action, but ex-Foreign Minister Pichon, in an editorial article in the Petit Journal, calls attention to the fact that the Turkish aggression follows exactly parallel lines to the Germans' behavior at the commencement of hostilities. He says:

"In falsely asserting that Russia was guilty of the first offensive the Turks are following the example of their German masters, who alleged falsely that a French aeroplane had bombarded Nuremberg and that Russians had crossed the Prussian frontier.

"Even Turkey is not likely to dare suggest that the threatened cavalry move against Egypt is due to a British invasion of the Sinai peninsula."

The Petit Journal, like the rest of the press, comments with gratification on the tranquillity of Morocco, as indicated in a Tempt dispatch describing the favorable reception by a large gathering of natives of Gen. Lyautey's speech in the Rabat market place. The similar absence of trouble in India is also favorably mentioned.

TEXT OF TURKISH "APOLOGY."

Russia Accused of Starting Hostilities—Sazonoff's Reply.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—A Reuter dispatch from Petrograd says:

"The telegram from the Grand Vizier was read to Foreign Minister Sazonoff by the Turkish Chargé d'Affaires. It said:

"'Convey to M. Sazonoff our deep regret at the rupture of the good relations between the two powers, which has been caused by the hostile acts of the Russian fleet. You can assure the Imperial Russian Government that the Sublime Porte will not fail to seek an opportune solution of this question, and will take all measures to prevent a repetition of such incidents.

"'You can declare to M. Sazonoff that the Ottoman Government has decided to forbid the Turkish fleet to enter the Black Sea. We hope in turn near our littoral.

"'In the interests of both countries, I firmly hope that the Imperial Russian Government will show in this affair the same spirit of conciliation.'

"Foreign Minister Sazonoff, in his reply, formally denied that the Russian fleet had been the first to undertake hostilities, and expressed the belief that it was now too late to enter into pourparlers of any kind. M. Sazonoff added that only if Turkey had immediately expelled all German military and naval officers in Turkey would it have been possible to enter into negotiations with a view to providing satisfaction for those who had suffered by the treacherous acts of aggression on the Russian coast.

"As the declaration of the Turkish Chargé altered nothing in the existing situation, the Russian Foreign Minister informed him that he would receive his passports on Monday."

RUSSIAN MOSLEMS LOYAL.

Join with Others in Message to Czar—Turks Being Arrested.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 3.—Telegrams received here from Tiflis, the capital and administrative seat of the Caucasus, report great demonstrations of all ranks and nationalities before the palace of the Governor-General, all the manifestants shouting their allegiance to Russia.

A regiment of 5,000 Armenian cavalry, formed on the first evidence of Turkey's hostility toward Russia, is being augmented continually by large numbers of new recruits.

At a special session of the Tiflis City Council, Russian, Armenian, Mohammedan, and other leaders voted solidly in union with the Nationalists against the traitorous onslaught of the Turks against the common fatherland."

PARIS, Nov. 3.—The Havas Agency has received a dispatch from its correspondent at Baku saying that 10,000 Mohammedans assembled in the great mosque there to give expression to their adherence to Russia.

Among the crowd were a number of the clergy and other notables. After prayers for the health of the Emperor and victory over all the enemies of the great Russian fatherland, the manifestants drew up an address to the local Governor requesting him to convey to Emperor Nicholas their homage and assurances of their desire to sacrifice their property and even their lives in the defense of Russia against her old and new enemies.

HEARS EGYPT IS DISAFFECTED.

Rome Paper Quoted in Berlin — Turkish Invasion Reported.

BERLIN, Nov. 3, (by Wireless Telegraph to Sayville, L. I.)—The Mattino, published in Rome, says it has received reports from Egypt to the effect that the sentiment of the local population is strongly anti-British and that the Indian troops in Egypt sympathize with the natives.

Reports reaching Berlin from Athens state that 15,000 Turkish troops are already in Egypt and that the Turkish soldiers marching against Russia are alleged to number 300,000.

The foregoing information was given to the press in Berlin today.

CZAR ISSUES A MANIFESTO.

Says Turkey's Ill-Advised Action Will Only Hasten Her End.

LONDON, Nov. 3. — An Imperial manifesto on the outbreak of the war with Turkey has been issued in Petrograd, according to the correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company in the Russian capital. It reads as follows:

"In the sterile struggle against Russia, Germany and Austria have incited Turkey into taking arms against this Empire. Immediately after the treacherous attack of the Turkish fleet the Russian Ambassador received orders to leave Turkey.

"'Russia will receive this fresh aggression on the part of the ancient persecutor of the Christian religion and the Slav peoples with tranquillity and confidence in God. The valiant armies of Russia will triumph once again, not for the first time, over the Turkish hordes. Once again we will know how to punish the insolent foe of our Fatherland.

"Our confidence is unshakable that the ill-advised intervention of Turkey will only hasten the fatal end of that Empire, and will open the way for the Russian settlement of problems on the Black Sea coast which have been handed down by our ancestors."

BERLIN IS WATCHING.

Has a Report That British Cruisers Sunk a Greek Torpedo Boat.

BERLIN, Nov. 3, (by Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—The news from the Levant is being followed here with the greatest interest. Although war has not actually been declared, according to Constantinople advices fighting has begun on the caucasus frontier. The Russians are described as the aggressors.

According to information given out to the press today British cruisers have sent a Greek torpedo boat to the bottom, mistaking her for a Turkish vessel. This incident occurred near Tondos.

Other information given out by the official bureau is as follows:

"Greece has resolved to maintain her neutrality, and Bulgaria is not taking a hostile attitude.

"The Belgian Minister of War said to the correspondent of The Tribuna of Rome that the Belgian Army was in a wretched condition, and that the men were exhausted and disorganized.

"The German Empress returned yesterday to Berlin from a visit to a hospital in the East. She spent some time in the Socialist lazaretto at Koenigsberg."

PERSIANS ATTACK GERMANS.

Consul Assaulted and Archives of Turkish Consulate Sent to Russia.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The German Consul at Tabriz, Persia, was assaulted and took refuge in the American Consulate with other panic-stricken German subjects, according to a message to the American Government late today from Minister Caldwell at Teheran.

American Consul Paddock at Tabriz is extending temporary refuge and protection to the German subjects, but the Russians in Persia are threatening to arrest and expel all Germans.

The Persian authorities have gathered up the archives of the Turkish Consulate at Tabris and sent them to Petrograd.

SERVIA BREAKS WITH PORTE.

Minister at Constantinople Asks for His Passports.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—"A Constantinople dispatch states that Servia today severed diplomatic relations with Turkey, and the Servian Minister asked for his passports," says the Rome correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company.

TURKEY BARS FLIGHT OF HOSTILE ALIENS

Special Train for French and British Canceled by the Minister of War.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Until definite guarantees are given by Russia, England, and France for the protection of Turkish subjects the Ottoman Empire will hold practically as hostages all subjects of the Triple Entente powers within its territory. This was revealed in a cablegram from American Ambassador Morgenthau to the State Department here, dated Constantinople last Sunday.

Assurances already had been given by the British Ambassador that Turks in Egypt, as well as the British Empire generally, would be permitted to leave if they desired. The dispatch indicated, however, that the American Ambassador, who is co-operating with the Italian Ambassador, in charge of Russian interests, was confronted with a delicate task. A special train which was to have left Sunday night with panic-stricken British and French subjects was detained by order of the Turkish Minister of War. Mr. Morgenthau said he hoped to persuade the War Office to release the train on Monday.

The cablegram from the American Ambassador revealed that the British, French, and Russian Ambassadors finally got away from Constantinople on a special train at midnight Sunday.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—A telegram dated Nov. 2 was received today by the Official Press Bureau from the British Consul at Mohammerah, Persia, stating that the Consul at Basra, (Bassora,) Asiatic Turkey, and a number of British merchants were being detained by the Turks.

GANGRENE GERM DISCOVERED.

New Serum Injected Into Wounded on Battlefield Saves Many Lives.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—A microbe causing gangrene to develop in bullet and shrapnel wounds has been discovered by Drs. James Scarlett and Georges Desjardine of the American ambulance service.

Previously initial cultures all were impure, leading to the belief of scientists that the disease was caused, not by a single germ, but by a combination of germs. After much research and experimentation on horses and guinea pigs a single bacillus has been discovered and isolated, and the serum is now being prepared by Dr. Henri Weinberg of the Pasteur Institute.

The discovery is expected in medical circles to have world-wide importance. The serum is being injected into patients on the battlefield in the early stages of infection, obviating amputations and preventing a great loss of life.

NEW ITALIAN CABINET.

Salandra Retains Old Post of Premier and Minister of Interior.

ROME, Nov. 3.—According to the latest reports in circulation here, a new Cabinet has virtually been formed, with Signor Salandra retaining his old post as Premier and Minister of the Interior.

Baron Sidney Sonnino is credited with having accepted the portfolio of Foreign Affairs, Paolo Carcano that of Minister of the Treasury, and Vittorio E. Orlando that of Minister of Justice.

The other portfolios, it is said, will be retained by the men who held them under Signor Salandra.

Won't Attempt an Islamic Movement in Libya, Berlin Hears.

Therefore there is no cause for Italian uneasiness regarding Tripoli, it is added.

ITALY FORBIDS FOOD EXPORTS.

Cuts Off Rice, Rye, and Potatoes from Germany and Austria.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—A Rome dispatch to The Star states that a royal decree published there prohibits the exportation of rice, rye, and potatoes to Germany and Austria.

THE WAR SITUATION.

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.
(An Associate Editor of The Army and Navy Journal.)

Last night's news that the French were fighting on the Seille River, on the Lorraine border, means more than a local advantage. It means that the Allies have been able to hold back the Germans all along the lines, and still have troops left over to push back the German southern flank. In view of the deadlock along the line in the north it seems very probable that the Allies will resort to an advance through Lorraine in an effort to bring such pressure on the German flank that they will have to fall back and evacuate French territory.

The French military authorities in their essays on a possible war with Germany have nearly always provided for a counterstroke by way of the Saar River. Consequently it is but natural that the present commanders should give importance to an effort to accomplish this strategic move. The entry of Great Britain into the war has changed the conditions, in that the navy and her troops make for a strong force on the Allies' northern flank. Also the fire of the shallow-draught gunboats enables the Allies to keep the Germans back from the coast, so that they always have a route open for an advance in this field. It is not improbable that when the Allies decide to assume the aggressive they will make demonstrations both along the North Sea coast and against the German forces on the southern flank. The development of weakness on either flank would then lead to pressing the campaign in that field.

Yesterday's fighting consisted in the completion of the discomfiture of the German forces that had crossed the Yser. The Germans are delivering attacks near Dixmude, Ypres, Arras, Albert, Ailly, Rheims, and in the Argonne district. In short, they are attacking all along the line. This has invariably been their policy when attempting some important strategic move. By spreading out the enemy's attention all along the line they hope to divert it from the critical point. Their plan has not developed sufficiently as yet to show their real object, but it is undoubtedly based on the arrival at the western front of the reinforcements furnished by the new class of reservists that is now being sent to the front.

When Germany called into training at the beginning of the war the boys of 19 and 19 she gained from these services a force of over 1,100,000 untrained men. These recruits have been put through a strenuous course of drills, marches, and target practice, and are now, after three months, sufficiently trained to serve at the front, provided they can be under the oversight of older, experienced men. Germany's large body of trained soldiers enables her to absorb in her army without damage an influx of raw troops that would destroy the fighting power of a volunteer force. The reported arrival of six new corps to reinforce the German armies may be the cause for this resumption of aggressive tactics. As pointed out in this column yesterday, however, it will require an addition of at least ten corps to enable the Germans to approximate the numerical strength of the Allies.

A study of the Turkish situation indicates the great advantage that the Allies have gained through the delay in Turkey's entry into the war. Great Britain has been able to draw in nearly all of her regular army from all parts of the world, and to replace them with her territorial forces. These latter correspond to our National Guard, and have now had three months to get their bearings in active operations. They know how to shoot and have a good basic training in tactics. In case fighting should be necessary they can be depended upon to give a good account of themselves. It is known that Great Britain has held a large force of Indian troops at Suez and in Egypt, and that she has also sent troops there from the British Isles. It is also reported that one Canadian contingent was sent to this destination. There is little question of Great Britain's ability to withstand any move that Turkish subjects may make against the Suez Canal.

France, too, has had a similar chance to prepare her troops for service in Africa in case of need. Russia has an even greater advantage. Her trouble is not to find men for her armies, but to find food and ammunition for the vast numbers that she sends to the front. She can put in the field enough men to carry on the campaign against Germany and Austria, and in addition send against the Ottoman Empire a force strong enough to overcome any opposition. It was by a campaign of this nature that Russia captured Kars in 1878, and added the Armenian Province to her Trans-Caucasian possessions. While the main Russian Army was fighting its way southward past Plevna and the Balkan Mountains, a second army was advancing against the Turkish Empire on its eastern border. While the western army advanced to the gates of Constantinople and dictated the Treaty of San Stefano, the eastern army made its successful campaign that secured permanent gains of territory for the Russian Empire. Russia now has every road and every resource to Asia Minor carefully studied, and in case of the continuation of hostilities with Turkey she should be able to make a rapid invasion of Turkish territory.

The weakness of the Turkish military strength lies in the fact that the State is built, like the empires of old, upon the fear of military force. A serious defeat will weaken the allegiance of the subject peoples and will make initial reverses fatal to the Turkish campaign.

INDIANS REMAINING LOYAL TO BRITAIN

Manifesto by the Nizam—Aga Khan Says the Germans Coerced Turkey.

BOMBAY, Nov. 3.—The Nizam of Hyderabad, the largest Mohammedan State in India, has issued a manifesto in which he says:

"It is the bounden duty of the Mohammedans of India to adhere to the British. There is no country in the world where Mohammedans enjoy such liberty as they do in India."

The Bombay Chronicle, in an editorial article headed "Suicide," says:

"The folly and rashness of those in whose hands the destiny of Turkey is placed have plunged her in a vortex from which she cannot emerge with any shred of status as a nation."

The Advocate of India says that Turkey has been betrayed by a coterie of officials from whom the Indian Mohammedans are politically free. Turkey, it is added, has been made the tool of a country whose ideals are not those which have given India peace, power, and freedom.

DELHI, Nov. 3.—A number of influential Mohammedans have held a meeting at Quetta at which there was adopted a resolution setting forth that Turkey had been decoyed by Germany into a breach of neutrality, and that the British Government could rely upon the fidelity of the Baluchistan Mohammedans.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—His Highness the Aga Kahn, who is known as the spiritual head of the Mohammedans in India, East Africa, and Central Asia, has sent a cablegram from London addressed to the Moslems in India and other British dominions in which he expresses his deep sorrow that Turkey has joined hands with Germany in the war. In this message the Aga Kahn says:

"This is not the free will of the Sultan, but the will of the German officers and other non-Moslems who have forced him to do their bidding."

He declares further that Turkey has now lost her position as the trustee of Islam. "She has drawn her sword in an unholy cause, and the duty of the Moslems today is to remain loyal and faithful to their temporal and secular allegiance."

A dispatch from Delhi to Reuter's Telegram Company says that in view of the outbreak of Turkey it has been authoritatively announced throughout India that no religious question is involved, and that the Mohammedan holy palaces in Arabia are immune from attack by the British naval and military forces provided the pilgrims from India to these places are not interfered with.

At the request of Great Britain, the dispatch adds, France and Russia have given similar assurances.

Persian Alliance Again Denied.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 3.—The Persian Legation here declares that no alliance exists between Turkey and Persia. All rumors of such an alliance in the Russian and foreign press, it is stated, are without foundation.

GOLF FOR BELGIAN FUND--- BULLDOG SHOW

GOLFERS PLAY FOR BELGIANS' RELIEF

Apawamis Club Members and Employes Contribute $600 to Fund.

Nearly $600 was collected for the Belgian Fund at the Apawamis Club yesterday, and all of the employes of the club contributed. The waiters in the clubhouse gave $45, the caddie boys, by means of nickel and dime contributions, got together $24, and the grass cutters mustered $12. The remainder of the fund was supplied by the various members. The total of $600 was the largest amount collected among all of the clubs of the metropolitan district. Instead of a medal handicap, the members elected to compete in a handicap match against bogey, and there was a tie between Seney Plummer and Martin Carey, each of whom finished 6 up on the "Colonel." More than 150 players took part. The results follow:

Martin Carey, 6 up; Seney Plummer, 6 up; R. C. Hunt, 4 up; Charles M. Sheafe, Jr., 3 up; Prescott Metcalf, 2 up; Harold L. Downey, 2 up; C. H. Connor, 1 up; S. Battelle, 1 up; Norton Squire, 1 down; R. P. Waldron, 2 down; F. S. Keeler, 2 down; William H. Wallace, Jr., 3 down; J. S. Armstrong, 3 down.

A special handicap, on account of the holiday, was run off at Apawamis. Prescott Metcalf offered a prize for the best net score for those handicapped at 9 strokes or less, and this was won by Seney Plummer with a card of 79,—6—73. In the class for those ranked at more than 9, Martin Carey topped the list with a card of 87,—15—72. In the sweepstakes the winner was Seney Plummer, with a score similar to that returned in the handicap. The summary:

The Garden's Next Boxing Show.

Middleweights will have an inning at Madison Square Garden next Monday night when Mike Gibbons, considered by boxing experts the peer of his class, and Young Mike Donovan box in a ten-round contest at 158 pounds ringside. There is a dearth in the East of boxers in this class, and in selecting Donovan for Gibbons, Manager Jimmy Johnston has picked the foremost of the lot of the local talent and one of the most formidable of the budding class. The fact that Donovan has confidence in his ability to beat Gibbons is an assurance that the local man will give the St. Paul wizard a tough argument. It was through Donovan's solicitation that Johnston made the match. Donovan succeeded where Gibbons failed in stopping Jack Denning in three rounds, the latter going ten rounds with Gibbons on two occasions, holding him to a draw in one of the contests.

The middleweight bout will be part of a double attraction. Kid Lewis and Phil Bloom will be in the other ten-round bout. It will be Lewis's first appearance in America, and his wins over Shugrue and the Australian champions, Mehegan and McCoy, stamp him as a top notcher.

Knight Wins at Billiards.

Jack Knight defeated George Scott by the close score of 251 to 246 in last night's match of the English billiard tournament at Doyle's Academy, Forty-second Street. It was one of the closest match games ever held in the academy. Tied at 248, both men missed several easy shots before Knight finally pocketed the red ball and won. It was the second match of the tournament and Scott's defeat eliminated him from the play. Knight shot a brilliant game and made one run of 21.

The game ran to ninety-six innings and Knight made an average of 2 57-97 and Scott 2 54-96.

INFERIOR QUALITY IN BULLDOG SHOW

Goswell Monarch, Long-Bodied Animal, Adjudged Best at Palace.

Goswell Monarch, a big brindle bulldog, three years old, and owned by John F. Collins of Brooklyn, was adjudged the best animal in the collection that contested for the prizes at the annual show of the Bulldog Club of America at the Grand Central Palace in this city yesterday. The best of the opposite sex was declared to be Champion Florence Bhunda, owned by the Inwall Kennels of Williston, L. I.

The award caused no surprise after Goswell Monarch had been placed first in the limit, open, and winners' classes. He was probably the largest and heaviest dog in the show, of a beautiful brindle color, with a very black muzzle, massive bone, an intelligent look, amiable disposition, well-wrinkled face, and fine eye. His body was very long and joined somewhat bluntly at both shoulders and loins, with comparatively little taper. The standard reads: "The back should be short and strong, very broad at the shoulders, and comparatively narrow at the loins." His type was distinctly different from most bulldogs which have won their way to championship honors. But he was the type that suited Joseph A. Buchanan of Ambler, Penn., who acted as judge of the animals in his first appearance in New York City in that capacity. His selection was alleged to be due to a compromise in bulldog politics, for bulldog breeders have the reputation of being the politicians of dogdom.

None of the most famous dogs of the breed in the country were benched in the show, and the management was confessedly disappointed at the meagre entry list as well as the quality of the dogs, which they had anticipated would have been of the best ever shown in this country. But the quality of the dogs was below the standard for a specialty show, and in type and character the bitches far outshone the dogs benched. That the presence of the best was not attracted was possibly due to the fact that exhibitors were not acquainted with the type of dog which Mr. Buchanan most fancied, as he has acted as judge mainly at local shows in the vicinity of Philadelphia. He was very deliberate in the ring, apparently very painstaking, and was consistent in his work. But he had ideas as to type that did not wholly coincide with those of some of the breeders hereabouts. So some of his awards did not completely satisfy breeders who could not agree with him in a fancy for the long-bodied dog that seemed his fancy. On the other hand, breeders who are beaten are hardly ever satisfied with the awards of a judge who does not place their dogs in the blue-ribbon class. But, generally speaking, they do fancy the Crissie Denton and Oak Nana type, to speak of two dogs in the show entered only for specials.

One of the sharpest competitions was in the class for American-bred bitches under forty pounds, from which champions were barred. Mr. Buchanan had the largest and most closely matched class of the lot in this division to pass upon, and it was close to an hour before he awarded the blue to Drewstone Kennels' Gaby Deslys, which was shown in the ring by Mrs. Drew. Hockley Heartsease was placed second and Moston Belle third, and this placing seemed to meet with the approval of the critics who lined the ring and took the deepest interest in the award in this class, as it was a long step toward championship honors later. The awards:

HAS AN OPTION ON CUBS.

Weeghman Has Federals' Permission to Buy National Club.

Walter S. Ward, Secretary of the Brooklyn Federal League Club, admitted yesterday that Charles Weeghman of Chicago had an option on the Chicago Club of the National League, and he also said that Weeghman had the permission of the other Federal League Club owners in negotiating for the Cubs. Weeghman has had business relations with Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati, owner of the Cubs, for many years, and if the National League can come to terms with the Federal League over some kind of a settlement, it is likely that baseball will be at peace again next Summer.

Mr. Ward's admission that Weeghman had an option on the Cubs comes as a big surprise because when the Federal League was in this city recently both Weeghman and President Gilmore denied that they had had a conference with C. P. Taft over the purchase of a major league team.

Mr. Ward also stated that it was understood by all the Federal League Club owners that Weeghman could come to no agreement with organized ball which did not meet with their unanimous approval.

It is understood that the Federal League is so closely organized in a business way that the baseball property in the various cities and some of the valuable players are held by the Federal League as a holding company and not as individual clubs. This arrangement was made so as to prevent any club breaking away without the approval of the others.

It is also intimated among baseball men that if the Federal League amalgamates with organized baseball, St. Louis will be another of the cities where the Feds will take over a major league club. It is stated that after last season's experience Robert T. Hedges is anxious to get rid of his holdings in the Browns. As St. Louis can support only two clubs at most, the Federals will try to purchase the Browns.

The Brooklyn Federal League Club has signed Marty Walsh, who pitched last year with the Bridgeport Club of the Eastern Association. Walsh is a brother of Big Ed. Walsh of the Chicago White Sox and was one of the leading pitchers of the Eastern Association last season.

TRINITY DEFEATS N. Y. U.---FORDHAM ELEVEN DOWNS GETTYSBURG

TRINITY TOO FAST FOR N. Y. U ELEVEN

Hartford Boys Beat New York Team by Score of 19 to 3 at Ohio Field.

With a lightning fast back field that seldom failed to carry the ball for decided gains during the early part of the game, Trinity College of Hartford, Conn., defeated New York University yesterday on Ohio Field by the score of 19 to 3 in the annual election day game. The crowd was the largest seen on Ohio Field in several years, filling grand stand and bleachers to overflowing, many finding only standing room along the side lines. The Violet eleven, which had been undefeated this season, took a decided slump, showing up poorly in tackling and line play and failed entirely to come up to expectations.

In decided contrast to former games, the Violet line appeared somewhat weak, letting the visitors' back-field men through for gains time after time. After the first part of the second quarter the New York linesmen took quite a brace, however, holding the Hartford team to downs and taking the ball down the field in short savage rushes, but always unable to get close enough to the goal line to rush the ball over for a touchdown.

Trinity opened up with a rush. On Kinney's kick-off, Huntley ran it back for twenty yards beofre he was tackled, but his teammates failed to advance the ball against the stubborn defense put up by the visitors, and Huntley was forced to punt. This became Trinity's best work. With a series of end runs, line plunges, and a five-yard penalty against the New Yorkers for holding, the Hartford backfield men drove the ball ahead, until Castator got around end for the first touchdown. Kinney kicked the goal, and the first seven points were rolled up within five minutes of the first play. The second score came as the result of a fumble by McNally, the New York right half back, the Trinity back field getting into action and taking the leather down the field in a series of dashes which averaged seven yards. Smith finally getting over for the second touchdown. Kinney failed to kick the goal.

In the latter part of the second half New York looked dangerous. After losing the ball on a penalty and regaining it on a penalty on Trinity, the Heights men rushed it down the field, a double pass and a forward, Huntley to McNally, netting two first downs. With the ball on the twenty-yard line, Trinity held and New York tied a kick, Cusack dropping the leather over with ease. The goal from the field took away New York's only chance of a touchdown.

The last score came with only three minutes to play. After a punting duel, in which Kinney had slightly the better of it, and a series of plays in which the ball slowly neared the Hartford goal line, Cole broke through on a double pass, making thirty-five yards through the New York defense and putting the ball safely across for the last score.

Huntley and Bernstein starred for New York Triversity, the former running the ball back in the second quarter for fifty yards before the only Trinity man between him and the goal line downed him. Bernstein also played a star game, getting through the Hartford line several times and nailing the man with the ball for a loss. For Trinity, Smith, Cole, and Castator did the best work, the latter being especially strong with the Violet tacklers to get. Time after time he gained his distance on plunges through the New York line. The whole Trinity back field was exceptionally fast.

Little open play was used, Trinity trying only one forward pass, which was smeared by a New York man. The Violet players fared better, succeeding with one out of the two attempts, the first, Huntley to McNally, netting ten yards and the second being intercepted by Kinney. Trinity was successful with double passes behind the line, which were also used by New York, but to a slighter extent. Both teams made some of their best gains on the double pass work. Taken all in all, the game was one in which the line men were fairly equal. Trinity showed up better, however, in back-field work, and with superior team play was sure of victory.

As a result of yesterday's defeat a large number of the New York University students are particularly poor in pocket today. The student body had counted on a fairly even break, and were surprised by the game put up by the men from Hartford. The game was marked by the small number of substitutions, only three men being changed. Line-up and summary:

'Poly Prep Beats Boys' High.

Poly Prep scored a victory over the Boys' High football eleven yesterday afternoon at Washington Park, Brooklyn, by the score of 16 to 6. This is the first time that the Boys' High lads have scored since 1912, and in spite of their defeat by the Poly Prep team they found much cause for rejoicing in the dispelling of their jinx. A lucky field goal by Pendleton which hit one of the uprights and bounced over the crossbar, started the scoring for the Poly eleven. Pendleton followed with a touchdown after a 45-yard run, and Quinn scored a touchdown on a forward pass from Bronder. Bloch won fame by scoring the Boys' High touchdown on a forward pass from Sherman. The line-up and summary:

Injured Quarter Back May Die.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Nov. 3.—Robert Layfield, the injured Johns Hopkins quarter back, was removed in a special car this afternoon to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore for expert treatment. Layfield, it is believed, had his back broken in a football game here. His condition is worse, and it is probable that he cannot recover.

COMMERCE BEATS MORRIS.

Galligan's Goal Gives His Team Victory by Score of 7 to 6.

By the narrow margin of one point the High School of Commerce defeated Morris High in football at the Polo Grounds yesterday. The score was 7 to 6, Galligan's goal, following Commerce's touchdown, winning the struggle, when Erwig failed to boot the ball over the crossbar after the Morris touchdown. More than 8,000 boys and girls from both schools kept up a deafening noise during the game with cheers and songs, horns and cowbells. There was enough vocal enthusiasm to make the students of both schools hoarse for a week.

Dick Rudolph of the Boston Braves, a Morris alumnus, started the game by placing the leather in position to kick off.

The teams were evenly matched, but toward the end the Morris team started a series of line rushes which swept the Commerce line before them. In Galligan Commerce had a kicker who was far better than Weinheimer, and Commerce profited much in the kicking duel.

Commerce made its touchdown on a spectacular play in the third period. Manley, standing on the Commerce 10-yard line, started to shoot a forward pass to Rosenberger. Schneidor, the Commerce end, broke through the scrimmage and caught the ball neatly, then raced ninety yards down the field for a touchdown. Galligan kicked the goal.

In the last period Morris completely outrushed the Commerce team. Morris, by the fine line plunging of Erwig, Manley, Collette, and Braufman, carried the ball forty yards down the field, where Commerce made a stubborn stand on the three-yard line and took the ball. Galligan then punted from behind his line and the spiral went only twenty yards, Morris again having the ball on the twenty-yard line. The assault on the Commerce line began again, and the plunges of Erwig and Braufman brought the leather within striking distance, Erwig taking the ball over on a sweep around right end.

With the score 7 to 6, Erwig attempted to kick the goal from an easy angle. The goal would mean a tie, a miss would mean defeat. It was a trying moment for Erwig. His kick missed the upright by about three inches, and Morris was defeated.

Just before the game finished Commerce carried the ball up the field and Galligan missed a try for a field goal from the 35-yard line.

Commerce came close to a score in the second period. Weinheimer, kicking from behind his goal line, booted a punt to Wittner, who made a fair catch on the 53-yard line. Galligan's try for a field goal from placement, but the kick was short.

In the same period Morris got away with a clever forward pass, Manley to Weinheimer, which netted nearly forty yards. Commerce's line was steady, however, and Erwig was forced to attempt a kick from placement, which failed. The line-up and summary:

Commerce.	Position.	Morris.

TRICK WINS FOR CLINTON.

Syracuse Formation, Neatly Executed, Beats Stuyvesant, 7 to 6.

A trick formation play borrowed from the tactics of the Syracuse University team gave the De Witt Clinton football team a victory over the Stuyvesant eleven yesterday afternoon in their annual gridiron battle on Manhattan Field by the score of 7 to 6. The play worked to perfection and before the baffled Stuyvesant lads could recover their senses Raimondo had dodged the field and raced twenty-two yards for a touchdown. Quirk's goal from a touchdown threw the scales in favor of the Red and Black.

Clinton's tally came in the second period. With the ball in midfield, Power threw a forward pass to Zelzer, which netted twenty yards and placed the Clinton ball on their opponents' twenty-two yard line. Stuyvesant then held on the play, but was not ready for the next move on Clinton's part. With a rapid shift of the line to the right, Clinton worked the Syracuse hole play with the result that Raimondo at left end, getting the ball on the delayed pass, found a clear field to the Stuyvesant goal line.

Stuyvesant came back with a rush in the third period. Dillon, Berglind and Sampson worked the ball to the five-yard line where Clinton held for downs. Katz punted out, but two forward passes, Berglind to Dillon, and Sampson to Berglind, placed the ball on Clinton's eleven yard line. Berglind went around right end for five yards, and Dillon took the ball to the one-yard line. McGuinness went over through centre, Maurer missed the goal from a touchdown which would have tied the score. The line-up and summary:

Clinton.	Position.	Stuyvesant.

Daly Whipping Army Into Shape.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 3.—The Army football squad continued preparations for the Notre Dame game today in one of the stiffest workouts of the season. Head Coach Daly worked the men through a rough forty-five-minute scrimmage. With particular stress being laid on the defense for the forward pass formations the Westerners are expected to flash in their attack. All the injured were back in the game except Wheelwright. The big fellow was in togs, but did only the lightest kind of work. Oliphant also returned to the squad. The former Purdue star was shifted to the scrub back field, his regular berth going to Hoge and later to Coffin. Oliphant's play today was anything but flattering. Goodman rested today and Bradley started at the pivotal job. He later gave way to Weems, who was moved over from the scrubs. Merrilat's tackling today was deadly.

PRINCETON PLAYS PUT ON BY HARVARD

Football Work at Cambridge All in Preparation for Saturday's Game.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 3.—The football work in the stadium by Harvard today was all directed toward getting ready for the Princeton game. The 'Varsity which played as it did yesterday, and as it doubtless will start the game, worked for a long time on its offense, which it put in soft scrimmage against the 'Varsity substitutes. With this drill over the scrubs were sent against the regulars, putting on the Princeton style of offense. There was no tackling in this scrimmage, but the defenses for all the plays were carefully laid and will be strengthened during the next two days.

Jimmy Knox, who has seen all of Princeton's games is helping the coaches this week at Cambridge. Victor Kennard, Harvard's old drop kicker and the winner of the 1908 game at New Haven, arrived at Cambridge today and worked a little with Mahan and the other drop kickers. Mahan did some beautiful punting this afternoon with no wind to bother him, but his drop-kicks were not so good as his punts. He kicked one field foal from the 25-yard line, and then, after the scrubs had broken through on another, the old Andover kicker got the ball away.

Brickley did no kicking today, although he was on the ground, and ran a good speed about the field. Soucy, who was hurt in his first game at end, was on the field on crutches and hardly looked like a man that can play any more football this year. In a day or two it is said that Mercer's hand will be right for him to get back to work. This will help out the substitute string for the Yale game. Besides Kennard, other visiting coaches were Percy Wendell, the 1912 Captain, and Harry Gardner, a former quarter back.

PRINCETON'S HARD GRIND.

Final Preparations Started for Contest with Harvard.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 3.—The Princeton football squad got the hardest kind of a workout on University Field this afternoon, starting the grind of actual preparation for the Harvard game. The 'Varsity had a long session at both offense and defense, and there was a remarkable improvement in both departments. The first team scored twice on the scrubs in half an hour.

Brown's long gain, when he caught a forward pass that had been partially intercepted by a scrub back, led up to the first score. Ames made the actual score, diving across the line without much opposition. The second tally fell to Highley, who made a pretty catch behind the goal line of a forward pass from Driggs.

After these scores the 'Varsity obtained the ball within the 20-yard zone and was told to rush it over. There was more snap and drive in the attack than has been in evidence since the Dartmouth game, and the 'Varsity forwards, brushing the scrub line aside, opened up holes for the backs to gallop through.

Moore and Dickerman were at half back positions, and both showed up well. Dickerman has improved greatly since Saturday and picked his holes quickly and surely. Driggs played at full back, and his line plunging was unusually effective. Glick, Reddy Trenkmann, and Law did not get into the play. Dave Tibbott, whose toe gave the team three points in the Dartmouth game, had a long practice at drop kicking and put the ball over with regularity from all distances up to the 30-yard mark.

SEVERE TASK FOR YALE.

Eli Eleven Driven Hard in Both Offensive and Defensive.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 3.—Both in offensive and defensive football, the Yale eleven was driven hard today in its opening scrimmage work of the week. Although the regulars plowed through the scrubs for two touchdowns, they were twice held, once relinquishing the ball on downs and the second time punting on a third down. Knowles and Waite made the touchdowns. On the defense the 'Varsity prevented the scrubs from penetrating to their goal, but could not avert ground losses in repeated scrub experiments with the forward pass. The second team gained sixty yards before it was finally halted.

Twenty minutes brisk football of the Hinkey model kept both elevens on tiptoe, and little Waite, who started the practice ahead of Ainsworth at left half back, awoke the scrubs by slipping through their entire team after taking the kick-off at the 'Varsity ten-yard line. He was finally toppled from behind at the scrub thirty-yard line. The scrub defense broke up three line attacks, and Guernsey punted behind the scrub goal on fourth down.

For the scrubs, Wiser slipped around right end for twenty yards and on short gains took the ball to midfield, where the 'Varsity line held for down. On the first scrimmage Knowles ripped through right tackle for a forty-yard gain, but the 'Varsity were again held and compelled to give up the ball on downs five yards from the scrub goal. Tommy Cornell, who replaced Waite, ran Wiser's kick back fifteen yards, and on the next play smashed through the scrub tackle to the three-yard line. Knowles took the ball over.

From their twenty-yard line the scrubs, using the forward pass, advanced to the 'Varsity thirty-yard line, gaining thirty yards on a clever heave directly over the centre of the line. On the fourth down, Wiser's try for a field goal failed. Here the 'Varsity showed its prettiest line attack, and on five runs just outside tackle scored, Waite taking the ball over. Le Gore and Higginbotham were not on the field. Capt. Talbott and Aleck Wilson were in uniform and had light work.

GETTYSBURG VANQUISHED.

Fordham Trounces Pennsylvanians, 21 to 2.

Although scored upon for the first time in the last four games, the Fordham football team kept its string of victories unbroken yesterday by defeating the husky Gettysburg eleven at Fordham Field by a score of 21 to 2. The two points credited to the visitors came late in the first period, when Marks threw Dunn for a safety behind his own goal line. Gettysburg looked dangerous on several other occasions, but any approach toward the Maroon danger mark was met by an impenetrable defense. Although outplayed during the first half, the Fordham eleven introduced a continuous round of trick plays during the last two quarters that completely baffled the Pennsylvanians.

Fordham started off with a rush, scoring the first touchdown in less than three minutes of play. Recovering the ball on the kick-off, Regan and Dunn advanced on three charges from the thirty-five yard mark to within six yards of the Gettysburg goal. From here Dunn charged around the Blue and Gold left flank for the first score of the game.

Gettysburg again chose to receive, and living up to predictions, carried the light Fordham line down the field to within eight yards of the goal line. At this point Stratten, whose battering ram tactics had been the main factor in Gettysburg's advance, fumbled, and Regan recovered for Fordham. It was on the next play that Dunn was charged with the safety, but after the ball had been brought out to the twenty-yard line the Fordham warriors advanced out of danger. For the remainder of the half the pigskin passed from one team to another, Fordham losing a chance to score when Yule fumbled a forward pass behind the goal line.

The second half saw a complete change in the Fordham method of attack, and switching around to the new Canadian system, the Bronx collegians tore off gain after gain. Getting the ball at midfield, when Stratten punted to Morscold the Maroon back field advanced for a second touchdown on five rushes, Dunn accounted for twenty yards on two around end runs, while Dunn and Yule on their lateral passes, worked the visitors to a standstill, Yule making the touchdown.

Fordham's last touchdown was made possible when Regan recovered another Dunn fumble in midfield on the first play of the last period. Alternating with Dunn he advanced to the twenty-yard line, from where he broke through right tackle, and evading the whole battlefield eleven, romped over the goal line. Capt. "Bud" Wyman kicked his first goals, having his record fourteen successful tries without one failure so far this season. The closing minutes saw Fordham represented by eight substitutes, and it looked as if the scrubs would also score on Gettysburg, the game ending with Fordham in possession of the ball, fifteen yards from the Pennsylvanian's line.

Watchung Pack Runs 14 Miles.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Nov. 3.—The holiday run of the Watchung Hunt Club covered a distance of about fourteen miles, in which an unusually large field took part. The hounds were met at Dog Tavern at 9:30 o'clock, and they led the field a lively pace to Farwood, then on to Henry Farm, where they were cast in for the second time, going across the Scudder, Gallagher, and Nelson estates, and checking again at Goodman's crossing. At this point twenty-five jumps were visible from the roadway. Miss Mary F. Baker of New York lost her mount at a post and rail fence, but quickly remounted and finished. Those who finished were R. C. Finch, M. D. H.; H. A. Bourne, S. S. Hollis, Miss Mary F. Baker, Mrs. Gertrude Maitlach, H. L. Finch, Col. C. E. S. Bellows, R. H. Towner, J. J. O'Donohue, Mayor H. W. Evans of Westfield, A. C. Fox, S. D. French, and Huntsman Harrison.

Monmouth County Hounds Out.

Twenty scarlet-coated riders followed the Monmouth County Hounds yesterday over the New Jersey hunting country. In the absence of Mr. Collier the riders were led by Howard L. Borden, the acting Master. The hounds were cast on Timlin track and the scent led over some very stiff timber to the Ellwood Farm, where each man took his own line, being led by H. L. Herbert and Mr. Borden, who fenced side by side to the end of the check. After a mile over the roads the hounds were thrown in on the Sattler homestead. The pace was fast and the pack led through Caits Neck and the Tinton Falls country, where the riders took the ditches, hedges, and post and rails within view of the many occupants of the automobiles, giving them a fine view of the fencing.

The run was a successful one and enjoyed by the members of the hunt. Among those who finished were H. L. Borden, Acting Master; H. L. Herbert, Charles F. Hart, Herbert Straus, W. Struthers Jones, Charles F. Hunt, Jr., W. Strothers Jones, Jr., Thomas Fields, Walter McClure, Josephy Clancy, W. Stonebridge, and Miss Hughes.

AUTO RACERS IN PERIL AT BRIGHTON

De Palma Brothers Have Narrow Escape in Thrilling Ten-Mile Contest.

Ralph de Palma, the automobile driver, lived up to his reputation yesterday at the Brighton Beach track, when his resourcefulness as a racing pilot and pluck averted what might have resulted in a serious and possibly fatal accident. It was one of the most sensational escapes witnessed on a local track in several years, and aroused nearly 10,000 excited spectators to a state of enthusiasm that was equaled only by the tense fear and suspense that immediately preceded it.

The incident occurred in the third event on the programme staged by the "Matty" Mathews Auto Racing Association. Ralph de Palma and his brother, John de Palma, were driving Mercedes cars. The track at the paddock turn was covered with loose dirt, and it was noticed that every time John de Palma reached this spot his car swerved badly. After covering five miles of the race, which was a ten-mile event, John de Palma was leading his brother by about twenty-five yards, both driving at a speed of more than sixty miles an hour. John's racing car struck the soft spot and nearly upset. For a time the driver was unable to control his machine. It rocked and swerved from one side of the track to the other and suddenly cut across the track directly in front of his brother's car.

A collision appeared inevitable, when Ralph de Palma took a firm grip on his steering wheel and turned his car toward the outside of the track. As he flashed past his brother's car the wheels of his own machine just grazed those of the first racer. Ralph's car was heading straight for the fence when another quick and desperate twist of the wheel brought the car from the danger zone and the supreme effort righted it.

Meanwhile the crowd was momentarily expecting a crash. A wave of relief followed the clever driving of Ralph, and when John succeeded in gaining control of his car a mighty cheer went up, which was renewed each time Ralph passed the grand stand. In the forty-mile race which followed, John de Palma withdrew when second to his brother owing to the increasing darkness, which made it difficult for the spectators to distinguish the different cars on the track.

It was de Palmas' day. Ralph won four races, including the forty-mile event, the feature of the day, and was then in the handicap, while John de Palma finished second to his brother in two races. Ralph de Palma drove his four-cylinder Mercedes, and won in each event with ease. The first race he drew the finish fine, beating his brother by about five yards. Fast time was made in every race, especially in the ten-mile handicap, when Ralph de Palma, starting from scratch, finished third. His time was 7 minutes 57 seconds.

After Ralph de Palma won the first two short races, Le Cane, in a Chevrolet, won the handicap race, receiving a start of 40 seconds. Jessop, in a second Chevrolet, with 45 seconds' start, was second, and Ralph de Palma third. The latter gradually overhauled the big handicap cars, but the Chevrolet racers showed unexpected speed and led at the finish by a good margin.

The long-distance race, which was scheduled for fifty miles, was reduced to forty miles owing to darkness. Ralph de Palma opened up a big lead in the first ten miles, with his brother John leading the Mercer, with Morton at the wheel. The latter went off the track for temporary repairs in the twenty-first mile, and John de Palma increased his lead to more than a half a mile.

When the Mercer reappeared on the track Morton sent it along at full speed, and at the thirty-first mile was again on even terms with the six-cylinder Mercedes. John de Palma slowed down and, after driving another mile, Morton made no attempt to catch the fast-speeding Mercedes, with Ralph de Palma at the wheel, and contented himself with second place. The Chevrolet cars were third and fourth, respectively. Ralph de Palma covered forty miles in 37 minutes 27 2-5 seconds. The summary:

Class E.—Non-Stock; Under 300 Cubic Inches; 10 Miles—Won by Mercedes. (Ralph de Palma;) Mercer, (Morton,) second; Chevrolet, (J. Le Cane,) third. Time—9:53 2-5.

Class E.—Non-Stock; Under 450 Cubic Inches; 10 Miles—Won by Mercedes, (Ralph de Palma;) Mercedes, (John de Palma,) second; Mercer, (Morton,) third. Time—9:04.

Class D.—Non-Stock; Free for All; 10 Miles—Won by Mercedes, (Ralph de Palma;) Mercedes, (John de Palma,) second; Benz, 120, (Steinereich,) third. Time—8:21 1-5.

Class E.—Free for All Handicap; 10 Miles—Won by Chevrolet, (Le Cane,) 40 seconds; Chevrolet, (Jessop,) 45 seconds, second; Mercedes, (Ralph de Palma,) scratch, third. Time—9:53.

Class D.—Free for All; 40 Miles—Won by Mercedes, (Ralph de Palma;) Mercer, (Morton,) second; Chevrolet, (Le Cane,) third; Chevrolet, (Jessop,) fourth. Time—37:27 2-5.

Run of Richmond Hounds.

A delightful run was enjoyed by members of the Richmond County Hounds yesterday, in a drag hunt in which twenty-six members participated. The start was made at the Country Club at Dongan Hills, where the kennels are located. From that point there was a run over a trail which took them across Norman Walker's farm. There was a check there and a throw-in at Sprokk's Meadows across to the Poor House woods, where the hounds were again checked. The next throw-in was at Taylor's, the hounds running fast to and through the La Fourette estate to Fresh Kills Vale, about seventeen miles in all. The run was a spirited one, as the hounds were fast and the trail good for them to follow. Two or three of the riders came croppers on the run, but no one was injured and all were able to finish. Among those who had mounts were Frank M. Patterson, M. F. H., Victor McQuade, C. C. Ely, Capt. Frank Phipps, C. S. A., Capt Hunter Platt, U. S. A., Mrs. Ralph Monnell, Miss Betty Stettinus, Charles H. Mills, James Butler, Jr., Dr. and Mrs. D. P. Macguire, Mrs. Frank Hughes, and Ben Elliman.

MANUAL SCORES ON FLUKE.

Gets One Touchdown, but Loses to Erasmus, 13 to 7.

Erasmus Hall had a comparatively easy time with Manual Training High School in their annual football game at Ebbets Field yesterday, and the dark blue team would not have scored had it not been for a "fluke," in which the Erasmus players showed themselves woefully ignorant of the rules of the game. The score was 13 to 7.

Manual's touchdown was secured when Weller kicked over the Erasmus goal line at the start of the second half and Caminez fell on the ball back of the line. Several Erasmus players had an opportunity to fall on the ball, but failed to do so, apparently thinking that when the ball went over the goal line it became dead and was automatically made a touchback. As all the Manual players were on side when the ball was kicked, any of them had the right to take the ball and the referee decided that it was a legal touchdown.

After getting this lucky score, Manual showed a flash of brilliant play, and after the kick-off, carried the ball down to within a half yard of the Erasmus goal line, but were held there for downs. The biggest part of the distance to the goal was made on a thirty-yard forward pass from Floyd Egan, who was sent in just to make the pass and then immediately taken out, to Weller. This pass put the ball on Erasmus's four-yard line, but Manual couldn't carry it over.

On straight football, the Erasmus team far outclassed their opponents. They made their first touchdown within the first three minutes of play on a series of straight line plunges and a couple of long runs by Olsop and Thompkins. Olson made one run of 50 yards to the goal line, but the referee declared that he stepped off side and the ball was sent back to the 22-yard line. From there, Olson made another end run, which brought the ball to Manual's three-yard line. After three unsuccessful attempts, Olson finally carried the ball over the goal on a plunge through the line.

Manual's lucky touchdown at the start of the second half evened up the score at 7 to 7, but Erasmus got another touchdown in the last quarter. Using straight football all the way they carried the ball almost the entire length of the field. The line-up:

Erasmus.	Position.	Manual.

The Chelsea Football Club of the Metropolitan League had two games on hand for yesterday. In the morning at Prospect Park Manual Training High School was encountered, the result being a tie at 1 to 1. Johnston was the first to score for Chelsea, but Gillen saved the day for Manual, shooting the goal that tied the game before half time. Neither side tallied in the second period, the play being very fast.

The State League team of the Bay Ridge Football Club was defeated by Chelsea by the score of 4 goals to 3, after taking a 2 to 1 lead in the first half. Johnston was the first to score for Chelsea, and then Kelly, McDonald, and Krueger each shot a goal for Bay Ridge in the order named. Chelsea braced up after the restart, and goals by D. Agar and Blue evened the score. The winning goal was shot by Devers from a beautiful pass by Turner.

The Clan MacDonalds defeated the Brooklyn Celtics at Marquette Oval in Brooklyn by the score of 2 goals to 1. Lever of the MacDonalds shot the only goal obtained in the first half. After ends had been changed D. Ross made the clansmen 2 up. Two minutes from the finish last year's cup tie finalists, who are still in the A. F. A. cup tie this year, saved themselves from a whitewash through a timely shot on the part of O'Halloran.

PASSENGERS SILENT ON OLYMPIC'S TRIP

Charles M. Schwab Only One Allowed to Leave the Ship at Lough Swilly.

OTHERS LAND AT BELFAST

Told Not to Talk of Delay—Britishers Hasten from Ship to Recruiting Office.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BELFAST, Nov. 3.—Two hundred passengers, chiefly Canadian volunteers, landed at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the Olympic. Each one approached refused an interview relative to incidents on the thirteen days' voyage. Their lips, they said, were sealed.

"We had a splendid passage," said one. "What more could you wish to know?"

Asked if the delay in Lough Swilly was not rather monotonous, the reply came, "Oh, no. We had a glorious time. Plenty of music, plenty of games, and jolly good company."

The majority of passengers crossed to England and Scotland tonight. Sixty-six of the Olympic's passengers were Britishers from the United States, who, after landing, promptly visited the central recruiting depot at Belfast, the City Hall, in a body and enlisted in Kitchener's army, afterward being drafted to the Victoria military barracks. Every one has seen previous military service. One man speaks seven languages. Another, Private Condon, has the Victoria Cross.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The only passenger who has reached London to date from the Olympic is Charles M. Schwab. Mr. Schwab, when seen by a correspondent of THE TIMES, definitely refused to say anything about the nature of his hasty trip to Europe, except to deny that he had been traveling under the name of Alexander McDonald. This error arose, Mr. Schwab said, from the fact that a clerk in his office of that name engaged his passage for him while he was resting at Hot Springs, Va. Mr. Schwab expects to return to America on Wednesday.

The veil of mystery which has enshrouded the Olympic since she was reported on Saturday as having suddenly put into Lough Swilly, in Northern Ireland, was not lifted today, nor were appeals to officials of the White Star Line of any avail. They pleaded ignorance, saying to persons who were trying to obtain information about passengers on board that it was not known by the company whether the boat was still at Lough Swilly.

The Olympic was scheduled to go to Belfast after concluding her trip, there to lay up for the Winter. Rumors connect her appearance and detention at Lough Swilly as due to mine fields and submarines, but these rumors are not satisfying as to detention of passengers.

The White Star officials said tonight that Liverpool officials of the company were as much in the dark as the London office.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The steamer Olympic anchored safely at Belfast this morning. Her passengers and mails were landed before noon.

During the stay of the Olympic in Lough Swilly none of the passengers on board, with the exception of Mr. Schwab, was permitted even to have communication with the shore. It was at first reported that the passengers had been transferred by rail to Londonderry, but this turns out to have been erroneous. The Olympic was warned by wireless of the danger from German mines in the waters north of Ireland. Immediately on receipt of this communication she put in at Lough Swilly.

The Home Office announces that no Americans or friendly aliens will be allowed to embark on the outgoing steamer calling at Queenstown on Thursday for America. They must proceed to Liverpool to join the steamer.

COTTON CRISIS IN AUSTRIA.

Manufacturers Worried Over Obtaining Further Supplies from Us.

VENICE, Nov. 3.—The Austrian textile manufacturers are greatly worried over the question of obtaining further supplies of cotton from America. They fear all their efforts will fail even though attempts have been made to obtain this commodity through neutral States.

The stocks of cotton in Austria are sufficient to last only a few weeks, so that the situation in the mills is becoming desperate.

RUSSIA CAN IMPORT COTTON.

Germany Will Not Molest Cargoes in American Ships.

AMSTERDAM, (via London,) Nov. 3.—The German Government has promised Ambassador Gerard, according to the Vossische Zeitung, that American ships loaded with cotton bound for Russian ports will not be molested.

The Berlin Vossische Zeitung says it learns from Mr. Gerard that not only will the exportation of German chemicals to America be generally agreed to soon, but also the importation of American cotton to Europe in ships flying the American flag.

The American Government has received assurances from the British Government, says the paper, that American ships carrying cotton will not be prevented from running into German ports.

DUTCH TO SEEK WAR LOAN.

Relief Needed to Meet Expense for Mobilization of Army.

THE HAGUE, (via London,) Nov. 3.—In order to cope with the terrific war burden of 1,000,000 guilders (about $400,000) daily for the mobilization of its army, the Dutch Government proposes to institute an export tax on all such materials which, through war or other circumstances, have increased in price.

The Government has also announced that it will at once introduce a parliamentary bill for a loan of 250,000,000 guilders (about $100,000,000). If the loan is not subscribed for by private parties, the Government will force the highest taxpayers to take a part of the loan in proportion to their capitals.

All fortunes under 50,000 guilders (about $20,000) will be made exempt.

EMPRESS VISITS HOSPITALS.

Inspects Institutions on the East German Front.

AMSTERDAM, via London, Nov. 3.—The German Empress recently visited the hospitals at Breslau, Posen, and Königsberg, says a dispatch from Berlin.

The Socialist institutions were included in those inspected.

LABOR CONDITIONS BETTER.

Over 1,000,000 Now Employed in Berlin, Latest Report Shows.

BERLIN, (via Rome,) Nov. 3.—Reports from the national sickness insurance boards indicate a considerable betterment in the labor market.

The number of persons employed in Greater Berlin now exceeds 1,000,000.

LATEST DEALINGS IN THE REALTY FIELD

Investor Buys New-Law Tenement in the Bronx—Bronx and Suburban Deals.

The realty market, as a result of the Election Day holiday yesterday, was devoid of activity, save a few late announcements of minor details. The Register's office was closed and no transfers or mortgages were recorded.

In the Bronx the purchase was announced by Peter Corell of the five-story new-law flat at 2,620 Briggs Avenue from Jacob Reich. It covers a plot 40 by 86 feet. M. Sax negotiated the sale.

Brooklyn.

Henry A. Frey has sold nineteen lots at the southwest corner of Deumont Avenue and Cleveland Street for the Realty Associates to an operator. Also, for a client, two lots on the north side of Lenox Road, near East Forty-fifth Street. The purchaser will erect two one-family houses on the plot.

George Eisenbach and Charles Schaefer sold for Mrs. Ida Pasternick to the Fridhoff estate 490 Jefferson Avenue, a four-story apartment. The property was held at $45,000.

New Jersey.

The Junior Company has purchased from Philip J. Bowers 844 Broad Street, Newark, a brick building, being a part of the Stetter Restaurant, for $150,000, or $7,000 a front foot. Mr. Bowers bought the property in 1901 for about $48,000.

The Holland Company, representing the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, purchased from George J. Roberts fifteen acres on the Hackensack Turnpike, North Bergen. It has a frontage of 611 feet along the road and a depth of 1,066 feet.

A Recent Buyer.

Fannie P. Wilcox is the buyer of the two four-story flat houses 234 and 236 East 178th Street reported sold Monday by Gustav Viehl.

Realty Notes.

Michael F. Loughman has transferred the twelve-story apartment house at the southeast corner of West End Avenue and Eighty-sixth Street to Mary A. Ryan for a nominal consideration, subject to a mortgage for $505,000.

The building occupies a site fronting 102.2 feet on the avenue and 80 feet on the street. It was built by the Mullken & Moeller interests in 1912 and was held by them at $850,000, the building having cost about $525,000. Mr. Loughman bought the house in November, 1912, trading in payment several city and suburban properties which he had taken in former deals.

ROCKEFELLER SHIP OFF TO AID BELGIUM

Massapequa Sails with $275,000 Cargo of Food for Starving Non-Combatants.

SEEKING TWO MORE BOATS

Work Needed for Refugees Arriving Here—$8,703 for Relief Fund—J. P. Morgan Gives $1,000.

The Rockefeller Foundation relief steamship Massapequa, which is going to Rotterdam with a $275,000 cargo of flour, rise, bacon, and beans for the destitute people of Belgium, sailed for that port at high tide last night. No demonstration marked her departure. The Massapequa will steer straight for Rotterdam, without a stop.

The Rockefeller Foundation is understood to be negotiating for the charter of at least two other ships to take cargoes of food supplies to the destitute in the war zones of Europe. The names of the ships and the nature of the cargoes will be announced, it is said, at a near date.

Practically every steamship now arriving at New York from Dutch and British ports brings a number of Belgian refugees. These unfortunate people immediately apply to the Belgian Bureau, 8 and 10 Bridge Street, on landing, and ask assistance in getting employment. With reference to the employment of these people, the Belgian Bureau issued yesterday the following statement:

The Belgian Bureau has a number of Belgian refugees for whom it is trying to find employment. A few among them speak English, a great many speak French, and some few only, Flemish. It is very easy to find employment for the women, but great difficulty is experienced in locating the men. We have plenty of applications for farmers, but unfortunately the majority of men coming in now do not belong to that class. A great service would be rendered to these poor Belgian refugees if they were given employment in hotels, office buildings, &c. Please apply to Belgian Bureau, 10 Bridge Street, New York. Telephone Broad 1712.

$8,703 For the Belgian Fund.

The fund of the Belgian Relief Committee, subscriptions to which should be sent to J. P. Morgan & Co., 23 Wall Street, or the Belgian Relief Committee, now amounts to $285,301. Of this $8,703 was received yesterday from the following sources:

Kind of Apparel Needed.

The American Red Cross has issued a statement giving information as to the kind of apparel that is most needed by the destitute women and children of Belgium. This is the statement:

CLOTHING NEEDED BY BELGIAN AND OTHER REFUGEE WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

Woolen blouses.
Warm skirts.
Boots and shoes.
Stockings.
Cotton chemises—untrimmed.
Knitted mufflers or scarfs to cover head and shoulders.

But above everything shawls, knitted, woven, or made of warm woolen material, large enough to fold so that they cover the head and the shoulders and body as well.

They do not wear sweaters. Only the young girls will wear coats. Some will wear petticoats. These would be very useful for the children; also simple, warm dresses and knitted hoods with long ends to throw around neck or with short capes to cover shoulders.

Presents of yarn and long knitting needles would be very welcome. All the refugees beg for wool.

The need for blankets is going to be overpowering this Winter in Belgium and in all war-ridden countries.

SHIPPING INSTRUCTIONS.

To be packed in separate boxes from hospital garments and sent to same address: American Red Cross, care of Bush Terminal Company, Thirty-ninth Street and Second Avenue, Brooklyn. Marked for Belgian refugees

Responsive to appeals from the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps, which is affiliated with the British Red Cross Society, $4,000 has been sent to the London headquarters by Eliot Norton of 2 Rector Street. The money was gathered in small gifts made in this city and elsewhere, for the most part by alumni of Harvard, Yale, and Princeton Universities.

The Ambulance Corps was organized by Richard Norton of Boston, and the volunteers are mostly from the universities named, although they are not confined to those institutions.

ITALIAN SHIPS FREED; KROONLAND HELD

Great Britain Will Make Report to Us on Status of the American Steamer.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The British Government has released the Italian steamers San Giovanni and Regina d'Italia, which were detained at Gibraltar with copper cargoes, but has not yet ordered the release of the American steamer Kroonland, which is being held at the same port with 1,100 passengers and a cargo of copper and rubber, bound for Italy and Greece. Information to this effect was sent to the State Department today by Ambassador Page from London.

With respect to the Kroonland, Ambassador Page cabled that he had been informed by the British Foreign Office that it was the purpose of the British Government to deliver to the American Government a report covering the situation of that vessel. The United States had asked for the release of the Kroonland and her cargo if the facts regarding them were as the State Department understood them.

In the case of the Italian steamers, the State Department expressed the hope to the British Government that the vessels and their cargoes might be released.

Copper shippers in New York, Baltimore, and other seaports are complaining to the State Department in strong terms against the detention of their cargoes through the activity of British cruisers. They assert that as a result of the British Government's action few steamship owners will accept copper cargoes, and that those who do are demanding an increase of several hundred per cent. in ocean freight rates on copper.

Dr. Naon, the Argentine Ambassador, visited the State Department today and informed Secretary Lansing that the Argentine Government was being similarly embarrassed by the activity of the British cruisers.

The Platuria Released.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The British Government has ordered the release of the Standard Oil Company's steamer Platuria, which was seized recently by British warships off the coast of Scotland and taken into the port of Stornoway. The Government has satisfied itself that the Platuria's cargo of oil was destined to be delivered into neutral hands.

Two Italian ships carrying cargoes of copper from the United States to Italy, which were detained at Gibraltar, have been released after the purchase of their cargoes by the British Government. The case of the American ship Kroonland, bound from New York for Naples and Greece with a cargo of copper, is still under consideration.

MORE PREDICTIONS BY EX-GERMAN SPY

Dr. Graves Now Tells of Coming Invasion of England by Germany.

BOTH BY AIR AND BY SEA

30 Zeppelins and 375,000 Men to Cross the Channel—And London Is to be Destroyed.

Dr. Armgaard Karl Graves, who says that, while a German spy in good standing, he gained past, present, and future knowledge of the European war denied to the uninitiated, came out with further predictions yesterday regarding the next developments in the international struggle. Last Sunday Dr. Graves predicted the destruction of the Suez Canal within a fortnight, and yesterday he foretold a further calamity for England—this being nothing less than an invasion of Great Britain by German troops and airships and the almost certain burning of London.

"London," said Dr. Graves yesterday, "has been marked for destruction by Germany for a long time, and as it is the Germans' prime object to eliminate England from the present struggle as soon as possible, the attack on the capital city will begin before the month is out. Let me explain how this will come about.

"To my certain knowledge, Germany has built 500 or more steel sea-going barges of 500 tons burden each, and each capable of carrying 750 men with provisions and munitions of war to last them for a month's campaign. These barges have been built in parts, and for years the parts have been concealed with arms and armaments in German mobilization centres, notably at Stettin, Frankfort, Oder, and Berlin. This has been possible because of the German way of doing things. Everything military that they construct is made in sections, one section being manufactured in one place and another in another, and even the workmen who make any part do not know what it is to be used for.

German Waterways Deepened.

"In addition to this, all of the waterways of Germany have been deepened, so that these large barges may be navigated almost from one end of the country to the other. This deepening of channels, of course, was in the interests of commerce, but the Government also was thinking of war when the work was done. The parts of the barges have by now been assembled, and there is no doubt that the barges are ready for the dash across the English Channel. At least 375,000 men can be carried on them, and these men will be available when the time for the invasion comes.

"Simultaneously with the start of the barges for England a German fleet of at least thirty Zeppelins will sail across the Channel. Half of them will be held to protect the barges, which will be towed by powerful ocean-going tugs, and the other half will scatter over London. If the city refuses to surrender after an ultimatum has been delivered to it, these Zeppelins will drop bombs of a size and power of 42-centimeter shells and in addition containing chemicals that will set fire to anything inflammable near where they explode. The Zeppelins can start fires in London in a hundred different places within half an hour or so.

"And," Dr. Graves continued, "while the Zeppelins are bombarding London, and the barges are carrying the army across the Channel, the German naval fleet will be keeping the English fleet in the North Sea busy. While England's fleet has been in the open water, standing the wear and tear of constant activity, Germany's fleet has been lying snugly in harbor and being prepared for the big sea fight. Furthermore, Germany's ships have been built especially for service in the November storms of the North Sea, and England's have not. It is easy to see, therefore, that the German fleet will be able to prevent English warships from interfering with the transportation of soldiers on the barges.

Submarines to Control Channel.

"This disclosure of the plans of Germany explains the terrific fight that the Kaiser is making for control of the coast towns of France and Belgium. My confident prediction is that the Germans will soon gain the foothold on the coast they need, that within a fortnight a fleet of thirty German submarines will control the English Channel and guarantee a passage for the barges, and that between the 25th and 30th of this month the invasion of England will begin."

Asked why the German dirigibles had not done the damage in Antwerp foretold for London, Dr. Graves said that as yet not a Zeppelin had been used in the war. The dirigibles used over Antwerp, he said, were of the Parseval type and were much smaller and less protected than the Zeppelins. Their purpose, according to him, was simply for terrifying the Belgians and scouting purposes. When the Zeppelins get into action, he said, a new story of air fighting will be told.

London will not be protected from airships, Dr. Graves said, by darkness, because the German General Staff has detailed charts of the city more complete than those in the office of the London Survey. With these charts and a compass any airship, the Doctor asserted, can go over any desired point of London.

A few other general assertions made by the former spy were that within six months Russia would cease fighting Germany, that Italy would never join the Allies, that England now held 38,000 Italian troops in reserve in Great Britain for the defense of London, that—but as Dr. Graves was going on his press agent reminded him that he had better save some of his revelations for his lecture in Carnegie Hall tonight.

AUSTRALIA TO HOLD HER FOOD AND FUEL

Places Embargo on Exportation of Meat and Coal Except to Mother Country.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The American Consul at Sydney, New South Wales, reported today that the Australian Government has placed an embargo on meat and coal except to the mother country. Judge Fleming, Chief of the Board of Foreign Trade Advisers, received a cablegram from the American Consul General in Australia stating that the Australian Government had also placed an embargo upon wool, wheat, and flour.

Australian wool imported direct into the United States during the seven months ending in July amounted to 22,585,000 pounds, valued at $5,645,958. The quantity imported indirectly by way of England is not specifically enumerated in Government records.

Meat from Australia during the seven months amounted to 23,306,998 pounds, valued at $1,799,045.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 3.—The embargo placed by Australia on shipments of coal and meat except to the mother country seriously affects this port and that portion of the Pacific Coast tributary to it.

Fuel oil is used in almost all factories, on all railroads, and, with few exceptions, on vessels plying the Pacific, but coal for domestic consumption is chiefly imported from Australia.

Within the last eighteen months shipments of Australian beef, mutton, and butter have been a factor here in keeping down retail prices, which steadily climbed as the population grew.

MRS. WHITNEY TAKES HOSPITAL TO THE WAR

Daughter of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Finances Field Expedition to Care for Wounded.

KEPT HER PLANS A SECRET

Sails Today in Personal Charge of Four Surgeons, Fifteen Nurses, and Complete Field Equipment.

Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, accompanied by four American surgeons, fifteen trained nurses, and half a dozen hospital internes, will sail for Europe on the Lusitania this morning to establish a field hospital for the care of the wounded behind the battle lines in Northern France. The project is being financed solely by Mrs. Whitney as her contribution toward the relief of sufferers in the war zone. It was said yesterday that Mrs. Whitney, who was formerly Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, was ready to put a large share of her fortune into this work and to establish other hospitals if conditions at the front permitted. Her mother, Mrs. Vanderbilt, arrived in New York from Newport last night to bid her good-bye.

Although the object of her mission was not made known until the eve of her departure, Mrs. Whitney has been quietly planning the expedition for several weeks. She was encouraged by the example of her sister, Countess Szecheryi, formerly Miss Gladys Moore Vanderbilt, who has gone to the aid of the wounded in Austria. Some idea of the scale of the undertaking may be gained from the fact that the motor ambulances, large quantity of medical appurtenances, and enough clothing for 3,000 men, women, and children were shipped to France last Saturday on the steamship Chicago as part of the hospital equipment.

The four surgeons sailing today are known for their skill in hospital work. They are Dr. Walton Martin of 25 West Fiftieth Street, attending surgeon at St. Luke's, who will have charge of the field organization; Dr. Karl Connell of 42 West Fiftieth Street, associate attending physician at Roosevelt Hospital; Dr. Donald Gordon of 128 West Fifty-ninth Street, a former member of the Roosevelt Hospital staff, and Dr. W. E. Drennan of Birmingham, Ala. These men have volunteered their services. They will remain at the front three or four months, after which their places will be taken by other volunteers.

The first field hospital will be stationed as near as possible to the firing lines. It will be conducted in co-operation with the American Ambulance Hospital, near Paris, which is managed by Drs. De Bauchet and Joseph A. Blake. The wounded of both armies will be treated in the institution, and a special effort will be made to care for the more serious cases, which at present cannot be treated in the military field hospitals. The surgeons were not willing to discuss their plans last night, but one of those associated with Mrs. Whitney in the work explained that relief is contemplated for a certain class of sufferers for whom there is practically no provision at present.

"There is a great need for skilled surgery at the front," he said. "At present it is impossible for the military hospitals to handle any but the less serious cases of wounded. The result is that hundreds of soldiers who are injured most severely have to wait until they can be sent back to Paris. This means a delay of twenty-four hours or more before they are treated. By that time often they are beyond hope. Hundreds of lives might be saved if the surgeons were able to reach them in time.

"By establishing an up-to-date and fully equipped hospital close to the lines we hope to render a most important service in this respect. With our ambulances constantly in service, soldiers wounded in battle may be rushed to us within a comparatively few hours, and the dangers arising from delay may be avoided. It is speed that counts in thousand of serious cases, and that is what Mrs. Whitney's hospital will provide."

According to those associated with Mrs. Whitney, no other field hospital just like this has been established in the war zone. The nearest thing to it is the field hospital maintained in France by Herman Harjes, the banker, which on a smaller scale aims to give immediate relief in cases of serious injury. One of the New York surgeons in the Harjes hospital is Dr. Archibald C. Strong.

HELP NEEDED FOR WOUNDED.

Red Cross Sends $10,000 More for Use at Points in France.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Following its donation of $25,000 to the American ambulance hospital in Paris, the American Red Cross has asked Ambassador Herrick if he will receive $10,000 to be used in his discretion in furnishing surgeons, nurses, and supplies, or whatever is needed most in Vierzon, Dinard, Dieppe, and Pau, from which points strong appeals for further assistance have just reached American Red Cross headquarters here.

There are 1,200 gravely wounded French and Gemans in Vierzon, according to a cable received by Miss Mabel T. Boardman, Chairman of the National Relief Board of the American Red from Mrs. Cooper Hewitt. Mrs. Hewitt says three were 400 wounded stretched upon scattered straw, with only one surgeon, an American, to attend them.

"No trained nurses, no medicine, no food," Mrs. Hewitt cabled. "Wounded arriving starved and naked. No funds. Have seen surgeon, who is in despair because committees here can supply nothing. Can you cable me money to relieve horrible situation?"

Miss Boardman's reply to this appeal was:

"Cabling Ambassador Herrick asking if we may place funds at his disposal to meet needs you describe. See him."

The American Red Cross arranged today to ship 5,000 heavy blankets to distressed non-combatants in Belgium.

CANADA CURBS GERMANS.

Newspapers in West Ordered to Stop Printing Seditious Matter.

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 23.—So persistent is the anti-British campaign in some German newspapers of Western Canada that orders were issued today to the military authorities at Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and Edmonton to notify all newspapers in their districts that the further publication of articles of a seditious nature or calculated to incite anti-British sentiment of a dangerous character would be followed immediately by suppression of the newspapers.

These instructions are so specific that the campaign against England and her Allies is likely to be stopped at once. The decision to adopt extreme measures has been tardy, the Government hoping that campaign would end without interference.

HIT TURKISH AMBASSADOR.

Angry Russian Clerk's Ultimatum When His Pay Was Refused.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Monday, Nov. 2. (Dispatch to The London News.)—When Turkey's diplomatic staff were closing the embassy here this morning they were reminded that some of the Russian employes had not been paid for four months.

Fahreddin Bey, the Ambassador, said there was no money for Russians, and when the employes insisted he jeered and told them they would be paid in Odessa when the Turks took it.

This evoked an ultimatum from the Russian clerk, who, acting as spokesman for his colleagues, delivered it in the shape of a blow on the Turk's jaw. The irate diplomat shouted for help and sent for the police, but the policeman guarding the door refused to interfere.

Fahreddin Bey will depart via Sweden for Holland, where, he says, he will continue to represent Turkey.

DEMOCRATS HOLD CONGRESS; THEIR MAJORITY IS 19

No Change in the Senate and President Is Assured of House's Support.

VARIED FATES OF BOSSISM

Penrose Wins in Pennsylvania, but Sullivan Is Defeated in Illinois.

OHIO AGAIN REPUBLICAN

Four States Adopt Prohibition, While Two Stay Wet—Kansas Back to Standpatism.

Late returns from Tuesday's election show that there will be twenty-seven more Democrats than Republicans in the next House of Representatives, but the Democratic majority over all will be nineteen, as late editions of yesterday's TIMES said it would.

There will be 227 Democrats, 200 Republicans, 7 Progressives, and 1 Socialist. Small as the majority is, it insures continued Democratic control, and the President will continue to have the support of the legislative branch in whatever policies he may suggest. Champ Clark will retain the Speakership.

The election made no change whatever in the Senate majority. The Democrats still have a majority of 10, there being 53 Democrats, 42 Republicans, and 1 Progressive.

Next to New York, the chief interest of the election centred in Pennsylvania. The returns there show that the voters made a distinction between Boies Penrose and the rest of the Republican ticket. Penrose's two opponents, Pinchot and Palmer, have a majority over him of 14,940. Had they united they would have beaten him. Yet the Republican candidate for Governor, Brumbaugh, has a majority of 139,041 over Vance McCormick. Though Penrose is elected, the voters of Pennsylvania showed that he is not their choice.

Col. Roosevelt sought to make a fusion between the Democrats and Progressives. He induced the Progressive candidate for Governor, Dean Lewis, to withdraw, and the Progressives supported McCormick. He wanted the Democrats, in return, to withdraw Palmer and support Pinchot for Senator. Had they done so Penrose would have been beaten.

Penrose's plurality over Pinchot was 236,493. He got 489,346 votes; Pinchot, 252,853; Palmer, the third in the race, got 251,433. Brumbaugh got 562,562 votes and McCormick 432,521.

The Pennsylvania and Illinois contests were bracketed together in the public mind because of the fact that in both States a machine boss was running for the Senate—a Republican in Pennsylvania and a Democrat in Illinois. In both States independent voters were urged to vote against the two bosses. Four United States Senators, two Republicans and two Democrats, issued an appeal to voters of their parties in the two States to vote against Penrose and Sullivan.

The anti-boss argument failed in Pennsylvania, but it was successful in Illinois. Roger C. Sullivan, the Chicago boss, nominated for Senator on the Democratic ticket, was expected to win easily, because the opposition was divided between two candidates, Senator Sherman, Republican, and Raymond Robins, Progressive. Nevertheless, Sullivan has been defeated by about 6,000 votes, and Sherman returns to the Senate. Sullivan's defeat is directly attributable to the fight made against him as a boss and the ruler of a machine.

Ohio went Republican by majorities that were not very impressive. Representative Willis defeated Gov. Cox for the Governorship by from 8,000 to 12,000, and Warren G. Harding, Republican, was elected to the Senate by a larger majority, not yet fixed.

A surprising feature of the election is that Oklahoma is in doubt. This southwestern State had been counted on as being as surely Democratic as any other State in that cluster. The Governorship, however, is still in question, though Senator Gore, Democrat, ran ahead of his ticket and is undoubtedly elected.

Another close State that has seldom been doubtful before is Utah, where Senator Reed Smoot, one of the leaders of the elder statesmen in the United States Senate, has barely pulled through by 1,500 votes. The election was the closest in the history of the State. There was a fusion between the Democrats and the Progressives, who nominated a Mormon named Moyle. Smoot has always had the Church behind him heretofore, but Moyle's orthodoxy apparently deterred the Senator of that support as a whole.

Two other Senators of the Old Guard, Gallinger of New Hampshire and Dillingham of Vermont, encountered disturbing opposition because of their position as such. In Dillingham's case, particularly, the only ground for opposition to him was that he had been a boy in the old Aldrich machine, had voted for Lorimer, and had otherwise conducted himself as a member of the "Old Guard" should. The same line of attack was adopted against Gallinger, with more specifications.

Against Dillingham there was a coalition of Democrats, Progressives, Prohibitionists, their candidate being Charles A. Prouty, formerly Interstate Commerce Commissioner. Dillingham had to dig pretty industriously, and pulled through by about 7,000 votes. Gallinger was also elected.

New Hampshire, a stronghold of Progressivism, has gone back to standpatism with a vengeance. She has elected to the Senate Charles Curtis, an ex-Senator who lost his seat in that body because of his uncompromising [illegible] Old Guard. There [illegible] Curtis's qualifications [illegible] attempt to make it appear that [illegible]

White House Blames Tariff for Loss In House; Says Result Is Really an "Off Year" Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—In the face of the heavy reduction of the Democratic majority in the House, the Administration has decided that yesterday's elections resulted in what was, under the circumstances, a great victory. This was the position announced by Postmaster General Burleson after a conference at the White House this morning. He said:

The victory was an overwhelming one for the Democrats. It was the first time in the history of the country that the party in power won the House after revising the tariff, except at the time of the Dingley tariff, when the Spanish war was on and the party in power had the advantage of patriotism.

The same view was taken tonight in the statement issued by Thomas J. Pence, Assistant to the Chairman of the Democratic National Committee:

A careful canvass of the election returns shows that the Democracy has strengthened its position in the Senate and has splendidly maintained itself with the election of the greatest majority ever returned by any party in an off-year following a revision of our tariff system.

With complete returns from all save sixteen districts, the Democrats have carried 225 Congressional elections as against 188 by the Republicans, 3 by the Socialists, and 3 by the Progressives, a majority of 37 over the Republicans.

It is gratifying to know that the party has strengthened its hold in the great Middle West and on the Pacific Coast.

It was suggested today that the secret of the Administration's willingness to let the blame for Democratic losses rest on the Democratic tariff is the avowed confidence that before the next elections the conditions that caused dissatisfaction with the lower customs duties would have vanished. The President publicly declared before the outbreak of the war that the return of prosperity was in sight, and the return of prosperity, even Republicans admit, would end the hostility to the Democratic tariff.

A second explanation advanced by the Democrats for their loss of seats in the House is the disappearance of the Progressive vote. The inference is that the rank and file of the Progressive Party has returned to the Republican fold. Democrats here take great pleasure from the thought that, with the Progressives practically eliminated, Democracy has measured swords with Republicanism on almost equal terms and proved more than a match for it.

"This time we had a stand-up fight with the Republicans and we have defeated them," said Mr. Pence. "Generally speaking, the Progressives were not a factor in this election. The outcome this year, therefore, cannot be compared to that of two years ago.

"We have elected Democratic Governors in Minnesota, Nebraska, Massachusetts, Tennessee, Michigan, and Wyoming, as well as in Southern States. There was danger of our losing Senators in Colorado and Oregon, but both Senators Thomas and Chamberlain have been elected, and we have good chances of electing Senator Newlands in Nevada, Roger Sullivan in Illinois, and Neely as Senator in Kansas. Unexpectedly we have elected Phelan as Senator in California and Johnson as Senator in South Dakota."

ROME HEARS LONDON BY POCKET WIRELESS

Italian Priest Makes Amazing Tests of Invention Before Scientists and Diplomats.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, Nov. 4.—Prof. Domenico Argentieri, the Abruzzi priest whose recent claim of having invented a small portable wireless telegraphy apparatus capable of receiving messages from high-power stations at even a distance of 1,250 miles raised a storm of controversy in Italy, today triumphantly demonstrated the genuineness of his invention.

At the British Embassy in Rome, in the presence of a large gathering of public men and scientific experts, including Sir Rennell Rodd, he gave a series of astonishing experiments without bobbins, receiving poles, or the other stock in trade connected with radio-telegraphy. A simple switch attached by an ordinary domestic electrocord to his pocket apparatus was what he used for interrupting wireless communications transmitted by the London Foreign Office. He also picked up others from Paris and from war vessels out at sea. Some of the messages were in cypher and their accuracy has been rigidly verified.

French, Russian, and Japanese military and naval attachés also witnessed the experimen's.

PRAISE AMERICAN SURGEONS

Kaiser's Government Wants Three More Sent to Germany.

BERLIN, (via London,) Nov. 4.—The American hospitals at Gleiwitz and Cassel are doing such satisfactory work that the German Government is about to request that three more American surgeons be sent to Germany. In case this is done the Government will turn over another large hospital in Gleiwitz to American supervision.

The German surgeons speak in terms of the highest appreciation of the skill of the American surgeons. They give terrible evidence of their confidence by allotting to the American hospitals some of the most severe cases of illness and many of the most difficult cases requiring surgical operations.

LISTER-KAYE A BANKRUPT.

Hungarian Speculation Ruins the Husband of Natica Yznaga.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—Sir John Lister-Kaye, who married Natica Yznaga of Louisiana, appeared in the Bankruptcy Court today. Sir John attributes his trouble to the financing of a company formed to develop property in Croatia, in Hungary.

A statement of Sir John's affairs showed that he had liabilities of upwards of £130,000 ($630,000), of which £80,000 ($400,000) were secured. His assets were given as "bad book debts" and amounted to £70,000 ($350,000).

BLACKWELL'S ISLAND FIRE.

Special Alarm for Blaze in Stable Near the Hospital.

The fire-fighting force quartered on Blackwell's Island was called out at midnight last night to fight a blaze in the stables connected with the Metropolitan Hospital. The stables are close to the main hospital building, and preparations were made at once to move patients. The fire was a small one, however, and the promptness with which the firemen stretched their hose lines into the burning building made it unnecessary to disturb the hospital inmates.

What caused the fire is not known. It was discovered before it had gained sufficient headway to endanger buildings near it, and an alarm was turned in at once which called out the island's whole fire fighting force.

TOKIO, Nov. 4.—A dispatch received here from Tsi-nan, in Shantung Province, China, says the Japanese forces before Tsing-tau have destroyed twenty-six German guns and captured 800 prisoners.

The Japanese artillery is now attacking the German trenches and the wire entanglements before them.

In a statement issued here to-day the Navy Department says it believes the Germans at Tsing-tau have sunk the Austrian cruiser Kaiserin Elisabeth, which took refuge in that harbor soon after Japan declared war. It is also thought the Germans have destroyed the floating docks.

PEKING, Nov. 4.—Since Tuesday morning no word has been received by wireless from the defenders of Tsing-tau. The Japanese began a general bombardment of the fortress with heavy siege guns several days ago.

The Austrian cruiser Kaiserin Elisabeth, reported sunk by the Germans in Tsing-tau Harbor, evidently to prevent her from falling into the hands of the Allies, was a small vessel of about 4,000 tons. She was rated at nineteen knots and had eight 5.9-inch guns in her main battery.

The Kaiserin Elisabeth, according to previous Japanese reports, had been aiding the forts in replying to the attacks of the Japanese and British warships which are gathered before Tsing-tau.

FEAR OF ZEPPELINS HURTS LONDON HOTELS

Many Guests Object to Upper Floor Rooms from Fear of Bombs.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The upper floor rooms in some well patronized hotels are in little demand as the result of timidity felt about Zeppelins. The timorous are English as well as French and Belgians. Lately many English women have taken apartments in hotels, closing their houses because the men of the family are at the front.

According to an official of one of the largest hotels London as a result of the war will be a Winter resort this year, since many persons who usually go to Southern Europe will remain here. The dining rooms of the hotels are filled with French and Belgians, as are the well-known restaurants. Owing to the dearth of amusement in Paris the audiences in the theatres here include a large number of Parisians.

Socialists Appeal to Him to Join Other Neutral Countries, Vorwaerts Says.

AMSTERDAM, (via London,) Nov. 4.—A dispatch from Berlin to The Handelsblad says:

"According to Vorwärts, a council of the members of the Social Democratic Party in the Swiss Parliament has asked the President of Switzerland to take the initiative in making diplomatic representations jointly with the governments of other neutral States to secure an armistice."

TWO STATES VOTE TO GIVE SUFFRAGE

Official Count May Be Necessary There—Result a See-saw on Slow Returns.

REJECTED BY FOUR STATES

Ohio, Missouri, North and South Dakota Defeat Proposal—Half Kansas Vote Feminin.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—Woman suffrage leaders rejoiced tonight when belated returns indicated that votes for women had been apparently granted in two of the seven States voting on the question in Tuesday's election, with a third State in doubt. First returns had indicated refusal of the franchise to women in all seven States concerned.

Montana and Nevada, according to the latest returns, granted votes to women, while Nebraska showed such a small vote against the proposal that the women claimed the State. Missouri, Ohio, and North and South Dakota refused to grant equal suffrage, the majority against granting the franchise to women increasing with the size of the population concerned.

In Montana, where workers of the American Woman Suffrage Association made heroic efforts to win the ballot, the vote was so close that the official count may be necessary to decide the outcome. The women have a slight lead on incomplete returns.

In Nevada, which seems won to the cause of equal suffrage, 105 precincts out of 240 gave 3,619 votes for woman suffrage and 2,508 against.

In Illinois the proportion of female to male voters in the Democratic, Republican, and Progressive Parties was about the same. The woman political leaders were mostly identified with the Progressive Party. Figures in many precincts showed, however, that the percentage of women to men was larger in the Democratic Party than in the Progressive.

"We are greatly pleased that no more of the States went for suffrage," said Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, President of the New York State Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, yesterday. "We have more confidence now for the anti-suffrage campaign in New York State. We will commence our campaign at once, and our slogan will be, 'We Win, 1915.'"

"The anti-suffragists can't win for they are not fighting for anything—they are opposing," said Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, President of the National American Woman Suffrage Association. "And we can't lose anything that we have never had."

Dr. Shaw had just come back from two months campaigning in the Western States.

"We have made a splendid fight," she said, "and we have done great propaganda work that will help us in the future. We will have the whole United States in ten years. We had the liquor interests and the trusts against us in the West, with plenty of money to fight us. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan helped us a great deal in Nebraska.

"Two years ago a representative of the Liquor Dealers' Association in South Dakota came to me here in New York and asked me to make an agreement with him not to work against the liquor interests and he would keep his hands off suffrage. I told him that we could not make any such agreement."

Dr. Shaw said that the work of the Congressional Union had done the suffrage cause much harm in the West by fighting Democratic candidates whether they were or were not in favor of votes for women.

"I am glad to say that I think most of the men they opposed were elected," said Dr. Shaw.

"I am not dissatisfied with the results in the West," said Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, President of the International Woman Suffrage Association and of the Empire State Women's Campaign Committee, who has also been campaigning in the West. "We have ten States, not counting Nevada and Montana."

NEBRASKA SUFFRAGE IN DOUBT

Antis Led on Late Incomplete Returns—Other Figures Unobtainable.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 4.—Returns on the suffrage vote are coming in very slowly, and the figures will not be available for probably forty-eight hours.

Six counties complete and 218 scattering precincts give for suffrage 20,644 against 25,086, a majority of 4,442 for the Antis, overcoming a previous slight lead for votes for women. In addition to securing a majority vote, the affirmatives must have 25 per cent. of the total vote for Governor.

Special to The New York Times.

PIERRE, S. D., Nov. 4.—It is impossible to get figures on suffrage until the count is made, as many precincts failed to make returns on this issue. There is no question, however, as to the defeat of the movement. Equal suffrage leaders of the State say they will at once start another campaign and that it will not end until they are successful.

Turkish Vessels Reported to Have Destroyed the Sinope. —British Bombard Jeddah.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—Turkey has now definitely broken off diplomatic relations with Great Britain, France, Russia, and Servia. Her diplomatic representatives in the capitals of these countries, acting on orders from the Porte, today demanded and received their passports. Some of them have already left their posts, while the others will depart tomorrow.

Although no statement to this effect has been given out, it is understood that Turkey's apology for the actions of her warships in bombarding Russian Black Sea ports and attacking Russian ships proved unacceptable to the Powers of the Triple Entente, since Turkey was not prepared to accede to the demand that the German officers in her service be dismissed and that the ships purchased from Germany be dismantled.

Now that Turkey has aligned herself among the nations at war, there is much speculation as to what the other Balkan States will do. Greece is said to be preparing to side with the Allies, while Bulgaria has given assurances of her neutrality. Bulgaria, however, is mobilizing, for, as a Bulgarian diplomat said, "With Turkey in the area of the war Bulgaria must be prepared for any eventualities."

German Report of Bombardment.

The following semi-official statement, given out in Berlin, has been received by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company:

"A report from Constantinople states that the British fleet bombarded Akabah, Arabia, on Nov. 1, and attempted to land troops near the Egyptian frontier. The report adds:

"'After four Englishmen had fallen the remainder of the party returned to the boats. Although the British fired 1,000 rounds, we lost only one gendarme.'

"The Vienna Neue Freie Presse says that, according to information received in Vienna from the Turkish Ministry of Marine, the naval engagement in the Black Sea was much more serious than the first report indicated.

"A few Turkish vessels practicing in the Black Sea were observed and attacked by Russian warships. The engagement resulted in the sinking of five Russian warships and nineteen transports. According to statements made by Russian sailors, the transports had on board 1,700 mines which the Russians intended to lay in the Black Sea. This is proof of the hostile intentions of the Russian fleet.

"In the bombardment of Sevastopol and Novorossysk twenty-five warehouses filled with petroleum and corn were destroyed."

British Bombard Jeddah.

The British cruiser Minerva has bombarded the Arabian town of Dieddah (Jeddah, the chief seaport of Arabia,) on the Red Sea.

The Turkish authorities, according to a Reuter dispatch from Constantinople via Sofia, have begun to seize the shipping lying off Constantinople. The Porte has also ordered the extinction of the lighthouses on the Mediterranean littoral.

Summary of War News.

A British warship has bombarded Jeddah, one of the principal Arabian seaports. Other British men-of-war continue the bombardment of the Dardanelles forts. A force of Russians has invaded Asia Minor, but has been driven back by the Turks, according to dispatches from Constantinople.

Turkey has broken off diplomatic relations with Great Britain, France, Russia, and Servia, recalling her envoys from these countries.

The French War Office announces that there have been no important changes on the battle lines in Belgium and France. The Germans are said to have retired on the right bank of the Yser, but seem to be preparing for a new movement in the vicinity of Ypres. The Allies made slight progress yesterday between Dixmude and the Lys.

The Germans report that their attack on Ypres is progressing successfully. Attacks by the Allies to the south of Verdun and in the Vosges have been repulsed, it is said.

The Russians report that the Austro-German Army is in retreat along the whole battle front. In East Prussia the Russians have captured Barkalarjewo and driven the left wing of the German Army back toward Biala and Lyck. The rear guard of the German Army is said to be retreating toward the frontier, while the Austrians, after being severely defeated, are also retiring.

The German reports state that the Austrians have retreated to take up previously selected positions.

Few further details have been received as to the naval engagement between the German and British cruisers off the Coast of Chile. The British cruiser Good Hope, last reported on fire, has not yet been heard from. A merchant vessel Captain who arrived in Valparaiso yesterday, reported that a strong Japanese fleet was cruising in the Pacific.

A fleet of German warships is said to have been gathered off the Aland Island, in the Baltic, opposite the Gulf of Finland.

The Japanese report that their forces before Tsing-tau have destroyed twenty-six German guns and captured 800 men. The Japanese are now said to be attacking the German trenches, and the fall of the fort is expected soon.

SAY GERMANS SOUGHT TO DECOY BIG SHIPS

Coast Raid Interpreted as Mine Lure for British—Fate of the Good Hope a Mystery.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—Next to the Turkish situation, the appearance of German warships off the coast of England is causing most of the discussion in this country today. There is a disposition among naval men to believe that no serious raid was intended, but that the Germans hoped to induce British warships to follow them and, by laying mines as they retired, to catch some of the bigger ships, as they did the submarine D-5.

The fact that the Germans did lay mines seems to indicate to the naval experts here that the ships engaged in this work were old ones. These experts argue that Germany would not take such risks with new vessels. As if to prove their contention, the experts say that the firing at the British cruiser Halcyon, which resulted in slight damage to that vessel, showed the Germans were not armed with modern guns.

The Admiralty has issued a statement in which it says it has received from German sources details of a naval engagement off the Chilean coast in which the British cruiser Monmouth was sunk and the cruiser Good Hope severely damaged. The statement says the Admiralty has no confirmation of the report.

Admiralty Discredits Report.

The statement was issued through the official Press Bureau in the name of the Secretary of the Admiralty and said:

"Rumors and reports have been received at the Admiralty from various sources of a naval battle having occurred off the Chilean coast. The Admiralty has no official confirmation of this, and such accounts as they have received rest admittedly on German evidence.

"It is reported that the Scharnhorst, Gneiseau, Leipzig, Dresden, and Nürnberg concentrated near Valparaiso, and that an engagement was fought with a portion of Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock's squadron on Sunday last. The German report asserts that the Monmouth was sunk, the Good Hope was very severely damaged, and that the Glasgow and the armed auxiliary cruiser Otranto broke off the action and escaped.

"The Admiralty cannot accept these facts as accurate at present, for the battleship Canopus, which specially was sent to strengthen Rear Admiral Cradock's squadron and which would have given him a decided superiority, is not mentioned in the report. Further, although five German ships concentrated in Chilean waters only three entered Valparaiso harbor. It is possible, therefore, that when the full account of the action is received it may considerably modify the German version. Effective measures have been taken to deal with the situation in any event."

The Admiralty announces that one officer and twenty men were lost in the sinking of the British submarine D-5 by a German mine in the North Sea yesterday.

That four German dreadnoughts and four German cruisers took part in yesterday's engagement off the east coast of England is confirmed by the crew of the steam drifter Garrigill. According to the skipper of the drifter, the German ships appeared through the mist about sixteen miles northeast of Lowestoft at 7 o'clock in the morning. The firing at the cruiser Halcyon lasted fifteen minutes.

The skipper also says that two British submarines in addition to the D-5, which was sunk by a mine, pursued the Germans.

GERMAN CRUISER SUNK BY A MINE

The Yorck Wrecked in Jade Bay, London Hears—Had Crew of 557 Men.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 5.—4.09 A. M.—The German cruiser Yorck has struck a mine in Jade Bay and sunk.

The information regarding the loss of the Yorkc reached London in an Amsterdam dispatch to the Reuter's Telegram Company. It said that an official dispatch from Berlin announced that the Yorck on the forenoon of Nov. 4, struck a mine chain blocking the entrance to Jade Bay and sank. Late reports assert that 382 men, more than half of the crew, had already been saved, but that the rescue work was hampered by a thick fog.

Jade Bay is an inlet of the North Sea, about seventy-five miles square, just west of the mouth of the River Weser. The great naval station of Wilhelmshaven guards its entrance.

The Yorck was placed in commission in May, 1906, and had a displacement of 9,500 tons, with a length of 404 feet, a beam of 65 feet and an indicated speed of 21 knots. She carried 557 men and her main battery consisted of four 8.2 inch guns, with a secondary battery of ten 6-inch, fourteen 24-pounder, and four machine guns. The Yorck had four torpedo tubes. She was a sister ship of the Roon.

300,000 PRISONERS HELD BY GERMANY

These Are of Fighting Men Alone, Russia Contributing Nearly Half of the Number.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The magnitude of this war is illustrated by the number of prisoners taken.

Just how many Germans and Austrians are captured is unknown, but there are trustworthy figures from Berlin which show that the Germans have taken what in other wars would comprise great armies.

There were in the German detention camps on Oct. 14 approximately 140,000 Russians, 125,000 French, 30,000 Belgians, and 9,000 English. The total is over 300,000.

This is exclusive, according to information received here, of the civilians whom the Germans have taken from France and Belgium in great numbers.

Until these figures were received it was believed Germany's prisoners totaled only about 250,000, including civilians.

French Recover Lost Ground Only to be Beaten Back by Furious Onslaught.

PARIS, Nov. 4, 11 P. M.—The War Office this evening gave out this bulletin:

There is no important modification in the situation to report.

In the north we have made slight progress toward Messines.

To the east artillery duels at several points of the front have taken place without any great results, notably at the west of Lens, between the Somme and the Ancre, in the Argonne and in the forest of Aprémont.

This bulletin was given out in the afternoon:

On our left wing, to the north, the situation shows no change as compared to yesterday. The enemy has drawn back on the right bank of the Yser. We have recaptured Lombaertzyde. The Germans occupy on the left bank of the Yser nothing more than the head of a bridge halfway between Dixmude and Nieuport. They have abandoned, in addition to prisoners and wounded men, a considerable quantity of war material, including pieces of artillery, which were held immovable by the mud.

Between Dixmude and the Lys the fighting has continued with alternate advances and withdrawals, but with the general result that the allied forces have made perceptible progress.

Between the Lys and the region of Arras there have been cannonading and minor engagements.

Between the region of Arras and the Oise we have made an advance to the east of Le Quesnoy-en-Santerre as far as the heights of Parvillers.

On the centre, the German attack which developed on the right bank of the Aisne in the region of Vailly, and which resulted in our losing the first slopes to the north of Vailly and to the north of Craonne, was not continued yesterday. A counter-attack by our forces brought again into our possession a portion of the lost ground.

A violent cannonading and spirited German attacks were repulsed on the heights of the Highway des Dames and in the vicinity of Rheims. There has been no happening of importance between Rheims and the Meuse nor in the Woevre district.

On our right wing, in Lorraine, there is nothing new to report.

Germans Report Successes.

BERLIN, (via London,) Nov. 4.—An official communication, given out at German Army Headquarters today, read:

Our attacks on Ypres, to the north of Arras, and to the east of Soissons are progressing slowly, but successfully.

South of Verdun and in the Vosges French attacks have been repulsed.

EXPECT A NEW ASSAULT.

Allied Staffs Said to Look for Attack Near Ypres.

LONDON Nov. 4.—A Belgian Socialist Senator, who returned today from an official visit to King Albert, said that the Allies were now within ten miles of Ostend, but he did not believe that the Germans were preparing for a general retreat through Belgium, but rather for a supreme assault, which would be made at a point southeast of Ypres.

The Senator estimates that the Germans have 500,000 men in the district mentioned, but said that it was the general impression of the Allied Staffs that the German effort would be a failure, because their troops were not only very weary, but also were largely made up of youthful and aged recruits.

When the German march down the coast began, the Senator said, scarcely any one on the ground expected that they would be kept out of Calais. Now the opinion was freely expressed that the Germans never would reach their objective.

That the Allies have been throwing fresh forces into Belgium is indicated in the official report today from the British front, which speaks of both forces from home and Indian troops in that area of hostilities, and adds: "Reinforcements of every description have been sent to meet the threatened attack."

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 4, (via London.)—A dispatch to the Telegraaf from Sluis says:

"Heavy gun firing is heard in the triangle of Dixmude, Roulers, and Ypres, indicating that a severe battle is raging in that neighborhood.

"It is believed that the Germans will now attempt to break through the allied lines there and force their way by way of Ypres to Dunkirk, but that they will find it very difficult to cross the morasses in the vicinity of the Upper Yser, caused by the inundations."

REPORTS FURTHER RETREAT.

Correspondent Says Germans Are Falling Back to a New Line.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 4, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—A frontier correspondent telegraphs that it is evident that the Germans are in retreat on the whole front from Nieuport to the River Lys by way of Roulers. Heavy fighting took place between Dixmude, Roulers, and Ypres, and the Germans were obliged to retire, owing to stubborn attacks and the endurance of the allied troops. Dixmude is in the possession of the Allies.

It is said that detachments of the Belgian troops have reached Thielt and occupied that place; but no confirmation is at hand.

It is believed that the Germans are taking up new positions along a line from Ostend via Bruges, Ghent, Alost, and Brussels.

Gen. von der Goltz went to Ghent and informed Burgomaster Braun that the factories must deliver their raw material to the German authorities. Upon this, the Burgomaster replied that this decision would involve the closing of all the factories, and that 50,000 workmen would be unemployed. The gravest troubles are feared in consequence.

GERMANS GAIN NEAR VAILLY.

Push Back a French Force and Capture Some Cannon.

PARIS, Thursday Nov. 5.—Alternate gains and losses by each side marked the struggle between the Allies and the Germans along the extended battle front in France and Belgium on Wednesday, according to officers who have returned from the fighting zone. The French and English troops, these officers say, made considerable progress near Dixmude and the Lys. On the other hand, the Germans are reported to have gained a small amount of territory in the region of Vailly and Chavonne.

The heaviest fighting of the day was in this region, where the Germans, heartened by Tuesday's appreciable advance, endeavored to continue their success. The Allies, aided by reinforcements, are said to have blocked the furious attacks of the Germans to a large extent, and a small detachment of Frenchmen, although they met with heavy resistance at a bridge on the Aisne, succeeded in pushing on and gaining high ground, commanding the enemy's position.

From this point the French opened a raking fire on the Germans, but they were not sufficient in number to withstand the furious onslaught that followed and were compelled to retire to avoid being cut to pieces. The few cannon taken by the Germans, it is said, were put out of commission before the retreat.

ALLIES DESTROY VILLAGES.

Adopt German Tactics of Leaving No Places for Shelter.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ON THE SOMME, Nov. 2, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—This district is by far the most war-scarred of any I have yet visited in France. It was the French who began the offensive movement with a bombardment by artillery for the purpose of razing to the ground certain small towns and villages in which the Germans have been finding harborage.

There has perhaps in the past been a little too much of natura' sentiment in our warfare, whereby we have been prone to spare villages as far as possible from utter annihilation, but I am assured that on superior orders such sentiment must no longer exist. In view of the Germans' tactics, it is misplaced. This is, and apparently must be, a war of stern extermination, in which the natural feelings must be ruthlessly repressed.

The whole of the country places around Bapaume, Albert, Chaulnes, and Péronne are laid waste, and these last two days of bombardment have completed the destruction. A considerable town like Albert of just 10,000 inhabitants has not a single resident left in it nor a house standing. Even the old church tower had to go in common with all in the district, because in this part of the country where open, flattish ground is the rule, such places afforded admirable lookout stations. The Germans first realized this, or perhaps, rather, were the first to proceed to obliterate those held by the Allies.

When one reads such an entry in the list of those mentioned in dispatches for distinguished conduct as that of Capt. Alavoine signalling from a church tower remained at his post even when it was being fired on by German artillery one cannot really be surprised if the Germans demolished the church tower. Now in self-defence the French are acting in similar fashion and it was their fire which made the ruin of Albert complete and destroyed the church steeple. Similarly all villages offering strategical advantages to the invaders have been ruthlessly destroyed and the result has been a very appreciable improvement in our position.

In the Somme Department previous to the fight the enemy occupied a line roughly running from Lassigny, Roye, Chaulnes, Péronne, to Bapaume, with here and there advanced posts in precisely such little villages as has been referred to; but this battle, which was largely one of artillery, ended entirely in our favor. We have cleared away this advanced guard, and among other successes have reoccupied Péronne town, which had been taken and retaken many times these last weeks.

The Germans are all ready for a further retreat. I saw yesterday some more refugees who had come in from beyond the German lines. They report that the Germans are busily carting away loot on everything that can roll on wheels, and that every animal that can pull has been commandeered for that purpose. The peasants are compelled to drive. The destination is unknown, but the fact is sufficiently illuminating of itself.

FIGHT 700,000 GERMANS THREE DAYS AND WIN

British Receive Foe with Hidden Pits—Retreat and Then Gain.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

NORTHERN FRANCE, Nov. 4, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—Fighting against terrific odds, the allied army has frustrated an attempt of 700,000 Germans to break their lines between Ypres and Lille. They gained a tremendous victory.

It was a three days' battle in which the storming of trenches and bayonet charges were hourly occurrences. The fighting began Wednesday. The greatest effort of the Germans was concentrated on the British at Ypres. They had given up hope of defeating the Allies on the coast and to envelope them by a turning movement. They were, indeed, in danger of being themselves enveloped.

So on Wednesday night a general advance on the Allies' positions to the north of Ypres was ordered. For three days the battle proceeded with charges and counter charges by infantry and cavalry.

The first impetus of the German onset was easily brought to a standstill by the Allies. Tremendous losses were incurred in this mad charge, and bodies were littered two and three deep over the first 100 yards of their advance. In places the bodies rose like hedges and impeded the progress of the second and third German assault.

But numbers must soon tell, and the fresh battalions of the Germans, who always appeared behind those who had been wiped out by the hundreds by the Allies' shot and shell arrived through the sheer momentum of the charge in a huge mass in the neighborhood of the trenches.

The British forces were prepared for this. About twenty-five yards in front of the trenches deep pits had been dug, some of them twenty feet deep and some twenty feet wide. These were covered with branches and loose turf, just as at Bannockburn centuries ago, and into these the Germans fell in heaps, calling out when too late they discovered this stratagem.

The allied troops continued to bring down as many as possible before they reached the pits in order that these should not be filled too quickly, but the Germans, although they more than filled the pits, came on in greater numbers and sustained the charge with great vigor.

The pits had now become a scene of horror. The Germans struggled, cried, and fought with one another in the vain hope of extricating themselves. Many were transfixed by the jagged-edged bayonets of those who had fallen before them and others were shot by their friends' rifles. On one occasion a shell fell into one of the pits on the right wing of the British and hundreds of men were blown out of existence.

The British, still clinging to their trenches, shot down the Germans who tried to step over the bodies in the pit and when this became impossible they prepared for fight at close quarters with their bayonets.

I am informed that the struggle for the first line of trenches continued for nearly twenty-four hours. The carnage was not one-sided in such desperate encounters, and the trenches were filled with bodies, German and British. The superior numbers of the Germans compelled the British to retire on the second day, for the fighting had proceeded with unabated vigor.

The British had retreated about five miles when the third day of battle dawned. A general advance was then called, and the British regiments dashed against the Germans in a final shock. Their charges were irresistible, and they swept everything before them.

The Germans had reckoned without the British supporting army, which came into action on Saturday—an army of fresh young men like the London Scottish, who were asked to join it at the eleventh hour, and had not been fatigued in the wet and muddy trenches.

This army sprang to the attack and took the Germans by surprise. The sting of their onslaught drove the Germans speedily over the ground they had gained on previous day. On and on they charged over fifteen miles of country.

After the three days' fighting the British troops are now nearly ten miles in advance of their positions of last week. The supreme effort of the Germans has consequently failed.

GO MAD IN FLANDERS FLOOD.

Germans' Sufferings Horrible — Ambulance Service Inadequate.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

IN NORTHERN FRANCE, Nov. 4 (Dispatch to The London Chronicle.)—The life of the Kaiser's soldiers in the flooded trenches, where they stand knee-deep in water, is horrible in the extreme. Suitable food is lacking; there are practically no medical comforts for the men, and disease has made its appearance and is ravaging the ranks of those whom British shrapnel has overlooked. The mental and physical strain of these long vigils, in which one is always looking death in the face, has affected the morale of the stolid, phlegmatic Germans much more than it has that of the allied troops. They have become jumpy and are developing what old soldiers call "Mauseritis." They flinch when under fire and will not readily abandon the shelter of their trenches to attack in the open.

I have been told that under the awful strain many German soldiers have gone mad after days and nights without repose and with cold, hunger, one's own dead as inseparable companions, and the presence of British snipers 300 yards away to heighten the grim reality of this Belgian inferno.

Some German prisoners whom I have seen bore only a remote resemblance to human beings. Their beards had grown to an inordinate length and the hair of even the comparatively young had become white. In one position near Ypres captured by the British the German dead had been lying in the trenches for days.

The suffering of the German wounded is one o the most appalling features of the present struggle in Belgium. When mortally stricken they are often left to die because ambulances and surgical aid are not procurable. Every wounded German who is able to walk has to find his way unaided to the field or base hospital. It is often a task beyond the ebbing strength of the injured. Their bodies strew the route from the German firing line back to Ostend.

Discard Conspicuous Uniforms, Too, to Foil Sharpshooters.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—It is an open secret that the remarkably high proportion of French officers killed in the war is due to the conspicuousness of their uniform, which is entirely different from that of the soldiers. During attacks on the German trenches the Germans are accustomed to post sharpshooters in trees and other points of vantage, who pick off the French officers easily, distinguishing them by their flashing swords as well as by their uniforms and the fact that French officers lead the charges. The French have now taken a hint from the English, whose officers are undistinguished save by almost unnoticeable chevrons.

I learn that the French officers are henceforth to be uniformed like their men, to carry no swords, and to direct charges from the rear, being specially instructed to remember the last point. The order emphasizes the superior value of officers to their country and the difficulty of replacing them, since their training takes years, while private soldiers are ready to fight after a few months' practice.

KING GEORGE VISITS CANADIANS IN CAMP

Praises Them for Their Material and Moral Aid to the Empire.

32,000 ON SALISBURY PLAIN

They Complain of English Weather, but Keep Up Their Spirits and Smart Appearance.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—King George and Queen Mary paid a visit to the Canadian contingent in its camp on Salisbury Plain to-day.

"Salisbury Plain is exactly like any bit of country you could see in America west of the Great Lakes," said a Canadian officer to a London Times correspondent. "It is typical of Alberta or Saskatchewan."

The officer had just arrived at the camp, but men who had been there a fortnight said that there was one great difference between England and Canada and they complained loudly about it as they sat around a stove in the big green Young Men's Christian Association tent at Pond Farm, where more than 10,000 of them are encamped.

"We have seen more rain in the last two weeks than we see in America in six months, and that's a great difference," they said.

It is twenty miles from the old English town of Salisbury to the camp. The last ten miles are over roads which are one continuous mud slide. The big motor transport wagons have churned the tracks to sludge pudding a foot deep.

Twelve thousand letters a day are sent out of camp directed to America; so a few people across the Atlantic are being told about it.

The principal things wanted by the Canadian troops are pens, ink, and paper with which to write home. They are the greatest letter writers of the British Army. The little baize-covered tables are crowded with men who are forever directing envelopes with "Canada" written at the bottom, though many put "U. S. A." there instead. The men sometimes demand things which the canteen is apparently unable to supply—tooth powder and paste, for instance. Thousands of tins have been sold in the marquees, in which little shops have been established. The prices are kept very low, and the Canadians are surprised at what they can buy for a shilling. They are very fond of chocolate, but when they ask for chewing gum they do not get it, for there is none to be had. They buy a great deal of brass polish for the buttons on their uniforms, and, as many of them have colds, owing to the wet, they are forever asking for patent cough mixtures, common in America, but whose very names are unknown in England.

There are only two women in the whole camp of 32,000. They take charge of the shop in the green marquee at Pond Farm and serve out chocolate, candles, soap, handkerchiefs, and towels. The men have bought many little oil stoves to warm themselves as they sit in their own tents.

Visitors to the camp have been struck by two things besides the continuous mud. The first is the good class of men represented in the Canadian contingent—their education and social behavior, and their pleasant and cheerful manners. Rowdyism appears almost unknown, and they are neither cock-sure nor unduly meek. Respecting themselves, they look for respect from others, and they get it.

The second point noted is the fine quality of the horses they have brought over. They are quite different from the English breeds, seeming lighter, nimbler and quicker on their feet.

There is a library in camp for the use, of which a fee of threepence is charged, (six cents.) The stories of W. W. Jacobs are in greatest demand. "The Soldier's Book of Ninety Camp Songs," (price one penny) has been sold by thousands.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—King George after inspecting the Canadian troops today expressed pleasure at having the opportunity to welcome them to the mother country.

"Their prompt rally to the Empire's call," said the King, "is of inestimable value both to the fighting strength of my army and in the evidence it gives of the solidarity of the Empire. The general appearance and the physical standard of the different units are highly creditable, and I am glad to hear of the serious and earnest spirit which pervades all ranks."

GERMANS LACK OFFICERS.

Kaiser Decrees That Promotions May Be Made on Short Service.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 3, (Dispatch to The London Standard.)—The German Army is suffering from a shortage of officers. The Berliner Nachrichten makes the following complaint in this connection:

"The uninterrupted and exhausting marches, attended with heavy losses, have greatly decreased the corps of our officers. Officers are subject to nervous distress and frequently turn out to be unsuitable in active service. Things went so far that in many places on the western front one Lieutenant had command of two or three battalions.

"The War Office is making heroic efforts to fill the gaps thus created in the officers' corps. The Emperor has issued a decree according to which all persons who have a higher education will be promoted to officers after three months' service."

CABINET MAKE-UP SETTLED.

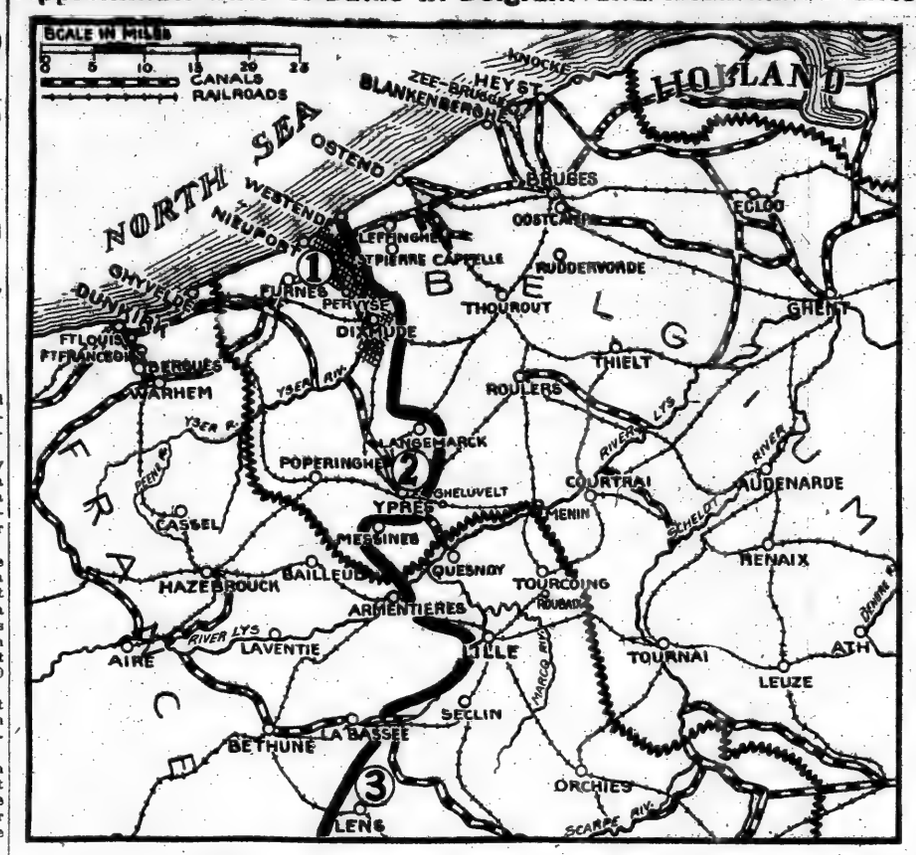
Tentative Italian Appointments Officially Announced Yesterday.

ROME, Nov. 4.—The make-up of the new Italian Cabinet, as announced tentatively last night, was today declared to be official.

Signor Salandra retains the posts of Premier and Minister of the Interior. Baron Sidney Sonnino is Minister of Foreign Affairs; Paolo Carcano, Minister of the Treasury, and Vittorio E. Orlando, Minister of Justice. The other portfolios will be retained by the same men who held them under Signor Salandra in the last Cabinet.

The most prominent man in the new Cabinet is Baron Sonnino, who for years has been the leader of the Constitutional Opposition in the Chamber of Deputies. He is well known as a political economist and his reform schemes made him Premier in 1906, in 1911 he, together with Count Gr'occiardini, who had been Minister of War in his Cabinet, visited Tripoli and personally followed the operations of the troops against the Turks. This experience made him a convert to Italian territorial expansion.

Approximate Line of Battle in Belgium and Northwest France



1. The shaded portion here represents the district, flooded by the waters of the Yser, which forced the withdrawal of the Germans from the left (west) bank of the river. According to the French official report the Kaiser's troops have been driven across the river between Nieuport and Dixmude except at one bridge, and have lost some artillery by their retirement.

2. Berlin says the attacks on Ypres continues, and Paris records some alternate advances and withdrawals between Dixmude and the Lys. The French report says the Allies have made some progress toward Messines. It is in this region or to the southward that the Allies look for a fresh Germap assault with a view to breaking through the lines.

3. An artillery is reported to be proceeding west of Liens.

BOLD AIRMAN PLAYS HIS GAME WITH GLEE

Swoops Down on German Camp and Escapes--Finds Foe's Battery and Wins General's Praise.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

NORTHERN FRANCE, Nov. 4, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—The Germans have been bringing up more big guns of the "Jack Johnson" caliber, urged on by the idea that if they cannot drive the Allies back they can demolish them with the never-ceasing demoniacal roar and shattering of their huge missiles.

Awful is the clamor of it. It never stops, and for miles around the country shakes as if an earthquake was tearing at its vitals.

I was well behind this battering yesterday in a little town, perched upon a fortified hill, within a bow shot of the frontier line. What little wind there was came from the southeast and so it brought the tumult nearer. It was fearful.

The early evening air was superlatively clear. The sky was a serene blue with here and there little feathers of cloud sweeping high overhead, twisting and turning into all manner of fantastic shapes while the westward sun rolled a splendid blazing ball of fire.

The warmth of Summer had come back to make beauty and peace on the November afternoon—peace but for those terrific soul-destroying guns, which never tire and never sleep, but only rest for a brief few minutes to cool their flaming throats.

High up in the blue the aeroplanes were hawking the air in loops and circles and darting swallowlike. The English birds were up and about their pretty game, avid and untiring as swifts on a Summer evening.

I saw nothing of the German machines. Too many of their wings have been clipped the last week or two for their venturing anywhere within range of snipers, the pompon shells, and the new anti-aircraft shells, packed with light shrapnel, which have been doing so much aerial damage of late.

The British air work was magnificently daring. The crack flier of the army is a young officer. Every day and all day he is up and about and doing wonderful things with the utmost abandon. The other morning, up ahead of the lark, he volplaned from a great height like a falling arrow right in the midst of the German lines as if he intended to settle among them or at least make a brief morning call for breakfast.

The Germans were too astonished for the moment to do anything but gasp and gape at him. He was not only within point-blank range of the infantry fire—a wide calibre popgun could have easily plugged him. He impudently stopped his engine, dropped half dozen puffs, as the Tommies call the aeroplane bombs, into a cavalry cluster, waved his hand and off and up he went again.

Hundreds of rifle shots whirred around him as he fled. Two of them struck him, and three minutes later he was down in the British lines once more with blood trickling through rents in his tunic. He was patched up and bandaged, had a hearty luncheon, and before tea time he was up again in one of his mad frolics in the air.

"Surely you've had enough for one day," said Gen. (name elided by censor). "Have a rest at least until tomorrow. We don't want to lose these matinée performances of yours. They're too fine for anything."

But the young officer jammed his armored helmet on his head and said that he couldn't resist it. It was great fun and kept him fit. Of course, if the General absolutely refused, then—

"By all means go, if you are so keen on it," replied the General with a laugh. So off he went, and the General and his staff watched the show from the balcony of a tall house at (name elided by censor) which is at present the headquarters of the British division.

This particular afternoon the young officer excelled himself. An extremely well-screened German battery was doing nasty work from behind a slight rise at the back of the German trenches. This was the airman's quarry. Up and up he went in quick climbing spirals, and when he was at a height of 2,000 feet he poised for a spell to spot the lurking place of the battery. His first signal was for the gunners to plant their shells immediately below him. They fired.

The shells fell some distance to the right, and did no more damage than to dismantle further an already dismantled camp.

The airman next signaled to tell the the range finders to swing their guns more to the left. Again it was too far. Again he signaled, and this time the first of the shells wrecked the timber of the foremost Prussian gun, smashing up horses and men alike. Instantly the airman indicated that the range had been found at last, and then shell after shell burst over and among the battery, which had been flogging the Allies so mercilessly earlier in the day.

In five minutes all that were left of the battery crew broke away from the cunning screen, in the making of which so much craft had been employed, and fled across country. The general, who had been watching this with tremendous interest through his field glasses, clapped his hands and danced to and fro along the veranda.

"Splendid! Magnificent!" he cried. "The best show I've ever witnessed. That man must have a heart of steel in a body of iron."

The General congratulated the laughing officer, when he came down to mother earth, once more tired but still jubilant. He congratulated him and shook his hand.

"You're almost too good to last," he said, and the airman only laughed.

GERMANS MAY NOT USE BOY SCOUTS IN FIELD

Minister of War Forbids Such Work as Carrying Food to Men in the Trenches.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROTTERDAM, Nov. 4, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—There is little doubt that Boy Scouts have been used by the Germans for carrying ammunition, Red Cross requisites, and food to the troops in the trenches. As a result of newspaper articles on the subject, the German Minister of War has issued an order, which appears in the Vossische Zeitung, that the use of boys for these purposes is strictly forbidden in the future.

Not only have Boy Scouts been used for the purposes enumerated, but in a good many cases, it is stated here, they have been used as spies on the Belgian civilian population.

GHENT HEARS CANNONADING.

Amsterdam Has Report of Germans Being Forced Back.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—"The sound of cannon has been distinctly heard at Ghent," telegraphs the Amsterdam correspondent of the Central News, "and there is every indication that the Germans are retiring on the whole front from Bruges to Thielt, fifteen miles southeast of Bruges."

A Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam says:

"According to the correspondent of the Telegraaf at Sluis the fighting on the Yser was very severe yesterday. It is reported that the Allies forced the Germans back to the village of Jabbeke, between Ostend and Bruges. Several trains, filled with fresh troops from Ostend, passed through Bruges without stopping.

"The Germans at Bruges are expecting an attack from the Allies. All the drawbridges are raised at nightfall."

A dispatch from Rotterdam to the Daily Mail, dated Tuesday night, says:

"This morning British aeroplanes dropped bombs on the State railway works at Bruges, in Belgium, doing great damage. At 4 o'clock this afternoon another British war plane dropped bombs on Bruges.

RUSSIAN INVASION OF ARMENIA BEGUN

Several Towns Taken—Czar Has Splendid Native Soldiers to Fight the Turks.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Tuesday, Nov. 3, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—Last Thursday an order was given to the Caucasion Army to cross the frontier to Turkey, and a Russian force is now in all probability on its way to Erzerum.

The Turks have, north of Erzerum, three army corps and about 50,000 Kurd cavalry. The campaign in this wild, mountainous Armenian region will mean considerable hardship at this season of the year, but it will certainly be a most picturesque episode of the great war.

Russia has magnificent resources for this kind of warfare. As the most distinguished of Caucasian scholars, Prof. Marr, points out today, the peoples of the Caucasus, despite their dissatisfaction with certain features of Russian administration, have, during the last few years, begun vividly to realise the benefits of Russian culture, and, at this extremely critical moment, are eager to demonstrate their solidarity with Russia.

I have seen many Georgian, Armenian and Tartar wounded who have fought bravely and cheerfully against such a distant enemy as Germany, but the Armenians will fight for the liberation of their brethren in Turkey, and those born warriors, the Georgians, have ancient accounts to settle with their former oppressors.

Among the Mohammedans of the Caucasus there has been a certain amount of Turkish propaganda, but it has not availed to heal the breach between distinctive peoples, to subordinate national feeling to religious fanaticism.

From the crags and defiles of Daghestan and the Western Caucasus, lithe Mohammedans and half-heathen mountaineers have been pouring down to join the newly formed cavalry division under the command of the Czar's brother, the Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch. They are well equipped, and will be more than a match for the Kurds when, with daggers in their teeth, they rush forward in wild charges.

In Asia Minor the Russians will almost certainly meet with a friendly reception from the Armenians. The Young Turkish régime has brought many promises, but no real improvement to their lot. For political reasons the Armenian leaders for some years have co-operated with the Young Turks, but lately they have assumed an independent attitude, pursued a Sinn Fein policy, and taken care to arm the Christians in Van and Erzerum as a precaution against Kurdish attacks.

From what I know of these leaders, they will be delighted to cut short their wearisome, hopeless negotiations with the bankrupt Young Turks and follow the impulse of the heart of their people. The Caucasian Armenians are certainly convinced that they are bringing their kinsmen deliverance.

BERLIN, Nov. 4, (by Wireless Telegraphy to Sayville, L. I.)—The following information was given out to the press from official quarters today:

"The first encounters on the Turkish frontier in which Turkish soldiers met Russian forces from the Caucasus resulted unsuccessfully for the Russians."

Say Forts Were Not Damaged.

BERLIN, Nov. 4, (by Wireless Telegraphy to Sayville, L. I.)—Dispatches from Constantinople say that a British squadron bombarded the Dardanelles forts at daybreak on Nov. 3. They did no damage. The firing was at an extreme range and lasted fifteen minutes.

Simultaneously, it is reported, two British cruisers fired a few shots at the seaport of Jaffa, Palestine, but retired under the fire of Turkish artillery.

ROME, Nov. 4.—A telegram from Salonika says that the bombardment of the Dardanelles by the Anglo-French fleet continues most effectively, while the reply from the Turkish forts is causing no damage, the ships being out of the range of the land guns.

The telegram adds that the outcome of the duel has excited feverish anxiety all along the Aegean coast.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 4.—The Russian General Staff headquarters issued the following tonight:

"The Turkish fleet is concentrated in the Black Sea, with a base in the Bosphorus. Apparently it is trying to avoid a fight with our forces."

PARIS, Nov. 4.—The Echo de Paris publishes a dispatch from Bellegarde, on the Swiss frontier, saying that an Anglo-French squadron attacked the Turkish gunboat Dura and the steamer Kiroli at the entrance of the Gulf of Tchesne, near Smyrna.

The Turks themselves sank both vessels in order to prevent them from falling into the hands of the enemy.

Jeddah, or Jiddah, is the most important trading port on the Red Sea. It is on the coast of the Province of Hejaz, Arabia, sixty-five miles northwest of Mecca, and an immense number of pilgrims bound to or from that sacred city pass through it every year.

The town contains a tomb that is said by the natives to be that of Eve. Jeddah is a picturesque place, with many white minarets and houses of limestone. It is walled and fortified, and has a population that includes members of almost every nationality of Europe and Asia, though Arabs predominate. The inhabitants number about 30,000.

Though it has lost some of its commerce, Jeddah is still a market for pearls, coral, spices, coffee, aromatic herbs, and many other distinctively Oriental products. It has belonged to Turkey since 1840. In 1858 there was a massacre of Christian missionaries in the city and a month later the place was besieged by British warships.

COMMAND TURKISH FORCES.

Torgut, Izzet, and Shukri Appointed—Cabinet Resignations.

BERLIN, Nov. 4, (via The Hague and London.)—The Frankfurter Zeitung publishes a dispatch from Vienna saying that Torgut Pasha has been appointed Commander in Chief of the Dardanelles and the Bosporus, and that Izzet Pasha and Shukri Pasha have taken command of Turkish armies.

A large number of Turkish vessels and recently purchased merchantmen have been changed into auxiliary cruisers, the Vienna dispatch adds.

CONSTANTINOPLE, (Via Sofia and London,) Nov. 4.—Djavid Bey, the Minister of Finance, resigned today. His place in the Cabinet is being filled temporarily by Talaat Bey, Minister of the Interior.

Djavid Bey's resignation was fully expected, as he has always expressed disapproval of war.

TURKISH AMBASSADORS QUIT

Our Embassy in London to Look After Ottoman Interests There.

CONSTANTINOPLE, (via Berlin and London,) Nov. 4.—The Porte has recalled the Ambassadors to France and Great Britain, the Chargé d'Affaires at Petrograd, and the Minister to Servia.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The Foreign Office today handed his passports to the Turkish Ambassador, Tewfik Pasha. The Ambassador will leave London tomorrow.

The American Embassy has taken over the affairs of the Turkish Embassy. The First Secretary of the American Embassy, Irwin B. Laughlin, visited the Turkish Ambassador today to discuss the details of the transfer.

Tewfik Pasha declined to make any statement. In the course of the morning he had a conference at the Foreign Office, and at its conclusion received his passports. This afternoon he again visited the Foreign Office, presumably for a farewell call.

In the meantime the other officials and the servants at the embassy were busy packing the documents and personal belongings of the Ambassador and his staff.

The Government made preparations to assure the safe conduct from the country of the Ambassador and his family and suite.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—Rifaat Pasha, the Turkish Ambassador, asked for his passports, which were handed to him at Bordeaux this morning.

He departed tonight.

DISAVOW TURKEY'S ACTION.

Ottomans in Paris Hope for the Success of the Allied Powers.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—A statement signed by a number of Ottomans and made public here today says the Turkish colony in Paris disavows the policy of the governing party in Turkey, which represents neither the sympathy nor the opinion of the country.

It is added that the colony here absolutely refuses to take up arms against the Triple Entente, whose success is most fervently desired.

AMERICAN WARSHIP AT BEIRUT

Sent There to Protect Christians—No Alarm for Missionaries.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Nov. 4, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—An American warship has arrived at Beirut to protect the Christian population in Asia Minor.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Government officials expect to receive tomorrow from Great Britain and France formal notification of the existence of a state of war with Turkey.

President Wilson has hesitated to issue a proclamation of neutrality until the situation becomes more definite. A notification by the powers of the Triple Entente of the existence of a state of war with Turkey is now expected as a matter of course, following the official statement at Petrograd that Russian troops have crossed the Turkish frontier and the official announcement of the bombardment of the Dardanelles forts by an Anglo-French fleet.

American missionaries are not apprehensive of any anti-Christian outburst as a result of the war, according to private advices reaching here. That hostilities were inevitable has long been realized by the missionaries, and they have prepared for all emergencies. Some of the missionary societies have advised their workers to go to the coast towns from the interior, but Ambassador Morgenthau, at Constantinople, has given no indication that such a course is necessary, and officials are taking it for granted that Americans are safe and will not be molested.

RUSSIAN BATTLESHIP SUNK.

The Sinope Destroyed by Turkish Warships, a Berlin Paper Says.

AMSTERDAM Nov. 4.—The Vossische Zeitung of Berlin publishes a dispatch from Sofia, saying that Turkish warships have sunk the Russian battleship Sinope.

The dispatch does not say when or where the encounter took place.

The Sinope was laid down in 1884 and launched at Sevastopol in 1887. She was 339 feet long, had 60 feet beam, and displaced 11,230 tons. She had an armament of six 12-inch guns, seven 6-inch guns, and four 3-pounders. Her complement is given as 650 men.

TELLS JAPAN OF THE GEIER.

Embassy Notified of Status of German Ship at Hawaii.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—The Japanese Embassy has been notified that the State Department has ordered the German cruiser Geier to leave Honolulu before a certain date or be interned until the end of the war. The date was not, however, given to the Japanese Embassy because it was considered it would be a violation of neutrality to put the Japanese naval commanders in possession of the hour of the Geier's departure, should the German cruiser's Captain decide to make a dash to sea.

Japan had asked the United States about the status of the Geier.

GERMAN RETREAT FROM RUSSIANS IS NOW GENERAL

Defensive Line in East Prussia Falling Back, Czar's General Staff Announces.

VISTULA ARMIES IN FLIGHT

Pursuing Forces Cross the Wartha River After Driving Rear Guard from Kola.

AUSTRIANS MEET DISASTER

15,000 Men, 200 Officers, and Many Guns Captured—Front from Kielce to Sandomierz Smashed.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 4.—The following official communication from the Russian General Staff headquarters was given out here tonight:

A sudden change has been noted since Nov. 2 on the East Prussian front, where the enemy, who recently had been on the defensive almost everywhere, has begun to fall back at certain points. This retreat is precipitate on the left wing of the enemy, which was vigorously thrown back toward Biala and Lyck. Our troops took Bakalargewo, capturing a large quantity of arms and ammunition and making prisoners of a German company.

On the left bank of the Vistula the Germans continue their precipitate retreat toward the frontier. Their rear guards have been dislodged from Kola and Przedborz. On the morning of Nov. 3 we drove back the Austrians beyond Kielce, which place our troops occupied, making 600 prisoners and taking machine guns. On the same day we won a decisive victory over the Austrians along the whole front from Kielce to Sandomierz. The enemy fell back with all speed. Our troops took Sandomierz, which is an important strategical point.

In the region south of Kielce during the past week we have made prisoners of 200 officers and 15,000 soldiers, and have taken a large number of cannon as well as machine guns. During the night of Nov. 3 the Austrians made a series of attacks which were fiery but futile, and they retreated. Our troops took a firm footing in the region of Nisko and Rudnik.

There is nothing to report from the rest of the front.

BERLIN, via London, Nov. 4.—An Austrian report received here says the Austrians, having maintained their positions on the Lysagora, Southern Poland, on which the Allies had pivoted to enable the rest of their army to complete a sweeping half-wheel movement to a new line, are now retiring.

No information concerning this new position is published here.

MANCHESTER, Mass., Nov. 4.—The following official dispatch, which was received by wireless from Count Berchtold, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, was made public here tonight by the Ambassador from Austria-Hungary:

The situation in Galicia is unaltered. Until now 2,500 Russian prisoners have been brought in from recent engagements. Our hussars yesterday surprised a Russian ammunition column at Ryblik, in Stryi Valley, and captured many wagonloads of artillery ammunition.

VENICE, Nov. 4.—A significant report has reached Vienna from Cracow, capital of Galicia. It is to the effect that the military authorities in Cracow have forbidden the further return of refugees and also have warned the civil population to keep far away from the fortifications.

PICK OFF RUSSIAN OFFICERS.

German Soldiers Then Have to Stand Revengeful Bayonet Charges.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 4, (Dispatch to The London Standard.)—Russian military correspondents from the front relate that the Germans avoid hand-to-hand encounters as much as possible, just as they do when fighting the English and French troops. At the opening of each battle they endeavor to pick off the officers, hoping by these tactics to cause disorganization in the rank and file. Officers are watched from branches of trees and instructions are given to men below how to direct their fire, often with deadly effect.

In efforts to save their officers, Russian soldiers perform many acts of heroism. In fact, one of the brightest aspects of the war is the hearty relations existing between the man and their leaders. After this specializing on officers the Germans have to suffer bayonet charges which they cannot withstand, though they shout hurrahs on their return assaults and still shout even when run through. In general, however, their nerves will not bear the shock and they much prefer to shoot from a distance.

Soldiers say the Germans treat the Cossacks in a most shameful manner, wreaking on them the utmost vengeance. One soldier said:

"In the village of Svenka, near Augustowo, we found the charred remains of a Cossack officer who had been drenched with petroleum and burnt alive. Prisoners also are horribly mutilated. You may imagine how all this embitters our men."

It is said the Russian wounded soldiers bear their sufferings without complaint. In the hospitals one sees awful injuries, but seldom hears a groan or a cry, though the surgeons frequently have to carry out serious major operations without anaesthetics. Pain is borne with astonishing fortitude as though it were a trifle and the mood of the men is really heroic.

A soldier was being carried from a hospital after undergoing a severe operation, his case being urgent. Suddenly he stopped the attendants and demanded his cap, which had been left behind. An onlooker said:

"The whole time I did not hear a single complaint. On the contrary, the warmest gratitude is shown for the least attention given."

AUSTRIA'S HEAVY LOSSES.

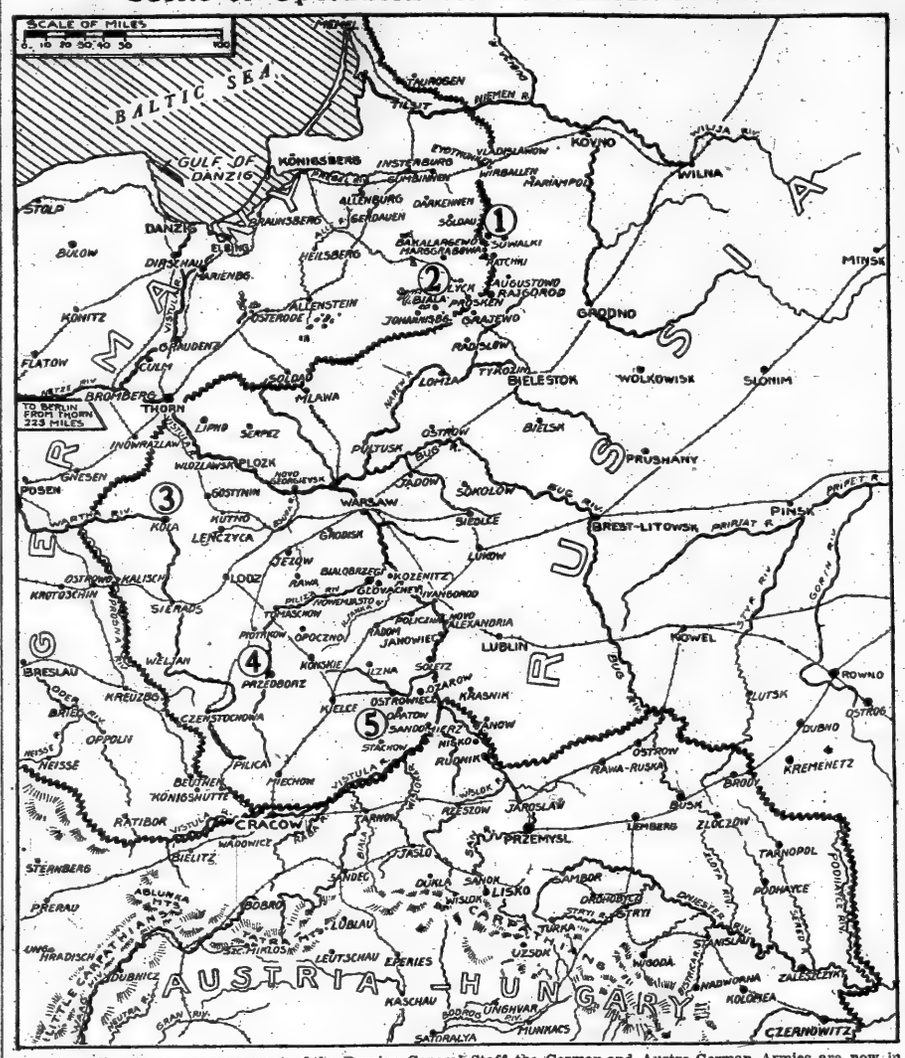
Vast Numbers of Wounded Continue to Arrive in Vienna.

VENICE, Nov. 4.—The Vienna Neue Freie Presse publishes the following statement from its correspondent at the Austrian Army Headquarters:

"Our losses are now much lessened in fixed battles and storming assaults. Attacks made between Aug. 12 and Sept. 12 required much greater sacrifices than has the fighting since then, the latter engagements having been fought from protected positions."

Vast numbers of wounded soldiers are now arriving in Vienna daily from the front, and if the early losses were much greater than the present they must have been tremendous.

Scene of Operations on the Russian Frontier



According to an announcement of the Russian General Staff the German and Austro-German Armies are now in retreat along the whole front.

In East Prussia, Barkowlarjewo (1) has been captured, and the left wing of the German defense on the southern frontier of East Prussia thrown back toward Biala and Lyck (2.)

In Poland the rear guard of the left wing of the German main army, which is reported in precipitate retreat to the frontier, has been driven from Kola (3) and the rear guard of the centre army, which is retreating to Czenstochowa, from Przedborz (4.)

The Austro-German Army covering a front from Kielce to Sandomierz (5) is said to have been hurled back after a decisive battle in the course of which 200 officers and 15,000 men were captured, together with many guns.

PRAISES TERRITORIALS AND INDIAN TROOPS

Sir John French Personally Congratulates His Men on Their Recent Fighting.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—An official account of the operations of the British force in Belgium, issued by the Press Bureau today, brings events up to last Monday, when the Allies were still maintaining their unbroken line and had been reinforced to meet the attacks which this day threatened them. The report follows:

"Violent attacks were made by the enemy Oct. 30 on the position occupied by the First Army Corps and the cavalry. Large reinforcements evidently had joined the enemy's line at this point. A very heavy loss was inflicted on the enemy, and the commander of the First Army Corps was confident of maintaining his ground, which he since has been able to do. The cavalry has fought, whether mounted or in trenches, to the admiration of the whole army. Indian troops have been brought into the fighting line, which had been proportionately strengthened.

"On the night of Oct. 30 a strong attack on Messines was beaten off. At one point the enemy, by dint of their masses, penetrated for a time into the line, but an excellent counter-attack drove them back with the bayonet. The attack on the left wing was so pronounced that the British line was substantially reinforced by troops from home, which were moved up. The French also brought into the line some of their reserves to support the threatened wing.

"The London Scottish, the first territorial regiment to take its place in the firing line, made a brilliant charge, and the officer in command of the regiment received the following telegram from Sir John French:

I wish you and your splendid regiment would accept my warmest congratulations and thanks for the fine work you did Saturday. You have given a glorious lead and example to all the territorial corps fighting in France.

"On Nov. 1 our troops were attacked all along the line, but the enemy everywhere was repulsed and suffered very heavy loss. Our howitzers demolished two of the enemy's eight-inch guns, and every account shows that prodigious slaughter has been occasioned by our artillery.

"The maintenance of an unbroken line and the repulse of repeated assaults, which has caused in some cases the loss of entire columns and has greatly discouraged the German troops, has naturally entailed losses on the defending force.

"The position of the Allies has been strengthened and reinforcements of every description have been sent to meet the attacks now threatened."

AMERICANS TO AID ALLIES.

War Office Takes Over New Machine Gun Battery.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—A few weeks ago an Anglo-American Brigade, which was composed entirely of Americans and financed by them, was disbanded. Its 260-odd members, however, did not return to the United States. They still will be able to fight for the cause of the Allies, but they will fight under the name of the First London Machine Battery, which has just been taken over by the War Office.

It was rumored that the dropping of the name Anglo-American Brigade followed a request of the American Ambassador, who also suggested that those subscribing to the fund refrain from making their donations public. While the corps was still known as the Anglo-American Brigade an officer said:

"We are getting along swimmingly, but what we want is a private."

Such is not said to be the trouble now. In the ranks of the First London Machine Battery are many wealthy Americans, including an Annapolis graduate.

DUKE'S SON IN LATEST BRITISH CASUALTY LIST

Capt. Lord Richard Wellesley, Great-Grandson of Wellington, Killed.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—A casualty list which was issued tonight under date of Oct. 30 contains the names of twenty officers killed and forty-five wounded.

Among those who met death at the front were Capt. Lord Richard Wellesley, second son of the Duke of Wellington, of the Grenadier Guards; Lieut. Col. H. L. Anderson of the Ninth Bhopal Infantry, and two native Indian officers.

Among the wounded are Lieut. Col. Maxwell Earle of the Grenadier Guards, a member of the General Staff of the War Office; Lieut. Col. F. W. B. Gray of the Fifty-seventh Wilde's Rifles; Capt. the Hon. C. M. B. Ponsonby of the Grenadier Guards, second son of the Earl of Bessborough; Lieut. Col. L. J. Wood of the Border Regiment, Second Lieut. the Hon. R. G. Winn of the Coldstream Guards, eldest son and heir of Lord St. Oswald.

Lord Richard Wellesley, great-grandson of the Iron Duke, served as Captain in the Grenadier Guards in South Africa in 1900. He was born in 1879, and married, in 1908, Pamela Fitz Gerald, eldest daughter of Sir Maurice Fitz Gerald, former Equerry to the Duke of Connaught, and well-known as a yachtsman and horseman.

When the war broke out Col. Earle was a Major in the Grenadier Guards and attached to the General Staff of the War Office. He was born in 1871, and in 1900 married the Hon. Edith Loch, daughter of the first Baron Loch. He was educated at Marlborough, and entered the army in 1891. He served in the Matabele war in 1893, receiving a medal, and in the South African war, 1899-1900, when he was mentioned in dispatches and received the Queen's medal with two clasps. He also has the third class Order of the Red Eagle of Prussia and the silver medal of the Society for Saving Life from Fire. He is a well-known member of the Guards and the Travellers' Clubs.

Cyril Myles Brabazon Ponsonby was born in 1881, and married Rita Longfield, eldest daughter of Col. Longfield, in 1911. He was educated at Harrow and Sandhurst, and served in South Africa with the Guards' Mounted Infantry, where he received the South African War Medal.

MORE NEWS; MORE RECRUITS

London Papers Urge Less Rigid Censorship to Arouse Sentiment.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—Most of the London papers this morning publish editorial articles urging the necessity of quickening recruiting. The times believes a less rigid censorship would have a valuable effect in this direction and The Daily Mail, taking same view, says:

"More men must be forthcoming. They can only be obtained in two ways: either the Government must permit the people to know about the war and appeal to their sentiment and their imagination or a very speedy resort to compulsory service will become inevitable."

HINDENBURG CONFIDENT.

German General Says War Will Last Till Allies Are Subjugated.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 4, (Dispatch to The London Standard.)—Although Germany has suffered during the last few days a considerable setback on the eastern and western fronts, the German Generals have not lost an atom of their pride.

Lieut. Gen. Hindenburg, the hero of the retreat of the German Army from Suwalki, the Russian military centre on the East Prussian frontier, said, in answer to a question as to how long the war, in his opinion, would last:

"The war will not end until all the nations who are fighting against us have become subordinate to our rules and desires."

Austria's Parade of "Prisoners."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 4, (Dispatch to The London Standard.)—In order to keep up the spirits of the people the Austrians pack trains with their own soldiers dressed in Russian uniforms, thus gaining easy credit for thousands of Russian prisoners en route for internment or servitude.

GERMANS SOUGHT TO DECOY SHIPS

Leipsic, and Bremen, over the British squadron made up of the cruisers Monmouth, Good Hope, and Glasgow and the transport Otranto, commanded by Rear Admiral Cradock, continues the sensation of the hour here.

That the Germans were able to sink or scatter the British squadron, with only minor damage to their own ships and a casualty list of only two wounded, is a subject of wonder.

The Monmouth is known to have been lost with practically all of her crew; the Good Hope was severely damaged and on fire when she escaped under cover of darkness, and as nothing has been heard from her since the battle it is believed that she went to the bottom. The Glasgow and the Otranto took refuge in a Chilean port.

The Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, and Nürnberg were still in the harbor early today, coaling and provisioning, in preparation for steaming away later in the day. It is supposed they will relieve the cruisers Leipsic and Bremen, which have the Glasgow and Otranto bottled up in the port of Talcahuano, eight miles northwest of Concepcion. It would seem like madness for these British ships to leave this haven of refuge, and it is likely that they will be dismantled and interned unless a superior British and Japanese fleet should make its appearance and go to their relief.

A collier which arrived here today reports having seen eight Japanese warships at Easter Island in the Pacific, about 2,300 miles west of the Chilean coast. Easter Island belongs to Chile.

Admiral von Spee, the German commander, in his official report of the battle, which took place late Sunday afternoon off the Chilean island of St. Maria, says the action lasted only an hour, being discontinued at nightfall, when the British were forced to give way.

"The Good Hope," he says, "was then so badly damaged that she was unable to resist, and could only make her escape protected by the darkness.

"The Monmouth, under identical conditions, tried to escape, but was followed by a small cruiser and was sunk with a few shots. Owing to the hurricane that was blowing, no boats could be lowered, and consequently there was a terrible loss of life."

The German Admiral, in noting the escape of the Glasgow and the Otranto, says it was due to their speed and the darkness.

Details of the fight, picked up from informal conversations with German officers who came ashore from the warships, show that the Germans, owing to the superior range of the guns on the armored cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, opened fire when six miles away. As the ships closed, and the range came down to a distance of four miles, the British ships were able to reply, but by that time they were already seriously damaged. The Germans say the British fought heroically, but that their artillery was ineffective against the superior weight of metal that the Germans were able to pour from the more modern guns of the armored cruisers. It is said, however, that the light German cruisers pluckily closed in on the British and took part in the battle. One of them, it appears from the official report, gave the Monmouth her death blow as, crippled and in flames, she tried to escape.

No Word of British Ships.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 4.—No word came today from the British ships that engaged the German squadron off Coronel, Sunday, and the British side of the story is yet to be told.

According to German accounts, their armored cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and the light cruisers Nürnberg, Leipsic, and Bremen escaped unscathed, while the British cruiser Monmouth was sunk, the cruiser Good Hope put out of action, and the cruiser Glasgow, with the transport Otranto, sent scurrying for shelter in the neutral port of Talcahuano, where they are bottled up by the Leipsic and Bremen.

It is certain that the Scharnhorst, the Gneisenau, and the Nürnberg arrived safely at Valparaiso, though somewhat the worse for their encounter.

One report has it that the Glasgow, badly damaged, arrived in Coronel Bay, while the Otranto escaped to Puerto Montt. It has been impossible to determine the exact movements of these two vessels following the naval action.

Despite the fact that the British had only three fighting ships as against five of the Germans, the decisive defeat of Rear Admiral Cradock's squadron appears to have produced a profound impression. The battle took place in a heavy sea. The Germans opened fire at ten kilometers, and for a time all the British shots fell short. Later, when they got within range, their guns scored a few, but only a few, hits, and the casualties among the German crews were said to consist of some half dozen wounded. The German fire is described as having been excellent, though at the long range it required 400 hits to put the British out of the fight.

The Scharnhorst and Gneisenau came from Australia, calling on Oct. 14 at Easter Island, where they took on large quantities of provisions. British mail steamers in Chilean waters are sailing under the protection of Chilean torpedo boat destroyers.

GERMAN FLEET IN BALTIC.

Warships Gather Off Aland Islands, Northeast of Stockholm.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 4, (via London.)—A fleet of German warships has gathered off the Aland Islands in the Baltic Sea, northeast of Stockholm and opposite the entrance to the Gulf of Finland.

They evidently were proceeding north and stopped to await orders.

The reported presence of German battleships off the Aland Islands tends to confirm a report received last night in London from Dunkirk, that four German battleships and four cruisers had put to sea from Kiel, the terminus of the Kiel Canal on the Baltic side. When these vessels were supposed to have left Kiel was not announced.

Dover reported last night that the German fleet was supposed to have come out from its base. This statement probably referred to the German fleet in the North Sea.

GERMANS WON BY STRATEGY.

Expert Thinks the Good Hope Was Badly Handled in Fight.

The following review of recent naval actions in the European conflict was prepared for The Associated Press by an expert:

The defeat of the British fleet off the Chilean Coast seems to have infused new life into the German Navy, so much so that a squadron is reported to have left the base under the guns of Kiel and ventured as far as the English Coast. The German fleet has appeared off the Aland Islands in the Baltic Sea, where four of her battleships and four cruisers, accompanied by their flotilla of destroyers were reported yesterday.

Details of the great German victory in the Pacific seems to indicate that it was due more to strategical than numerical superiority. Although the advantage in numbers may have been on the side of the Germans there was little or no difference between the total displacement and weight of metal in their broadsides. Why the British flagship, which was 3,000 tons greater than the largest of the German vessels and carried two 9.2-inch guns in her main battery, should have allowed the Germans, with guns of no greater calibre than 8.2 to virtually put her out of action before she even got their range, is yet to be explained.

Good Hope's Fire Delayed.

Other factors being equal, the 9.2-inch gun has a range of at least one mile more than that of the 8.2-inch—a mile in distance for every inch in calibre being the theoretical range of modern weapons. Yet the official report by the German Admiral says that he began the engagement at 9,000 meters, about six miles, while the Good Hope, whose guns should have been effective at nine miles, did not go into action until the distance had been decreased to four miles. By this time she was practically disabled and on fire, and was forced to retreat under the cover of darkness.

The fate of the Monmouth, which was sunk in thirty minutes, might be more easily explained, as she had no gun in her main battery of a calibre greater than six inches—yet it is said that she received her death blow from a four-gun on board one of the light German cruisers that were pursuing her as she attempted to escape. The Good Hope was a sister ship of the Drake and one of the most powerful of modern armored cruisers, and being in fact a battle cruiser, both in armor and battery, should at least have been able to dispose of one of the light German cruisers.

The engagement, which was fought in a gale of wind, the very condition in which the traditional British seaman revels, was also one of which the German seems to have taken advantage.

Von Spee's Big Job.

More than the defeat of the British fleet was the marvelous resourcefulness of Admiral von Spee in assembling his vessels and having them in a state of preparedness to meet the British fleet, which had been instructed to search the seas for each individual German vessel. All these had been separated by many thousand miles when the news was flashed to the German Admiral that Sir Christopher Cradock had steamed through the Straits of Magellan in search of his vessels.

At the outbreak of the war the German ships had been scattered all over the Pacific. The Gneisenau and Scharnhorst had shelled Johite on Sept. 22, the Leipzig was in the neighborhood of San Francisco, and the Dresden was in West Indian waters, so within thirty days Spee succeeded in concentrating and having them ready to give battle to the enemy.

REPORTS KAISER MUCH OLDER IN APPEARANCE

One Who Saw Him Speaks of His Subdued Manner and Gray Hair.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 4, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—The Kaiser has lost his former air of bustling activity and soldierly bearing and is subdued. My informant, who personally saw the Emperor, described him as grown much older in appearance. His countenance is grave and careworn. The most striking change commonly remarked is that his hair is almost white.

The Vossische Zeitung prints the latest utterances of the Kaiser to his troops. A chaplain, after a service in camp in the western battlefield, had an audience with the Kaiser, who asked that the following message be delivered to the soldiers:

"Salute my gallant comrades remaining at the front. Tell them to put their faith in God, who will soon give victory to our arms."

I learn that the Kaiserin has been visiting military hospitals in various parts of Germany. A few days ago she visited the wounded in the Social Democratic Club at Königsberg, which is being used as a hospital. Replying there to birthday congratulations sent by the Berlin municipality, the Empress spoke of the "high moral forces that God has placed in our beloved people, making it possible for them to bear unprecedented sacrifices in the certain confidence of ultimate victory."

THE WAR SITUATION.

(An Associate Editor of The Army and Navy Journal.)

Two developments in the fighting in Belgium will have an influence on the operations of the next few days. One is the withdrawel of the Germans from the Yser River. The addition of these troops to the German forces, further to the south, should result in added vigor for the attacks, with which they are endeavoring to break down the British resistance at Ypres.

The mention in the official dispatches of the London Scottish territorial regiment is particularly significant. If one territorial regiment has been sent to the continent, the rest must soon be ready to follow. Great Britain's territorial army at the outbreak of the war consisted of 315,000 men. Large numbers of them were sent to outlying possessions, such as Bermuda, Gibraltar, and Suez, to take the places of regular garrisons that were thus made available for the fighting force in France. The addition to the British Armies in Continent of territorial regiments which were not needed for the above duty will give a valuable increase in the strength of their fighting force.

The total British regular army amounted to 480,000 men, of whom 120,000 were stationed in various parts of the world at the outbreak of the war. After making allowances for losses to date and the small detachments retained in the various garrisons, Great Britain must have about 300,000 regulars in her armies in France. If the territorials can now be sent to the front, it will mean a reinforcement of at least 150,000 men for the British field army.

This addition to the fighting strength of the Allies would now come at a particularly opportune moment, in view of the reported arrival of large reinforcements on the German side. All signs point to an early increase in the activity of the fighting in France.

On the East Prussian border the Germans have given up their hold on Russian territory in spite of the vigorous efforts which they have made during the last two weeks to maintain this advanced position. Their retreat toward Lyck and Bialla carries the fighting once more on to German soil. This retreat seems to be more hurried than called for by the activity, so far reported of the Russian troops in this part of the field. It seems probable that the Germans have adopted a defensive line of operations on this front and that they are falling back to their strongly defended line in the vicinity of Lyck.

The news from Poland also shows a precipitate retreat on the part of the Germans. When driven out of Lodz, they retreated to the line of the Warta River, which here flows north and south and forms an excellent line of defense. The Russians followed close behind their retreating columns, and now say they have captured the important defensive point of Kola, where the main highway from Warsaw to Posen crosses the Warta.

The Russian successes against the Austro-German forces have continued all along the line in Poland, and on Tuesday had forced them south of Kielce and Przedborz, on the Pilica River, forty miles to the west. This retreat of the Austrian forces in Poland is now beginning to endanger the northern part of their line along the San River in Galicia, which must also begin to retreat soon unless they are able to forward strong reinforcements to stiffen the resistance of their line near Sandomierz.

The line-up of the opposing armies from Kielce through Przemysl to Turka is now very similar to that from Krasnik through Tomaszow and Lemberg to Halicz in the first weeks of September. The Russians than broke through the Austrian line in the victories of Tomaszow and Rawa Ruska and forced an Austrian retreat under conditions that largely destroyed the fighting value of their armies.

The Russians are now making a similar strategic move against the Austrian forces south of Kielce. If they succeed in this attempt their armies will be 70 miles closer to Cracow than are the Austrians on the San. Such a move might be disastrous for the Austrian forces now opposing the Russians in Galicia.

The influence of this campaign in Russia and Galicia extends further than the immediate success in this theatre. The rapid retirement of the Germans indicates that they may be sacrificing the campaign on their eastern border to gather in all possible force for a last extreme effort to strike a decisive blow against the Allies in France. If such be the case the effect of the shift of troops should soon be apparent in the operations in France.

If the Russians should stop to recuperate after their arduous campaigning of the last three weeks, the Germans might have a chance to carry out to good effect this shift of strength, which has generally been admitted to be an important part of their military plan. But the Russians have shown no signs of such action. They have followed close behind the Germans in their retreat and any large weakening in the German forces in the east can hardly fail to result in further Russian victories. Germany has the interior position and can make use of it to some extent for striking blows first in one direction and then in the other.

The defense of the Allies against such a conduct of the war by the Austro-German military staff will lie in such a vigorous pressing of the campaign in every field that the Austro-Germans will be unable to weaken their forces in any part of the war zone without subjecting their troops to the danger of defeat.

Whatever the plan under which the Austro-German forces are operating in the east, it is probable that reports from Galicia will soon tell of a rapid retreat of the Austrian armies from the San River. The Russian capture of Kielce leaves the Austrian line from Prezmysl to the Vistula so far in advance of the line at Kielce that it can be retained only at a risk hardly commensurate with the advantages.

GERMANS DISCUSSING ANTI-BRITISH REPRISALS

Protest Against Concentration and Prison Camps—Want Us to Investigate Them.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The Daily News in an article on Germany's intention to make reprisals against English subjects in Germany because of the alleged harsh treatment of German prisoners in England, quotes the following from an announcement by the Home Office of the Kingdom of Saxony:

"In letters of English and American clergy in Dresden special gratitude has been expressed for the fact that we have not introduced concentration camps. In England other views appear to be held of the suitability and admissability of such camps, and the German public is justly indignant at the thought that peaceable Germans who have had the misfortune to be detained in England are obliged to submit to such treatment in a constantly increasing ratio.

"If the German authorities have hitherto acted otherwise this was in no way due to weakness or fear of England. Conscience and self-respect forbade us to cause unnecessary pain to peaceable citizens even of enemy States; but German officials can change their attitude if it now becomes necessary to make reprisals and to teach English subjects now living at liberty—especially Englishwomen, whose attitude is often impudent and challenging—by personal experience how far concentration camps on the English plan fulfilled the requirements of humanity."

Wants Us to Inspect Camps.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The following semi-official statement from Berlin was received by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company:

"The United States would accomplish one of the most important functions which is within the power of a neutral nation if it would take steps to appoint a commission for the purpose of investigating the treatment of German prisoners in Russia and Servia, and particularly in France and England, as well as in the colonies of those countries.

"Our attention has been drawn to certain well-managed prison camps, but many places where the Germans are interned are not fit for human beings to live in. The forts at Troyon, Brest, and Clermont in France and the stables and tents at Newbury, England, are examples of the disgraceful conditions under which prisoners exist. In the colonies it must be even worse. The commission should examine not only what is shown to them, but find out what happened before they began their investigation. They should visit all the prisoners in the camps and State prisons."

May Imitate England's Action.

BERLIN, Nov. 4, by Wireless to Sayville, L. I.—Great Britain's denunciation of the principles of the Declaration of London, according to an announcement made in German official circles today, will probably be followed by that of Germany.

An inspired dispatch from Berlin, published in The Cologne Gazette, commenting on this subject, says the newspaper reports of England's action have not been confirmed officially, but that if they are true Germany will adopt a similar policy toward England.

The German press generally refrains from commenting on the various British measures for closing the North Sea and with regard to her reported difficulties with neutral nations on the question of contraband, briefly pointing out that a closure like the laying of a mine field in the English Channel seems to be inspired more by a desire to interfere with non-contraband commerce seeking the neutral nations contiguous to Germany than by purely military objects.

ALARMED OVER BULGARIA.

Austrian Military Organ Fears Reconciliation with Servia.

VENICE, Oct. 4.—The Reichspost, the Austrian military organ in Vienna, betrays alarm over what it says is an attempt by Russia to bring about a reconciliation between Bulgaria and Servia.

This paper's Sofia correspondent sends a dispatch saying that a political agent of the Russian Emperor recently went to Nish, Servia, where he had long conferences with the Crown Prince and the President of the Council. The Russian Minister to Servia also was present at these meetings. The correspondent says that several important questions regarding Rumania, Servia, and Bulgaria were discussed.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—An Amsterdam dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company says:

"A Berlin telegram states that railway communication between Servia and Bulgaria has been broken."

PARIS, Nov. 4.—A dispatch received here says that the Bulgarian Government has stopped marine movements in all Bulgarian ports.

ANNOUNCES A CURE FOR WAR TETANUS

Dr. Doyen Says It Will Save 80 Per Cent. of Developed Cases.

SUCCESSFUL TESTS MADE

Treatment Consists of Injections of Serum—Patient's Posture an Important Factor.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—One of the most striking features of the present war has been the extraordinary prevalence of tetanus among the wounded. Every hospital laments the deadliness of the disease, against which medical science has hitherto been powerless. Dr. Delorme, chief of the French Sanitary Service, confesses the impossibility of curing a developed case in a report on the treatment of the wounded made to the Academy of Medicine. He says:

"Ninety-five per cent. of the cases are fatal. I can only suggest palliatives."

Dr. Joseph A. Blake, of the American Ambulance, said recently that tetanus was the most serious problem confronting physicians in this war, and that he considered immediate preventive inoculation with anti-tetanic serum of all the wounded on the battlefield the only method of combatting the scourge. Such injections, however, fail to cure developed cases. It is alleged that 4,000 deaths—the majority most agonizing—have already been reported, with less than a score of cures.

Dr. Doyen Describes His Cure.

The well-known surgeon, Dr. Doyen, today announced the discovery of a cure, and gave me the particulars:

"I early realized the seriousness of tetanus. I have been studying the subject since Sept. 10. I was set on the right track by reports of a successful treatment discovered by a physician in the Ardennes district, where tetanus was very prevalent in 1909, which consisted in anti-tetanic injections into the spinal column and the keeping of the patient in a sloping position, with the head below the level of the loins. Herein lies the secret of the tetanus cure. Under my direction Dr. Brisset at St. Lo treated ten developed cases, and Dr. Lemonnier at Granville fourteen, with only three deaths, two at Granville and the other at St. Lo, where the case was hopeless from the start, the man having been literally shot to pieces. These figures—above 80 per cent. of cures—speak for themselves, being less than the previous percentage of deaths.

Injections of Serum.

"The treatment consists, first, of an injection of sixty cubic centimeters of serum in the region of the loins; then the patient is inclined, head downwards, at an angle of forty-five degrees, so that the serum may pass into the vertebral region and brain. If the case is obstinate I repeat the injection, administering forty centimeters at intervals of forty-eight hours.

"Besides the injections, heavy doses of chloral—twelve to fifteen grammes daily—are administered by the mouth, while the wound is treated locally with strong antiseptics.

"I have embodied the details of cases and treatment in a report for the French Medical Society. I hope the method will be adopted officially without delay."

MINES HELD THE OLYMPIC.

Sea Had to be Swept Before She Could Proceed to Belfast.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—Passengers from the Olympic, arriving in London via Belfast and Holyhead today, say there is no mystery in the detention of the big White Star liner at Lough Swilly. They were forced to put into the Irish port, where they remained more than four days because of a wireless warning from the Admiralty directing them to beware of German mine fields in that region. The Captain of the Olympic informed the passengers it was necessary to wait patiently until trawlers finished the work of sweeping the mines out of the way, after which the ship proceeded to Belfast.

Through Irish newspapers carried on board at Lough Swilly the passengers learned of the close proximity of the peril as the result of which the Manchester Commerce, a freighter, had been sunk just before the Olympic reached the danger zone.

Wallace McCutcheon, a professional tango dancer, who has come here to go to the front as an automobile driver with the British troops, said he saw the Britannic in Belfast Harbor being fitted out as a hospital ship. She will be ready for use soon. Mr. McCutcheon and his shipmates were astonished at being met by dozens of reporters, and said he couldn't understand why there had been so many rumors about the Olympic.

Progressives Dropped Eight Representatives — Republicans Now Have 200 Out of 435.

The Democratic Party retains control of both branches of Congress as a result of Tuesday's elections. In the Senate the present Democratic majority of 10 will not be changed. In the House the present Democratic majority of 141 is reduced to 19.

The present Senate stands 53 Democrats, 42 Republicans, and 1 Progressive. The Democrats apparently lose the veteran Newlands of Nevada, whose place will be taken by a Republican. On the face of the returns from that State Lawrence Y. Sherman, the sitting Republican Senator, has defeated Roger C. Sullivan, Democrat, by a margin of about 6,000.

Although Oregon went Republican in the elections to the House of Representatives it has returned Senator Chamberlain, Democrat, for another term of six years.

J. D. Phelan, former Mayor of San Francisco, Democrat, is in the lead for the Senate from his State, and if elected he will replace Perkins, a Republican. Reed Smoot, Republican, of Utah, one of his party's leaders in the Senate, is re-elected by a narrow margin. In Kansas former Representative Charles Curtis, Republican, probably will succeed Bristow, Republican, whom he defeated in the primaries. One of his opponents in the three-cornered race for the Senate was Victor Murdock, the Progressive Party leader in the House of Representatives.

In the State of Washington, Jones, Republican, the sitting Senator, seems to have won. Gallinger of New Hampshire, the Republican leader in the Senate, has been re-elected, although he had a hard fight to win. Dillingham of Vermont, another veteran Republican Senator, has re-elected over Judge Prouty, former Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, who was backed by the Progressives and the Democrats.

Representative Burke of South Dakota, Republican candidate for Senator, concedes his defeat by F. M. Tawney, Democrat. This was one of the surprises of the election.

In the elections two years ago the Democrats came into control of the House of Representatives with a majority of 147. Through resignations and other causes, and a Republican victory in a Democratic district, this majority was reduced to 141, the present figure.

The House of Representatives in the Sixty-third, or present Congress, which will expire by constitutional limitation on March 4, 1915, is composed of 268 Democrats, 129 Republicans, and 13 Progressives. As a result of Tuesday's elections the Democrats will lose 58 seats, while the Progressive will lose 8. In the Sixty-fourth Congress the Democrats will number 227, the Republicans 200, and the Progressives 7.

One Socialist in New Congress.

The fourth political party represented in the House will be the Socialist Party. In the Twelfth New York District, Meyer London, a Socialist, defeated Henry M. Goldfogle, who is serving his seventh term in Congress as a Tammany Democrat. Two Socialists who ran for Congress in the Milwaukee districts gave their opponents a spirited race, but late returns last night show that both were defeated. One of them is Victor Berger, the only Socialist ever elected to the national Legislature prior to Tuesday. He served one term and was defeated for re-election.

Ex-Speaker Cannon and William B. McKinley, former Chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee and the manager of William H. Taft's campaign for the Republican Presidential nomination in 1912, were returned from the districts in Illinois, which they represented for many years. They were defeated two years ago. W. A. Rodenburg, another of the veteran Republican Congressmen from Illinois, who went under in the Democratic landslide of 1912, was successful also in his old Congressional district.

Nicholas Longworth, ex-President Roosevelt's son-in-law, was elected as a Republican from a Cincinnati district in spite of Democratic and Progressive opposition. Two years ago he was defeated for re-election to Congress by Stanley Bowdle, Democrat, upon whom Longworth turned the tables Tuesday.

One of the Progressives elected is Walter M. Chandler, who is serving a term in the House from the Nineteenth New York District.

Another Progressive re-elected is William Kent of California, who calls himself an Independent.

There was a complete political switchabout in New York State as far as the House of Representatives was concerned. In the present House New York's representation is 31 Democrats, 11 Republicans, and 1 Progressive. The outcome of Tuesday's elections will send 19 Democrats, 22 Republicans, and 1 Progressive.

SIXTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.
